Medical examiner Dr. Louis I. Mason after a preliminary investigation gave permission for the removal of the body to Killourey Brothers funeral parlors. Coroner Arthur G. Bill, of Danielson, who was attending the short calendar session of the Windham county superior court in this city, was informed of the fatality, and he conducted a preliminary examination. He stated that no inquest would be held this week nor until the local police authorities had completed their investigation.

The police are baffled by the tragedy, the theory being advanced from some angles and by relatives and friends of the man that he had been murdered. Medical Examiner Mason has not officially arrived at a decision and would not venture to state whether he believed it a case of suicide or murder. He did state, however, that he believed it almost impossible for another to have caused a wound of the nature that resulted in Distefano's death. The course of the bullets indicated that the man had placed the muzzle of the gun to his throat and fired. The result of Coroner Bill's inquest is being awaited before a decision is made known.

Friends and relatives could advance no motive for the shooting, whether it be suicide or murder, although they were more inclined to believe that Distefano had not taken his own life. The motive of the sudden disappearance last Friday could not be explained. When he could not be located last Monday it was their belief that he had been kidnapped for some reason. Sabatino Distefano of Norwich, brother of the dead man said that as far as he knew his brother had no enemies, but he maintained that he had met with foul play.

Distefano was well-liked in the community among the Italian people. He was born in Italy, a son of Rosario and Marguerite Summastero Distefano and came to this country fifteen years ago, locating in this city. He leaves two brothers, Sabatino of Norwich and Francesco of Italy; and three sisters, Anna Maria and Grazio Distefano of Argentina. He had been making his home here with Tony Lamandia of 74 Meadow street and had been employed in Hartford for about four months.

Two weeks ago he gave up work there to prepare for his wedding. He had purchased furniture and had completely furbished a home on Temple street which he and his bride were to occupy. Every detail of the wedding had been arranged and he appeared happy when last seen at the shower.

The police are working on several theories in an effort to solve the mystery.

In Distefano's possession when his body was found were a bank book with an account of about $400 and a gold watch which is evidence that he was not murdered for his valuables.

HOTEL HOOKER PROPERTY FORECLOSURE HEARING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 6—The case of the Manchester Savings Bank of Manchester, N. H., vs. Anna Mohr, et al, a hearing on foreclosure and limitation of time for the redemption of the property in question, the Hotel Hooker, which has figured in litigation for several years, was the principal case heard at the short calendar session of Windham county superior court, held in this city Friday with Judge Dickenson on the bench. Judgment was awarded in favor of the bank which now holds both first and second mortgages on the property to the amount of $82,033.33. Thirty days was allowed for redemption of the property. In case this is not done the right and title to the Hotel Hooker will immediately revert to the bank. State Senator George E. Hazelton of Manchester, appeared as attorney for the institution.

Attorney Hazleton reviewed the transactions involving the property which came into the possession of the chief defendant, Anna Mohr of Rochester, N. Y., in 1918. The title came from the then owners of the hotel, the Pillsbury family of Londonderry, N. H. At that time there was a first mortgage of $25,000 placed on the property, which was held by the Willimantic Savings Institute of this city. A second mortgage of $27,033.33 was later placed and taken up by the Manchester bank.

Mrs. Mohr leased the hotel to Frank J. Watson of Chicago. He conducted it for a time and then exchanged the property with Martin L. Tressler from the west. Ligitation followed this the west. Litigation followed this transaction, with the result that the reputation of the hotel suffered.

Matters became worse. The proprietors failed to pay taxes, water rents, upkeep, etc., and the property began to run down. During those years only $300 interest on the mortgages had been paid by the recent proprietors and the bank desired immediate disposition of the case by the court. Attorney William A. King, for the plaintiff, related the history of the hotel and asked for immediate action in the matter of foreclosure.

None of the defendants were in court and they were not represented by counsel. Witnesses who were heard in the case were Charles L. Crane, contractor, who stated that a fair valuation of the hotel in its present condition would be $65,000. Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton stated that the property was assessed for $45,000, about two-thirds of the real valuation. Judge Dickenson then set the redemption period to the first Monday in December.

When the contracting parties unite in their efforts to make marriage a success, it is seldom a failure.

Resinol will soothe that itching skin

The first application of Resinol usually takes the itch and burn right out of eczema and similar skin-affections. This gentle, healing ointment seems to get right at the root of the trouble, restoring the skin to health in a surprisingly short time. Resinol is sold by all druggists.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards', determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 35c and 60c.

WAS NOT FIT TO DO HER WORK

Dreadful Condition of Mrs. Fullerton's Health Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Clearfield, Pa.—"I cannot begin to tell you how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. Before taking it I couldn't stand on my feet without pains running all through my whole body from my waist down, just like threads pulling. I was not fit to do any work. My mother got me to try the Vegetable Compound and I have found great benefit, and I not only recommend it for such troubles, but to build up the whole system. I have used it for most everything that gets wrong with me. When I begin to feel nervous and irritable I don't stop long in getting a bottle of the Vegetable Compound if I haven't got one in the house. It gives a fine appetite and makes a new woman of me. You may use this testimonial in my own town or anywhere else, and I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs RUSH FULLERTON, 525 S. 2nd Street, Clearfield, Pa.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

There are 1961 children of school age in the town of Killingly, the enumeration now completed for 1925 shows. This is an increase of 34 over the figures for last year and the bulk of the increase is credited to Dayville and Goodyear. Danielson, incidentally, shows a shrinkage in enumeration from 931 in 1924 to 893 in 1925. It is difficult to account for this in view of the fact that the enrollment in Danielson's schools are larger than last year.

By districts the enumeration figures for the year are: Danielson, 893; Center, 119; Mashentuck, 21; Dayville, 219; Goodyear, 132; Attawaugan, 127; Ballouville, 103; Tucker, 15; East Killingly, 53; Valley, 30; Sparks, 14; South Killingly, 34; Horse Hill, 36. These figures include children between the ages of 4 and 16 years.

Using the usual basis of estimating the population of the town by multiplying the number of children enumerated, 4 to 16 years, by five, it is indicated that Killingly's present population is 9,810, a material increase over the general census figures for 1920.

In the enumeration figures for Killingly it is interesting to note that 26 children of school age are enumerated in the Horse Hill district. This is a sparsely settled district of the town, yet the farms over in that territory are the homes of a considerable number of children, more than was the case a few years ago.

Danielson and vicinity has been experiencing a minor epidemic of automobile crashes the latter part of this week. One such affair occurred at the junction of Water and Cottage streets, which vicinity also produced a collision between a motor truck and a trolley car. Another smash in which two cars figured occurred near the junction of Main and Reynolds streets late Friday night and drew a crowd. Excepting for damage to cars, nothing much serious came of all these mishaps.

Attawaugan had some excitement a bit out of the ordinary for that community about 8.30 Thursday evening when fire was discovered in the rear of meat and grocery store of Aldor Vendor. The store was closed at the time. The fire originated in the cellar and was beginning to make progress when discovered. The Attawaugan mills fire company responded to a call. The door was forced and the fire quickly extinguished. It was estimated that the damage will not be greatly in excess of $100.

A meeting of the members of the civic federation in the Health station at the Town hall building Friday perfected the Tag day effort to be made today. It is the intention of the federation to cover Danielson thoroughly and efficiently. Dollars given to this fund will be evidence of concern for the well being of one's fellowmen.

Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home on Hutchins street funeral services for Melvin E. Fisher were conducted by Rev. Roger C. Stimson of the Methodist Episcopal church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Comer A. Young, Abner S. Young, George E. Keech and George B. Guild. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The children of Charles Grimes, who is dead at his home in Pomfret Landing are Thomas, of Goodyear; Mrs. John Doyle and Mrs. Henry Dubue, of Danielson; Mrs. Charles Hanley, of Pomfret; Mrs. Gerald Ulrich, of Washington, D. C.; Arthur, who is in the South; Susan and Charles of Pomfret.

It is possible that a constantly growing number of persons have valuable things that they desire to put in safe-keeping or it may be, that more people are becoming cautious by constantly reading of holdups, robberies and other such affairs, but in any event there is a constant increase in the number of safe deposit boxes in banks in Danielson. More such boxes have been put in this week at the Danielson Trust company.

Because of the elaborate observance of Armistice day that has been arranged by Putnam this year, no general observance will be held in Danielson. The day will not pass unnoticed here, however, for there will be a general display of national color, activities on the departure of troops, and veterans for Putnam and other things to recall the end of fighting "over there" on Nov. 11, 1918.

Every mail brings one or more offers of a fortune to the average person, if he but act quickly. This time to a radio deal. The mails here Friday morning brought letters enclosed in plain colored envelopes. The communication enclosed was printed under a letterhead giving the name of a radio corporation. The enclosed stamped envelope bore a different address. Must be that guy has escaped from a Spanish prison and has made his way to New England.

No definite announcement had been made Friday afternoon as to the stores closing here at noon next Wednesday, Armistice day, but it is very probable this will be done. Henry Woisard and Bernard Casey were interviewing business men during the day as to making a half-holiday of Armistice day in Danielson and were finding the majority in favor of the arrangement.

Killingly has rather impressive assessments in the way of state and military taxes to pay to the state treasurer on or before Nov. 10. The state tax for this town amounts to $5,122.62, while the military taxes is assessed at $2,037.54.

Major E. L. Darbie of this town will be at the head of the military division of the big parade to be held at Putnam on Armistice day. Danielson will be represented by the Service battery, Capain F. O. Armington commanding, his outfit including the 193d field artillery band, by Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, and by many citizens who will march as members of Putnam lodge of Elks. The parade is scheduled to start at 1.45.

A large closed car driven by A. J. Arrigan plunged through a fence on Upper Reynolds street Friday morning after skidding on the wet and slippery highway surface. Mrs. Arrigan was somewhat bruised, but not seriously hurt. Mr. Arrigan escaped without injury. The car was damaged considerably.

John Gordon will leave the coming week to spend the winter in Florida.

Staging has been erected preparatory to making certain repairs on the tower at St. Alban's church.

J. Carl Witter was in Hartford Thursday on a business trip.

Henry C. Wentworth of Springfield is spending the week end with friends in Danielson.

A miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Miss Flora Duhamel of Cottage street, by a number of her friends.

The Brown-Boston university football game at Providence today (Saturday) will attract attendance from Danielson.

The auxiliary of Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion, has been invited to attend a meeting with Oscar Swanson auxiliary at North Grosvenordale next Wednesday evening.

Forms for the new bridge over the Assawaga river at Main street were practically completed Friday. Concrete work can be undertaken during the coming week.

Dorothy Goodman, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Goodman, died at their home here Thursday. The body was taken to Norwich for burial.

Rather than make a detour and bump the bumps that go now with travel between Danielson and Elmville, many drivers are taking their cars via the Maple street route or through Mashentuck.

Rev. H. B. Sloat of Hartford is to be at the United Baptist church in East Killingly Sunday.

MOOSUP TROLLEY BRANCH DISCONTINUED SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 6.—Sunday will be the last day of trolley service on the Connecticut company's line between Moosup and Central Village. This announcement was made Friday by the Connecticut company. It is the beginning of the end of trolley service through all the territory between Taftville and North Grosvenordale.

In abandoning the Central Village-Moosup branch the Connecticut company is apparently out of that territory for all time. A bus service furnished by a line operating out of Providence through Moosup to Norwich is to supply a substitute service.

No information was available Friday as to how many days longer service will be continued between Elmville and East Killingly, or on the main line between Taftville and North Grosvenordale.

The Moosup-Central Village line, where a half- hourly service has been maintained, has been one of the most unprofitable bits of territory in which the Connecticut company has operated in this section. It is the first to go.

PUTNAM

At the meeting of the Parent-Teacher association to be held in the high school auditorium next Tuesday evening. The speaker will be Mrs. H. Wooster Webber, state president of Connecticut Congress of Parents and Teachers. The neighboring associations of Pomfret, Eastford, Woodstock, Killingly, Goodyear and Thompson have been invited, also the Delphian Society of Putnam. During the evening a musical program will be given by the instrumental trio, Miss Esther Rouse, Miss Gertrude Warner and Miss Anna Ash; and a trio of voices, Mrs. Pearl Wheaton, Mrs. Charles A. Thayer and Mrs. Harriet Cropp.

Joseph Tetreault of this city was in an accident at Dudley, Mass. He was riding a motorcycle and was in collision with the truck of John Stenson of Dudley. Tetreault's leg was broken and he was taken to the hospital in Southbridge.

Thayer Academy will play football with Pomfret school today (Tuesday).

Putnam High eleven will play Bartlett High at Webster.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Averill and Mrs. Smithles of this city and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Averill of Springfield, Mass., are at East Greenwich, R. I., where they attended a dance Friday evening given by Dr. and Mrs. Taggart in honor of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances Miller and Arthur McCallum. The marriage is to take place this (Saturday) afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Taggart in East Greenwich.

Rev. N. S. Burton, of the Methodist church in Putnam, will take charge of Methodist church at East Thompson and will hold services every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The former minister at this church, Rev. J. R. Miller has been moved to a charge at Moodus, Conn. The Brandy Hill church will be supplied by Rev. Mr. Camp of Webster and will hold services at the same hour, 3 p. m.

John Smith, who has been living on the Shauer place on the Senexet road, has been engaged as caretaker for the Judge A. W. Catlin property. Mr. Smith is now engaged in putting the farm house in condition for the winter and expects to be located in his new home sometime this month.

Miss Emma Dutton has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Blake of Boston.

Mrs. Leonard Mellor is visiting friends and relatives in New Bedford.

In the report of Superintendent R. C. Jenkins he says: Personal illness and death in the immediate families have necessitated the use of more substitute teachers than usual during the past month. Following is a list of substitutes that have been used in the past: Mrs. Everett Packard, Florence G. Shaw, Mrs. Elmira A. Barber, Miss Nellie Sone, Mrs. Charles A. Thayer, Mrs. Raymond Medbury, Mrs. LeVorn Eston, Miss Marjorie Strahan, Miss Gertrude Perry.

Teachers' meetings: The main subject for discussion at the grade teachers' meetings this year will be Standard Tests and Measurements. I have purchased for Israel Putnam School Library copies of the principal text books that are in use in the regular courses at the Illinois State Normal school. These will be available for the teachers reading required for the renewal of limited service certificates.

Health department: After the one case of scarlet fever reported in the Israel Putnam school early in the month, every room in the I. P. S. was fumigated. No others have been reported. The schedule of the school nurse is the same as last year. Dr. Parent is now working in the Israel Putnam school and pupils from the Putnam Heights and East Putnam school have been brought in to him for cleaning and filling.

Following is a report of the evening school for October: There have been twelve sessions of two hours each.

In the commercial department, there have been registered 38 pupils (not counting High school students who attended two or three evenings. The average attendance in this department was 24.5. The work is divided into a beginners and an advanced class in each of the three subjects—typewriting, shorthand and bookkeeping. Each teacher has three periods of 40 minutes each. The shorthand system used is the Gregg.

In the Americanization department 19 have enrolled with an average attendance of 10.7. The work in this department is divided into two classes, beginning and advanced pupils. The main purpose of the work in this department is not to teach facts or a subject, but to teach wofds and their pronunciation, meaning and uses in expressing thought.

Sincerely,
L. F. BATTEY,

The school nurse makes the following report: Number of cases carried over 93; new cases 59; cases discharged 58, cases on hand 4.

Miss Mildred Hattin and Miss Gladys Peterson have returned from Boston where they visited Miss Doris Barrett, a student at the business college.

Mrs. E. Dupoim has returned to her home in Worcester after a visit with Mrs. Adelard Laflamme, of North Grosvenordale.

WEDDING
Michel-Mann

At the Broadway Tabernacle at New York city at 4.30 o'clock Thursday, Miss Edna Mann of Putnam was united in marriage with Joseph A. Michel, of New York. Miss Mann is a daughter of the late J. Harry Mann and has made her home here all her life, with the exception of four years. Nearly half of this period was spent at the Massachusetts General hospital in laboratory work and the remainder in New York, where she was engaged in similar service.

Because of her father's illness she returned to Putnam two years ago to assist him in his insurance agency. Since his death four months ago she has had charge of the business and her husband, Mr. Michel will come here to assist in the work. They will make their home with Mr. Mann on Grove street.

A brother, Jerome Mann, lives in New York, and her sister is Mrs. Howard Knight of New Britain.

MYSTIC

Mystic Grange No. 171 P. of H. met in G. A. R. hall Thursday evening. A harvest supper was served to 151 grangers. The grange was called to order by Worthy Master J. W. Pollard. Six applications for membership were received. John J. Jones, chairman of the fair recently held gave his final report, that $419.06 was netted. The report was accepted with a vote of thanks to Esther Jones. A communication from the War memorial committee was read and $25 voted. The bill for china and silver costing $219.80 was presented and the balance due on them was voted paid.

The committee added to the executive committee to look into the matter of hiring Main hall reported brother Main would rent it for $460, the grange to pay for light, furnish tables and a piano. The report was accepted and it was voted to hire it for one year. A vote of thanks was given Brother Main for the free use of the hall for the two nights' fair. After business, the grangers went to Main hall where the third and fourth degrees were conferred on a class of sixteen by the officers. Several grangers were represented. The next meeting will be in Main hall on the 19th.

Mrs. Minnie Teft and Mrs. James W. Polandcarried Mrs. Kate Braman to Deep River Thursday where she will live with her daughter.

Mrs. Rolin R. Burrows is confined to her home by agripcold.

Harold Mcneil and Thomas Perry returned from a trip to New York on Thursday.

Charles Buddington of Old Mystic is employed at Cromwell, Conn.

Stephen Austin has been in New Haven this week on business connected with a lodge with which he is connected.

Sunday evening will bring to the Methodist Episcopal church in Mystic the first of the season's picture services. The theme of the picture is "The Passing of the Melting Pot." Seventy-six new slides will be used in presenting this lecture. Brief talks will be given in the Sunday school hour by some of the delegates who recently attended the older boys' and girls' conferences. The pastor will speak briefly at the young people's service.

Mrs. Isabella Moredock Rathbun, widow of Warren Prentice Rathbun, whose death occurred Wednesday at her home on Denison avenue, was the daughter of John and Abby Miner Moredock and was born December 6, 1852. Her early days were spent in Quambaug but she had been a resident of Mystic for many years and was well known and highly esteemed for she possessed in large measure the ability to make and keep friends. Mrs. Rathbun was of high ideals and strong principles and although her chief interest was in her home and family, she was always interested in the affairs of the day and whatever was for the welfare of the community. Her sympathies were very broad and she always found time to visit the sick and lend a helping hand to those in sorrow or distress. Her greatest joy was in doing for others. Her hospitality was a delight to all who were privileged to share it. Never of robust health, she bore this affliction without murmuring and with unfailing cheerfulness and her life was an inspiration to all who knew her.

Being a descendant of the founders of the town where she had spent most of her life, Mrs. Rathbun was keenly interested in genealogy and all that pertained to the history of the town and was a member of Connecticut Chapter, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America. She was also a member of Charity Chapter, No. 61, Order of Eastern Star.

The funeral was held Friday afternoon at her home on Denison avenue in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends and was conducted by Rev. Frederick Chutter, pastor of the Mystic Bridge Congregational church, assisted by Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church of Westerly.

The bearers were Henry A. Kellogg, Asa C. Wilcox, Elmer Rathbun and Clarence M. Shay. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery.

A reception will follow the ceremony for near relatives and a few intimate friends.

Upon their return from a wedding trip, Mr. Carner and his bride are to be at home at Columbia Lake.

PLAINFIELD

Mrs. Frances Edna Starkweather Ashley, 76, died suddenly of heart failure Friday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carl N. Mathewson. Mrs. Ashley was born in Plainfield and has been a resident here all her life. She leaves her daughter, Mrs. Mathewson and a granddaughter, Frances, two step-children, Mrs. L. N. Windsor, and Alfred Ashley, also a brother, Elmer G. Starkweather, of Griswold.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

There will be no further trolley service between Central Village and Moosup after Sunday. The trolley line out of Central Village for points north will continue its service. Central Village learned of this Friday through an announcement by the Connecticut company. A bus line is to assume the operation of a service between Central Village and Moosup.

MOOSUP

Moosup will bid farewell to its trolley service Sunday night, when it will be discontinued. The little more than a mile between this place and Central Village that has been served half-hourly by the trolley company for years will after Sunday be served by a bus line. The Connecticut company is retiring from this transportation field, having found it unprofitable.

TO REFLOAT VESSEL SUNK IN CHINA-JAPANESE WAR

Tokyo, Nov. 6 (AP)—The British transport "Kowshing," which was sunk by Admiral Togo off the coast of Jinsen, Korea, during the China-Japanese war in 1894, is to be refloated by the Japanese navy. Expert divers are preparing for the work which will require about two months, it is thought.

The transport is lying on the sea bottom at a depth of 24 fathoms and has on board silver bullion valued at about 1,500,000 yen. The sinking of the vessel was declared to have been due to the fact that it carried Chinese soldiers.

TAILTEANN GAMES TO BE HELD IN DUBLIN IN THREE YEARS

DUBLIN, Nov. 6 (AP)—The festival of the Tailteann Games, which proved successful in Dublin last year, is to be repeated in 1928, and preparations are well under way.

Lieutenant Bell of the United States Army, who last year had charge of the American team, recently visited Dublin and conferred with Postmaster General Walsh, who is the chairman of the Tailteann Council. Lieutenant Bell reported much American interest in the festival and said American teams will be organized for the 1928 festival.

Miss Marie La Bonte died at Backus hospital, Norwich, early Friday morning. Miss La Bonte was born in Putnam, the daughter of Joseph and Ameria Augue La Bonte. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. John McBroome and by four brothers, Joseph of Boston, George, of Danielson, Eugene of Fall River and Dr. Napoleon La Bonte of Indianapolis, Indiana.

The A. C. C. girls gave a dance in Rlong hall Thursday evening for which Morey's five-piece orchestra furnished music. The decorations were unusually artistic. The color scheme was daffodil yellow and white. The front of the stage was draped in white with yellow whirls. All the overhead was of ropes of yellow and the lights were concealed in yellow lanterns. Yellow and white curtains were at the windows and the same colors were over the doors. The dance was well patronized.

Thomas Barnett has returned from Backus hospital.

The communion service is to be observed at the Congregational church Sunday morning, and several are to unite with the church.

WHARF RAT IN BARREL BITES HAND OF F. I. RAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 6.—Frank I. Ray was bitten on the hand by a large wharf rat Friday. He went immediately to a physician for treatment, and anticipates no trouble. The rat was in a grain barrel and a bag was put over the top, in which to catch him. But in some way he crawled out and bit Mr. Ray's hand.

ARLISS POINTS OUT WHOM TO BLAME IF STAGE QUALITY LOW

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP)—If the stage is going to the dogs, and according to existing records it has been going that way for at least 200 years, it seems to George Arliss, the actor, that the only people who can be arraigned in suspicion are the Public, the Actor and the Manager.

The Public is most generally blamed, said Mr. Arliss. Whenever any particularly inane play is produced, the gullibility of the drama is apt to raise their high-brows and say, "This is the sort of thing the Public wants nowadays."

"When anything unusually vicious attracts attention, we hear, 'This is what the Public demands.'" Mr. Arliss said. "The poor, long-suffering Public! How can they 'demand' any specific entertainment? If any one of the Public knew what to demand, he could become a theatrical manager and make a fortune. It would mean that he knew the public taste.

"The public does not know what to demand any more than I do. I have had a good deal of experience, but when an author asks me what kind of a play I want, I have to confess that I do not know. I want a good play, that is all I can say. And that is what the Public is continually saying. It wants the best that we can give it.

"If you will look over the list of the greatest successes the stage has had you will find that the Public has taste, judgment and a nice sense of morality. The Public is a gentleman and should be treated as such. But the Public does not know what it wants until it gets it. It can, therefore, hardly be held responsible for the nature of the production. The Actor is engaged by the Manager and broadly speaking, has to do what he is told. The Manager then would appear to be responsible for the guilty act.

"But who shall blame him? Who is going to cast the first stone? New York is the great producing center; the great mass of the theatergoers there are not a normal Public; they are passing through; they are holiday-making; their attitude of mind towards entertainment is likely to be quite different from that of a settled resident. The manager is in the business primarily to make money. Why not? He says, 'The Public demands nudity. I give it to them.' He means that he places nude women on exhibition and the Public comes to see them. But there will always be a public in New York for anything sensational. It is not the Public; it is a public, an ephemeral public.

"Not long ago this public was attracted by shocking bad language such as had never before been spoken on our stage. Today the performers might swear till they were blue in the face and it would not be worth a dollar. Legs have had their day; and other anatomical attractions are going the way of all flesh. When they go the manager who has peddled these commodities will have nothing left to stand upon.

"That is where he has been commercially unwise. He has been running his New York theater as a side-show at a fair. He has catered for that public and not for the Public. He has merely sought the nimble shilling. He has built up no reputation that will be an asset to him throughout these great United States—as he might have done. My experience has taught me never to underrate the understanding of an audience, to give them credit for at least as much intelligence as I have myself and to go for the great mass of normal theater-goers of this country, rather than the seething crowd of amusement seekers that throng any metropolitan center."

A man isn't necessarily a good humorist because he is good humored.

SCIENCE LEAGUE AIMS TO KEEP EVOLUTION STRICTLY SECULAR

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6 (AP)—The Science League of America expects to invade every state with lectures and debates on the theory of evolution in an effort to keep instruction on the subject in the public schools on a strictly secular basis.

Maynard Shipley, a lecturer, president of the league, proposes to bring several noted foreign evolutionists to America to supplement the American speakers. He has named H. G. Wells as one of them.

TITLE IN IRELAND DOES NOT CARRY GUARANTEE OF MEANS

DUBLIN, Nov. 6 (AP)—A title in Ireland is not a guarantee of means. At Cork, Sir Thomas Moore, the eleventh holder of one of the oldest British baronetcies, created in 1681, has just had an order of ejectment made against him from his humble home because he had failed to pay a rent of 16 pounds. Sir Thomas is 81 years of age, and the magistrate put a stay of six weeks on the order.

The heir presumptive to the baronetcy is the eldest surviving son of the ninth baronet, Sir Emanuel Moore, who emigrated to the United States. The family motto is "The brave man may fall, but can never yield."

Oyster Bed Found Off Argentine

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 6 (AP)—The discovery of an oyster bed covering nearly 400 square miles off the coast of Patagonia has been reported to the ministry of agriculture by the chief of the fisheries bureau, recently returned from a survey of the Gulf of San Matias.

INCOME TAX BLANKS

While progress is being made in the revision of the revenue act, there will be many who will sympathize with the view taken by Congressman Bacharach of New Jersey when he declares that there is need for a revision of the entire income tax section of the revenue act that will bring about a simplification by which it will be possible for the average person to understand the situation, and thus overcome the necessity of paying large sums of money to experts to have their blanks properly filled out and their taxes figured.

For those who will be taken out of the income tax paying class by the reductions that are proposed there will be no direct interest. But the situation has always been more complicated for the large than the small taxpayer. The latter has spent plenty of time trying to figure out what the government wants to know and to get his report in proper shape to accompany his check, but the man in business, the fellow who has to pay a surtax and those with large incomes have been forced to get those who are trained in such work to carry out the requirements. Such help has no doubt in many instances been the means of saving large sums for the taxpayer, inasmuch as there are methods and rulings to be taken advantage of which only those closely in touch with the situation understand. But no one should be expected to pay more than the law calls for, and those who have resorted to expert assistance know that it is expensive.

Without a question the reason for the complicated blanks lies in the necessity of protecting the government against those who are always trying to dodge their real obligations. Nevertheless it seems unjust that all should be penalized under such circumstances, and that some revision should be made that would accomplish the much needed simplification without providing loopholes through which the dodgers might crawl. With the income tax being steadily reduced it may be a bit late to undertake such a move, but better late than never.

THE COAL SITUATION

It doesn't make the coal consuming public feel any better or any warmer to hear the head of the coal miners say that the coal operators are making millions of dollars as the result of the increase in the price of fuel, and they are not cheered by any such statement as that which warns them of a rude awakening as the result of the stoppage of coal production.

Those who have bought anthracite recently know that the price has advanced. Many of the cellars are full but the quantity of hard coal available is steadily decreasing and when the supply dwindles the logical result is an advance in price. Much the same works out with bituminous. That supply is large enough but the demand is coming for increased production and the same emergency situation is created, with the result that more is being asked than under normal conditions.

However much the operators may be benefitting by the strike, it is to be realized that they would not have been given the opportunity to do all the things which they are being charged with doing, whether they are doing them or not, but for the attitude which was taken by the miners in refusing to go on with negotiations and refusing to arbitrate their demands.

Quite as firm and determined a stand is being taken by the operators. Their spokesman declares there will be no adjustment until there appears in the agreement a provision that there will be no more strikes. The operators are not for adjusting the present situation as it was done two years ago and facing a similar situation two years hence. There is in fact no reason why the consumer should be subjected to any such imposition. Adjustment while production continued could overcome the shortage danger, but adjustment according to the facts and not according to pressure through hardship imposed upon the public is not welcome to the miners.

The public is undergoing the squeeze which accompanies a coal strike. While we may hope for the agreement which will prevent strikes in the future it is also fortifying itself by using other than anthracite.

VOTING MACHINES

Although only one election district in New York has been equipped with voting machines, which were used in this week's election the result, with an accurate count, quick voting and prompt returns, was quite the same as it has been in other cities where machines are used.

New York city is to have a full equipment of voting machines. They have been strongly opposed there, every means of keeping them out having been employed. There will always be those who will fight against them from ulterior motives, because they are unwilling to change their minds and because they are opposed to all progress, but the experience in this one district should have its good effect upon the others. The results in fact speak for themselves.

When it is possible to know the results of the election a few minutes after the polls are closed in the various voting places, when it is known that the vote is going to be counted as cast and when it is recognized that miscounts and badly interpreted intentions are going to be eliminated, there seems to be good and sufficient reason for a demand on the part of the voters for machines in all districts. It means a decided change from present conditions but one that ought to be heartily welcomed.

Tuesday night in the district equipped with machines it was only a matter of seven minutes before one of the voting precincts reported the result for the full ballot. The result was much the same in other precincts and early in the evening the result in the entire district was known. The same might have been obtained from the whole city had the opposition to the machines not existed. There was also the satisfaction of knowing that ballots had not been thrown out on technicalities or been counted otherwise than actually voted.

Such a situation applies no more to New York than elsewhere, where delayed announcement of the votes, miscounts and contests are all matters of too frequent occurrence.

PROPERLY FOCUSED HEADLIGHT

Among the many problems connected with safety in the highways is that of the blinding headlights. It has had its fling everywhere and while much progress has been made in dealing with it it has not been eliminated.

In Washington at the present time there is a loud call for relief. There bright lights are required by law in the streets and the result is that this situation is creating a serious state of affairs. The one great need after the cars are equipped with proper lenses is to see that the lights are properly focused. With one light throwing its rays skyward and the other aimed at the pavement the driver going in the opposite direction gets no chance, any more than he does when the lights are focused straight ahead instead of downward.

While many communities are endeavoring to deal with the bright light or glaring headlight menace, it is to be realized that there should be a uniformity about such a requirement. When communities in a group of states live up to a common understanding about what lenses are legal and how lights should be focused there will be far less trouble from this direction, provided of course there is an enforcement of the requirement.

Just now one of the reasons assigned for the flagrant disregard for the focusing of headlights in Washington is attributed to the fact that there is lax enforcement, and the condition has prevailed so long that there is a general disregard for the provision. For the safety of the highway at night properly focused lights are highly important.

THE CHAPMAN DECISION

By decision of the supreme court of errors of Connecticut there was no error in the trial of Gerald Chapman for the murder of a policeman at New Britain and the verdict of the lower court should be carried out.

It is not believed that this will cause any surprise to most people in this state, or elsewhere. In view of the thoroughness with which the case in question was tried and the evidence that was produced. This finding of the highest court in this state means that Chapman will be hanged next month unless further action is taken in federal courts concerning his position as a federal prisoner from Atlanta penitentiary.

The situation is one in which the federal authorities have made no such claim. They have in fact turned Chapman over to the Connecticut authorities for trial for a capital offense. Except for the complication, through being a federal prisoner whose term has not expired, there is no question but what the action of the state court would have been final, and it doesn't appear in any way certain that resort to federal courts or United States supreme court would accomplish anything except to prolong the time before carrying out the order of the state court.

With the state supreme court finding that the guilt of the accused was clearly proved such other moves as are made will give little promise except to keep uncertain the time when the matter will be finally disposed of and justice done.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

When asked one day how her husband was, a certain woman replied, "Very well with the exception of a hard cold!" What a common expression. "Very well with the exception of a hard cold!" Time and again have we not all of us said virtually the same thing intimating that we ourselves or others would be in perfect health were it not for a "hard cold?" When we use the expression we act as though an apology were due for thinking even that such a common thing as a hard cold in any way could affect one's health. But modern science has brought in the serious diagnosis of a "cold" as something not to be treated lightly because it is very dangerous—not so much as a thing in itself as in the long list of diseases for which it so easily paves the way. The danger greatly lessens when the cold is attacked when coming on—don't wait until it is deeply seated.

It is quite common in these days to have in great assembly halls a certain contrivance, or a series of contrivances, know as amplifiers. The purpose of the contrivance is to increase the volume of the speaker's voice so that he can be clearly heard in all parts of the auditorium. Few men can continue a natural speaking voice in a building that will seat an audience of six thousand people so that all can hear clearly during a sustained effort without using it so unnaturally that it grows husky, and in this way may be permanently injured. If on the other hand if a speaker cannot be easily heard all over the hall without straining, the effect of the speech is almost wholly lost. I believe the amplifier is going to rate with one of the important inventions of later years. O that someone would hit upon a device to magnify good thoughts and deeds, rather than to minimize them!

The first snowstorm of the season, i. e., the first that can be really dignified by the word "storm," occurred on October 30, and what a carnival of guesses came romping into our minds as to what sort of a winter we are going to have. Has the number 30 anything to do with? Has it any relation to the number of storms that lie before us? The old timers and many others who make much of "signs" and "wonders" will answer yes. We may not believe in "signs" and "wonders" and yet can we with positive assurance say dogmatically, no? It may mean something or it may mean nothing that it was the heaviest snowfall in southern New England on any October since 1874. This is the statement of the weather bureau. Whether this is a forerunner of an unusually severe winter is probably beyond the knowledge of scientists. However, it will be well to get all the coal we can.

The "wet" propagandists have been greatly pleased of late over what they call the "failure of the Volstead act." Every case of bootlegging is worked for all it is worth to show that more liquor is manufactured and sold at present than under the old license system. But thoughtful people ask if this is true why are the "wets" working overtime to have the Volstead act repealed? Why should they want a heavy license system if they can do the same amount of business for nothing? Down in their hearts they know that under the Volstead act their business is doomed. The recent speech of Lloyd George is the most potent blow that the "wets" have yet received. He says that American prohibition is a great success, and one of the most advanced steps that any country has yet taken toward a perfect civilization. He advises England to follow in our footsteps.

The cheap and shallow criticism of many foreign writers on American affairs that we, as a people, are lacking in refined sentiment, is far from the truth. Much of this stuff finds a sale with many foreign papers, because it is what the people like to read and believe is true. The next day after a man arrives in New York from London or Liverpool he begins to send back home impressions of the American people, which are nothing more than the enlarged prejudices he brought with him. What he sees in the slums of New York are not typical of the American people especially as they are made up of foreign elements. Let this writer go to Arlington Heights and see that superb monument that is nameless, dedicated to The Unknown Soldier. Let him see the beautiful wreath that somebody places on it every day and he will realize that there is some refined sentiment in America.

Cambridge, Massachusetts, said to rank the highest of any city of America in average intelligence was for the sixth time in 20 months the scene of a bank robbery. That is, employes conveying money to the bank were attacked, one killed and the other wounded. For the second time in this period was the same messenger wounded. The driver of the car a student, was deliberately shot and killed. The car containing the payroll was driven off schedule; on a day when police protection was not expected, and therefore had not been notified. There was a lively exchange of bullets, witnessed by a number of bystanders in broad daylight when traffic was the heaviest. And yet the bandits easily got away with the loot. If this could be done in a city of such intelligence, another place way down in the mental test would have had nothing left but a hole in the ground.

Among the notable speeches against crime was that made in Washington recently by President Coolidge. It was notable because it had nothing directly to do with the national political situation. Of course his great office gave it the widest publicity. But if it had been delivered by a far less conspicuous man it would have commanded wide and favorable comment, because of its intrinsic merit. The first impression created was that the president had the courage of his convictions. Secondly, the whole address was stamped with the evidences of the utmost sincerity. Thirdly, it was packed from the first word to the last with solid common sense. There was no attempt at oratory; no cheap clap trap that some speakers resort to, but clear and practical ideas given in a calm, level tone from beginning to end.

So beautifully expressed was the following paragraph that I give it entire: "It is notorious that crime and violence always follow in the wake of war. It appears to be the rule that there is a dissolution of the old restraints, brought about by the reaction which follows from the severe discipline and nervous tension of an era of conflict. These may be, and probably are, a temporary state which will tend to disappear with the mere passage of time. But too many of our people have found many times to their sorrow that the privileges of liberty instead of being easy to enjoy are in reality highly difficult responsibilities, requiring the utmost of effort for success. Nor can it be denied that on the part of some there is a tendency to disregard too many of the former standards of society and too much of the former influence of authority."

The brave conduct of the Spanish merchant marine under the direct fire of the Moroccan rebels during the landing of Spanish troops in Alhucemas bay some time ago, has come in for belated but unstinted praise from the mercantile union.

HISTORY OF STEAMBOATING ON THAMES RIVER AND IN THIS COUNTRY.

The story of transportation on American waterways from the early years up to the present time is told in a new book, Steamboat Days, illustrated. Erving Dayton, of New York, illustrated by the noted John Wolcott Adams, who built his fame as an illustrator out of a great ability to portray scenes of the past, and, whose recent death leaves this book as his last work. The volume is published by Frederick A. Stokes Company. It is a chronological record of steamboat packets which made transportation history in America. Possibly the only book of its sort which can ever again be written since the sources of information are fast disappearing.

Steamboats did the major work of transportation on the Hudson, Connecticut, Thames, Providence and Delaware rivers, and also the coastwise routes. But there was also that great fleet of 2,000 Mississippi boats which ran and raced from Pittsburgh and St. Paul to the sea. In these days Pittsburgh was a great port of embarkation with shipyards, block factories, anchor forges, rope walks and spar builders.

In 1853 Choteau steamboats carried expeditions of the American Fur company up the Missouri river as far north as Fort Benton in Montana, 3,750 miles above the Gulf of Mexico.

Small boats ran on the big rivers stopping at low water stages. Often they had to lift themselves over bars and obstructions with "steamboat crutches," which were planted on the river bottom, and the bow raised with block-and-falls while steam was applied with fury.

Rich in Steamboat History

It is to the Hudson river, rich in steamboat history, that the world owes the development of a light and fast type of boat that was not only valuable in supplying transportation in New York state but made its way to many routes, even the Yangtse Ki Yang river in China where the runs were sometimes 700 miles in length.

The honor of initiating steamboat interest in America seems to belong to William Henry of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, inventor of the screw auger. In 1760 Henry went to England on business and while there was attracted to the steam engine invented by Watt. He saw in it possibilities for ship propulsion. Upon his return to America he began work upon a steam-engine of his own design which he completed in 1763. He installed the engine in a boat fitted with paddle-wheels making his first trial on the Conestoga river near Lancaster. The boat sank immediately and was lost but Henry was not discouraged by his failure. He followed with a second model, adding improvements. While Henry's success in the field was small, he must be credited with much of the development which was soon to follow for he inspired both John Fitch and Robert Fulton who were his proteges.

Fitch's Boat

Later one of John Fitch's steamboats necessitated the first printed announcement for steamboat travel which appeared in the Federal Gazette & Philadelphia Daily Advertiser on July 26, 1790. It read:

THE STEAMBOAT

sets out tomorrow morning at ten o'clock from Arch Street Ferry, in order to take passengers for Burlington, Bristol, Bordentown and Trenton, and return next day.

The Hudson river is celebrated for Fulton's demonstration with "Clermont." The New York Evening Post of October 2, 1807 reported:

"Mr. Fulton's new steamboat which is fitted up in near style for passengers, and is intended to run from New York to Albany as a packet left here this morning with 90 passengers, against a strong head tide. Notwithstanding which it was judged that she moved through the waters at the rate of six miles an hour."

In 1842 there were two young men, Adams and Harndon, who used, to swing themselves and their carpet bags and many packages off the Boston trains and onto the New York boat or off the boat and onto the train, three times a week. They were messengers doing errands and making deliveries in Boston and New York for merchants and others. This was the beginning of the Adams Express Company.

Vanderbilt's Boats

Steamboats developed some wonderful operators of which Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt is the conspicuous example. He ran ferries to Staten Island and expanded his activities to included the steamboat line to Peekskill, where he fought Daniel Drew to a finish and reached out to own railroad lines to connect with the "Lexington" brand of cotton cloth.

One of the most interesting characters of old steamboat days was Colonel James Fisk, Jr., "Jubilee Jim" who was president of the Narragansett Steamship Co. Fisk delighted in changing from business clothes into an admiral's uniform and welcoming guests aboard his Stonington liner, giving orders to his crew, causing a great sensation and then coming ashore in the east river on a tug from the boat. The sensation was all the greater since he usually had with him a lady of whom he was particularly fond at that moment and she, too, was dressed in the feminine equivalent of an admiral's uniform even to the epaulettes.

Captains Wore Silk Hats

In the very early steamboats the captains of the sound wore silk hats and long coats in the pilot house. It was not until 1874 that ship's officers began to wear uniforms.

The grand era of Mississippi river steamboating embraced the fifties and continued until 1861 when the Civil war crippled the trade. Steamboats of the western rivers and lakes carried thousands of pioneers across the old boundaries. Early day travelers trusted their lives and property to the borne men many of whom were suspected of being in confederacy with the land robbers who infested the shores of the Ohio, and pirates all along the Mississippi.

Mississippi steamboats competed successfully with railroads for passenger and freight business many years after the first railroad tracks were laid into the territory.

Railroads timidly intruded the steamboat field. The Chicago & Rock Island built a wooden bridge at Davenport, Iowa, in 1856 in the face of powerful opposition. The Effie Ashton going up the river swung against the bridge. The galley stove tipped over and set fire to the boat, and the boat set fire to the bridge. Effie Ashton's owners sued for damages. The directors of the bridge company knew popular sympathy was with the steamboat people. A strong and popular man was needed to handle the case for the railroad. A young lawyer from Sangamon county, Illinois, was highly recommended and his arguments in court were so forceful that they hung up the jury. The lawyer was Abraham Lincoln.

Disasters due to pioneering with airplanes today have their parallel in the steamboat tragedies of past times. Captain Davis Embree prepared a list of 618 steamboats lost on western waters from the introduction of steam to the close of 1846.

An American Institution

The ocean steamship is an American institution. "Savannah" being the first boat of this kind. It went to Liverpool in 25 days and during seven days moved by sails alone. With the passage of years the United States became a power upon the seas. Then there was a demand in congress for the reversal of our national policy towards the merchant marine. After four years of debate all subsidy contracts were cancelled leaving millions in capital in ships to work out the best settlement from the sale of property and ruin of business. While the United States was thus engaged Great Britain energetically fostered new lines and the decline in American shipping was the result.

Steamers to Norwich

In his new book Steamboat Days, Mr. Dayton devotes a chapter to Norwich and New London steamboats, opening it as follows:

Into the quiet of a fall afternoon, October 15, 1816, the Norwich Courier bulletined:

"3 o'clock p. m. We stop the press to announce the arrival at this port of the new steam boat, Connecticut, Captain E. S. Bunker.—"

Reference is made to the establishment of regular steamboat service in 1817 from Norwich to New York, stopping at New London and New Haven "a passenger to New York running the risk of being a week on the voyage," and the story of equipping the John Hancock with a wooden boiler is retold, together with its explosion.

Such steamboats as the Fulton, Connecticut, Eagle, New London, Fanny, Henry Eckford and Experiment are mentioned, while the vessels which Captain W. W. Colt operated or brought out are referred to together with a tribute to the part which the captain played in steamboat history.

Carefully chronicled are the various steamers which at one time or another were operated in waters hereabouts, including the Norwich, Water Witch, Atlantic, Worcester, Cleopatra, a second Connecticut, Commonwealth, Tiger Lily, Water Lily, Chicopee, Golden Gate, Skipjack, Panamas, Ulysses, City of Boston, City of New York, City of Norwich, City of Lawrence, City of Lowell, together with the propellors from the days of the Charles Osgood down to the Cape Cod.

Excursion Fleet

In the excursion fleet reference is made to Elijah Bill's favorite, the Fanny, Angelina, George R. Kelsey, Belle, Ella, Block Island, Osprey, Norwich, Margaret, Gypsy and those of more recent date down to the Nelseco.

In an interesting way the author presents some of the old-time steamboat gentry pointing out that it was not until 1874 that sound line officers began to wear uniforms and that the captains of the favorite steamers of the 40's always wore silk hats in the pilot house. Such names as Clark, Wilcox, Heath, Williams, Burgess, Smith, Jewett, Ladd, Reynolds, Lamphere, Ward, Gear, Miner, Crocker and Woodward are all familiar as captains in steamboat annals.

Start of Adams Express Co.

Captain J. Elbridge Woodward of Taunton, formerly of Norwich furnishes his earliest recollections for several paragraphs in the volume and makes reference to seeing Adams and Herndon, loaded down with carpet bags and packages making the trip on alternate days between Boston and New York, taking the steamers in this city and later at Allyn's Point. He can recall that back in 1842 and says "This was the beginning of the Adams Express company. There are but few now alive that saw these two men in the starting of a business that came to extend all over the world.

Sunday Morning Talk

GOD AND HIS CREATION

The heavens declare the glory of God: and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Psalms, 19.1. The Psalmist begins with a description of God's glory, the heavens declare His glory, and the firmament showeth His handiwork. It is interesting to note that the word translated "handiwork" occurs nowhere else in the Bible. The Psalmist is showing us there not only that God was in the world, but that He was shaping and fashioning His world with his own hand. So from beginning to end we find this delicate choice of expression. So we might find His glory if we would stop and think about God's creation. Some of us do not lift our eyes to the skies, some of us do not care to know the difference between the "heavens" and the "firmament."

Persons are often contented to go along in ignorance, not knowing the difference between the cardinal flower growing in midsummer in the damp recesses of the woods, and the glowing sumac out on the hillside. Not so with the Psalmist: he knows that God has not made the universe, and gone away, and allowed it to operate itself. He is interested in His creation, and as such He looks upon it and regards it. The Psalmist saw with the same certainty the glory of God in the heavens and firmament was a product of His law, an inherent and integral part of His creation. The Psalmist views from still another standpoint the subject of which he sings. He considers the source from which flows man's harmony with the law. The trees uplifted greenery spreads out in the sunlight. The trunk is still hidden so that for the moment we lose sight of it, yet it bears it up. But after all where is the ultimate origin of its beauty and strength? Down below the surface of the earth are the roots. The great roots subdivide into smaller roots, and these subdivide into rootlets, and when these almost reach the vanishing points we call them fibres, and these subdivide again into what the botanist would call the fibrillae of the roots, more delicate than the finest lace, so delicate, indeed, as not to endure handling by human touch. The Psalmist now sees the roots going down to the origin of strength in the individual case, of God's law as part of the glory of His creation, and he finds it here. "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Jehovah, my Rock and my redeemer."

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognised by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Rear Admiral John Halligan, the new head of the Bureau of Engineering of the U. S. Navy, is a line officer who has specialized in engineering. He has served as fleet engineer of the Atlantic fleet, as an instructor in engineering at Annapolis, and as assistant chief of the designing section of the Bureau of Engineering. A native of Boston, he was appointed to Annapolis from Massachusetts and graduated in 1898 at the head of his class. During the Spanish war he was attached to the Brooklyn at the battle of Santiago. In the war with Germany he served as chief of staff to the commander of the United States naval force in France. Since the war he has commanded the battleship Ohio and the cruiser Detroit. For his services in the war with Spain he was awarded the special Meritorious Medal, while his services in the late war brought him the Distinguished Service Medal.

From Small Beginnings

Lewis Nixon, a Great Shipbuilder

The fact that Lewis Nixon was a great student in school explains all his later success. A Virginia congressman had the appointment of a cadet at Annapolis. He wished to make a good appointment and so he made a close examination of the scholarship of the young men who were interested. Lewis Nixon, who was born in Lessburg, Va., stood high in all his classes. To him the congressman gave the appointment. The young man went to the U. S. Naval academy and so well justified the appointment that he graduated at the head of his class, the class of 1882. How his success must have warmed the old congressman's heart!

Lewis Nixon went still further. He was sent to the Royal Naval college at Greenwich, England, to study naval architecture. In his three years there he continued to show the high ability that he had shown in the little Virginia school. He came home and at 22 was made assistant naval constructor of the great Cramps shipyards. Here he did faithful and brilliant work and at 29 made the plans for a new type of battleship—the type that led to the huge "dreadnoughts." The great and powerful battleships Indiana and Massachusetts and Oregon, made after his designs, added immensely to his already high reputation. The boy who was good in school had become good in life.

Having given good service in the navy, the young man resigned in order to enter into private work in the shipyards. After several years under the direction of great shipbuilders he set up a shipyard of his own at Elizabeth, N. J., and there developed a shipbuilding business second to none in the world in quality of work it sent out. His own experience had been intensely practical and he was thoroughly familiar with all the theories of shipbuilding. Added to that he had an inventive mind. Naturally he built a large fortune.

In addition to other work he entered political life and was for a time the leader of Tammany hall, New York. He served on many public committees and was president of the United States Shipbuilding company. The old congressman had made a wise choice.

Stories That Recall Others

Help! Help!

There was a profound mystery when a brass-bound trunk, tightly locked, was found on a dumping ground. It was something which seemed to call for an investigation, and the investigation was made with thoughts of some gruesome find being revealed. It took a little while to get the trunk open but the remains found were those of some unsifted ashes.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

TAI-O-HAI

Tai-O-Hai, island port of call of the homeward bound United States fleet which has been visiting in the Pacific, is described as a "port of tragedy" in a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Situated at the innermost point of a horseshoe bay which furnishes a reasonably well protected harbor," says the bulletin, "Tai-O-hai once gave promise of being a Pacific metropolis, a rival, perhaps, to Papeete, Tahiti, 750 miles to the southwest. The town on Nukahiva, largest of the Marquesas islands, is listed as the administrative seat of the French government of the Marquesas; but the honor is a hollow one, for the Marquesans are rapidly dying off. The hundred thousand or more who peopled the eleven islands a century ago have dwindled to 3,000 or 4,000.

"When France took the islands over in 1842 the future seemed rosy to the white settlers who went there. The islands teemed with superlatively healthy, brawny natives. The rainfall was abundant and vegetation grew rankly. Dreams of exceedingly productive cocoanut, cotton and vanilla plantations filled the heads of French adventurers. Tai-O-hai was built with these dreams in mind, and stores, inns, churches, schools, and another accompaniment of civilization—a jail—sprang up.

"But things did not work out as had been expected. The Marquesans did not care to become plantation laborers. They had led lives of easy spending their time in idleness, in gathering nature's fruits, and in war among themselves. Some unscrupulous planters tried rum and opium as inducements to labor. They brought a certain temporary success, but they helped to bring a speedy end to all hope for the survival of the Marquesan people. To drunkenness and goddenness were soon added the white man's diseases—diseases which meant little to the civilizations of America and Europe that had become largely immune to them, but which carried off the islanders like flies.

"Tai-O-Hai, which had waxed, as quickly waned. Today less than 150 people live in the village and there is only a handful of whites. Abandoned buildings on every hand; traders' shops, dwellings, an inn, a leper house. The once populous valleys back in Nukahiva have been abandoned to the rank growth, only the half-smothered platforms on which dwellings stood tell of their past use by man. In the valleys not wholly abandoned, the few survivors have moved near the sea for neighborliness.

"Marquesas are in two groups. Nukahiva lies in the northern group. Seventy miles of ocean seperates it from the group to the south. It was the southern group, discovered in 1595 by Mendana that was named Marquesas. This group was thought to constitute the entire archipelago.

"The northern islands remained unknown to the outside world for 200 years and were then discovered by an American, Captain Ingraham, a skipper from Boston. He named them the 'Washington Islands,' and they almost became American possessions. Captain David Porter of the United States navy took possession of Tai-O-Hai bay in 1813 while harrying British ships in the Pacific; subdued the Nukahivian natives and proclaimed the Washington islands territory of the United States. But a mutiny of the ships he left in the harbor put an end to his plan and the United States never re-asserted its claim.

"The Marquesas are of volcanic origin. They are extremely rugged, and, except the valley floors, there is no level land in them. To the observer from ship board who sails among them their sharp peaks, line behind line, cut the sky like the bizzarre mountains of stage scenery.

"A number of the small islands are now entirely uninhabited. Unless some hardy race be brought to them, it will not be long before the Marquesas will be left, virtually as they were millenniums ago, before the Vikings of the Pacific, in their huge canoes, came to claim them for mankind.

CONSTANTINOPLE'S ODD MAYOR IS ENERGETIC

Dr. Emine Bey, mayor of Constantinople, is the object of considerable ribald comment in local newspapers. The physician-executive is always "starting something," and, unlike most Turkish officials, does not suppress a newspaper and send it editor to the gibbet for failing to praise him. He has accomplished much in the improvement of the ancient capital. If all his decrees were enforced the city would be even better. Beggars, street-walkers, stray dogs, automobile speeding—the legal limit is 6 miles an hour, but a chauffeur is ashamed to drive less than 40—are all under the ban. The police have spurts of vigilance, but the mayor is always a stickler for the enforcement of his decrees. Recently while inspecting the new road along the Bosphorus he passed the cemetery of Messar-Bournou. He was not pleased and he spat vigorously. Expectorating is prohibited by one of his decrees. Too late he remembered it so he fined himself $5 on the spot and paid the amount to his secretary. Last year he fined himself $10, holding himself responsible—because the chimney had not been cleaned—for a fire in his residence.

Clay Used to Filter Oil

In the oil fields near Ponce City, Okla., a large clay roasting furnace has been built to utilize the large fullers earth deposit owned by the company in Texas. Under the microscope a handful of the clay resembles a pile of sponges and such fine clay is valuable in refining lubricating oil so as to rid it of the carbon, dust and other foreign material in it before it is put into the finish tanks. By baking the clay after it is used each time so as to eliminate the oil and waste materials it can be used as many as 12 or 24 times with good results.

MRS. MANSFIELD'S PLAYERS ACCLAIMED AT THE GEM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 6—A delighted audience gave undivided attention to "The Goose Hangs High," a three-act play of American Life by Lewis Beach, with Mrs. Richard Mansfield in the leading role. The play was presented at the Gem theatre Friday evening by the Richard Mansfield players of New London and was applauded as the best modern production witnessed here in years. Mrs. Richard Mansfield, portraying the mother, was very appealing. All the characterizations, in fact, met with the approval of local play-goers. Later, Manager ohn A. Nickel of the Gem theatre received many compliments for providing this rare opportunity for Willimantic.

The play was managed by Edwin R. Wolfe. The cast: Bernard Ingals, Robert Lesueur; Eunice Ingalls, Mrs. Richard Mansfield; Noel Berby, Frank Betts; Leo Day, Theron Lucas; Rhoda, Margot Semms; Julius Murdoch, Hartotte Reed; Mrs. Bradley, Lillie Brayton; Hugh Ingalls, Edwin R. Wolfe; Lois Ingalls, Betty Pratte; Bradley Lincoln, Theodore St. John; Dagbar Carson, Haroldine Humphreys; Elliott Kimberley, Charles Freman

OBITUARY

Mrs. Nathan A. Woodworth

Mrs. Mary E. Bishop Woodworth, 70, widow of Nathan A. Woodworth, died Friday morning at her home in Quaker Hill after an illness of about two weeks. She had been in failing health due to infirmities attending advanced years for the past four years.

Mrs. Woodworth was born in New London, November 26, 1854, and was the daughter of the late Henry and Mary S. Bishop. She was married in September, 1884, to Mr. Woodworth who passed away in 1918. Mrs. Woodworth was a kind and loving mother, devoted to her family and enjoyed the love and respect of many friends. She was a member of the Second Congregational church of New London and until her health began to fail, she was actively interested in church work. She was also a member of the Sunshine society of Quaker Hill.

She leaves a son, Thomas B. Woodworth, selectman of the town of Waterford, and two daughters, Miss Laura Woodworth, of Quaker Hill, and Mrs. Grover V. Lassen of West Hartford.

Mrs. William Boole

Eliza Caroline Boole of Meriden died Thursday at her home there after an illness from heart trouble. She was the sister of Mrs. William H. Osborn of Quaker Hill. Besides Mrs. Osborn she is survived by her husband, William Boole. She was the daughter of the late Jesse Smith of Poquonoc.

Mrs. William Bobsein

Mrs. Annie Bobsein, 79, widow of William Bobsein, died at her home in Granitteville, Waterford, Friday morning of pneumonia from which she has been ill since Sunday. Mrs. Bobsein was a native of Ireland but had lived many years in Granitteville. She was well-known in her community and was regarded as a kindly neighbor and a woman of kindly disposition. She is survived by three sons, William Bobsein of this city; Louis Bobsein of Waterford, and James Bobsein of New London and a daughter, Mrs. Michael Conway of New London.

Mrs. Michael McCarthy

After being in poor health for the past year and a half Anna Elizabeth O'Neil, widow of Michael McCarthy died Friday morning at her home, No. 162 Cliff street.

She was born in Norwich, November 14, 1857, the daughter of the late William and Mary Ryan O'Neil. Her early education was received in local schools and she was an honored member of St. Mary's Memorial church, in which she took an active interest as long as health permitted her to do so. Of a fine Christian character, loving in every kind, Mrs. McCarthy easily made friends during her lengthy illness she bore her affliction with fortitude, never complaining, but ever considerate of others about her.

Mrs. McCarthy is survived by an only daughter, Miss Mary E. McCarthy, with whom she made her home, three brothers, Thomas J. O'Neil of Worcester, Mass., Michael and James O'Neil of Norwich and several nieces and nephews.

MOOSUP WOMAN'S JOKE BID PROVES FLORIDA LAND BOOM

Everett E. Salisbury of Moosup is relating the details of Salisbury's Cabin City which is being built as rapidly as possible about four miles south of Deland, Florida, says the Moosup Journal. Eldred Salisbury and Almond Colvin are in charge of the work, which Mr. Salisbury says is an innovation in the south but has proven popular in northern resorts.

The "city" is laid out on one long street leading directly from the Dixie highway which runs through to Tampa. On both sides of the street cabins are being built, ten of which have one room measuring 10 by 8, the larger ones having a room 10 by 16 with a porch 6 by 16. Folding beds give sleeping accommodations, while dishes, furniture, stove, etc., are provided.

The "city" is planned primarily for automobile parties carrying their tents with them. A general store is being built, together with a gasoline filling station. Water is supplied from the Orange City water works, near which Cabin City is located. Mr. Salisbury is very enthusiastic over the project and sees wonderful opportunities for such a plan.

The land which is being used for this was bought by Mrs. Salisbury several years ago when she attended an auction and put in a bid as a joke. Since that time the value has increased ten-fold or more.

Washington Square Collision

A Dodge delivery truck owned by George Hathaway, West Main street grocer, and operated by Charles Connell of No. 245 West Main street was in collision at Washington square shortly after noon Friday with a Chevrolet touring car, registration L-650, John V. Heede, 106 North Main street. The damage to the machines was slight.

Six Church Fellowship Postponed

The six church fellowship including the churches of Canterbury, Ekonk, Brooklyn, Central Village and Wauregan meet next for the final gathering of the series of 1925 at Westminster. This was to have been on Tuesday next, Nov. 10th, but on account of the installation of Rev. Mr. Wheelock, at Willimantic, on that date it is postponed to Tuesday, Nov. 17, just one week later, as several of the expected speakers will be at Willimantic for the installation.

Attended Transportation Conference

John J. O'Rourke, secretary, represented the Norwich Chamber of Commerce at the conference held in New Haven Friday over bus transportation in the state.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SEEKS TO SECURE NORWICH SLOGAN

As a matter of public interest, and an effort to create more public thought in Norwich concerning its advantages, the Chamber of Commerce will hold a slogan contest which will end on Saturday, Nov. 21. A prize of $10 is offered for the best slogan for Norwich which is submitted. Every man, woman and school child of Norwich is eligible to enter the contest.

There are a large number of progressive American cities today that have adopted slogans which were acquired by natural processes, or through the method of slogan contests.

As one enters the city of Trenton, N. J., one is forcibly reminded that Trenton is on the map. Its slogan is "Trenton Makes—the World Takes." Los Angeles' slogan is, "Nature's Workshop." Philadelphia is known as "The Friendly City." Here in Connecticut Waterbury is known as "the Brass City"; New Britain as "the Hardware City"; Hartford as "the Insurance City." In Massachusetts Boston is "the Hub of the Universe"; Worcester is "the Heart of the Commonwealth," while Haverhill's slogan is "Hitch Your Heart to Haverhill."

The residents of Norwich form a community of interest. They are, as it were, one large family. Loyalty to the home town indicates a faith in the home town, and a belief that it is a good place in which to live and prosper. The greater the loyalty the greater will be the civic pride in Norwich. It follows that civic pride begets progressiveness, and progressiveness secures growth. Kipling wrote: "It ain't the guns nor armament,

Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlasting teamwork
Of every bloomin' soul."

Norwich has no place for the knocker. It has plenty of room for the builder. It will be interesting to see who will offer the best slogan in the contest.

The rules for the slogan contest are:

1st—The contest is open to anybody in Norwich, young or old, male or female.

2nd—Slogans should be brief, clear-cut, and embody a good sales argument for Norwich.

3rd—There is no limit to the number of slogans that any one individual may submit.

4th—A prize of $10 will be given to the winner of the slogan contest.

5th—The contest will close Saturday, Nov. 21.

6th—All slogans must be sent to the Chamber of Commerce, Thayer building.

Few slogans adopted by cities throughout the country contain over seven words; the shorter the better; the better the sales value of Norwich indicated by the slogan, the greater is the value of the slogan.

All slogans submitted will be judged by a representative group of citizens, the personnel of which will be announced later.

In addition to the slogan contest the chamber is offering prizes for the best essays written by the school children of Norwich on the subject, "Reasons Why Norwich Is an Attractive City in Which to Live."

Here again is an effort to beget loyalty to Norwich from the school children. The community spends hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to educate its boys and girls. The schools are conducted on a high standard. It is certain that from the minds of the young citizens-in-the-making will come many excellent reasons why we like to live in Norwich and why we are proud of the home town. These reasons will later be used by the chamber for community advertising purposes.

GAS MOST IMPORTANT IN NEWSPAPER PLANTS

Manufactured gas has found scores of new uses in Connecticut during the last few years, according to the Connecticut committee on public service information, and much has been written concerning these various uses in manufacturing plants throughout the state. The use of gas for industrial heating purposes is growing daily and gas men predict that it will soon be the universal heating fuel both in factories and homes. One important use of this fuel about which so much has been written, however, is little known but this latter use is necessary before anything concerning the other uses can be printed. It is the use of gas in newspaper plants and printing offices.

Both the linotype and monotype machines are dependent upon the use of gas heat. Every printing machine is equipped with a gas burner connected to the main supply. This burner keeps a continuous flame underneath a metal pot containing a composition metal. The metal is kept in a molten state all the time the machine is in use. The metal is pressed against the type matrix until the metal hardens again. The completed line drops from the machine into a holder and the matrices are automatically returned to the type magazine.

Another important use of gas in newspaper plants is its use in the stereotype department where full pages are casted from the original type which has been locked in chase forms by the make-up-men. Gas comes into use in this department for drying the cardboard "mats" on which the impression of the original type is taken. It is also used for keeping in a molten state the metal which is poured on the "mats" to form a single metallic cast of the entire page.

D. A. R. CHAPTER PAYS FOR FUNERAL EXPENSES

MILFORD, Nov. 6—Freelove Baldwin Stowe chapter, D. A. R., will defray the funeral expenses of Mrs. Mira Reah Dodge, formerly well known and prominent Washington society woman, who died in poverty here last week. Because of the circumstances surrounding her death the attention of the case was referred to the chapter and last night the executive board voted to pay the bill.

Mrs. Dodge was a native of Norwich, daughter of Joshua Reab, a lieutenant in the Civil war and a direct descendant of Revolutionary stock. Her husband, Charles Richard Dodge, was the organizer of the United States bureau of agriculture and was the first cabinet officer of the department. He was twice decorated by the president of France and was a member of the Legion of Honor.

Following the funeral which was held a week ago in Milford, the body was brought to this city for burial in the cemetery in her father's lot. So far as could be learned there are none of the family now living in Norwich.

BARBERS VOTE DEFIANCE OF HAIRDRESSERS BOARD

Resolutions protesting the recent action of the state board of hairdressers and cosmeticians which ruled that no beauty parlors may be combined with barber shops were passed in New Haven last Sunday at a joint meeting of journeymen and master barbers, at which a number were present from Norwich.

As there are at present many barber shops and beauty parlors conducted jointly to the convenience and satisfaction of their patrons under the supervision of the state board of examiners of barbers, it was voted that the master barbers and members of the state barbers protective association protest against the rulings of the state board of hairdressers and cosmeticians and urge all interested to overlook the ruling in its entirety. The resolution passed declared further that "we adhere strictly to the rules and regulations laid down by the state board of examiners of barbers of Connecticut and continue conducting our business in the future as in the past."

SHINERS HAND DEFEAT TO EAGLES IN PINOCHLE

The Shiners maintained their winning streak in the pinochle tournament with the Eagles Thursday evening by defeating the Eagles champion team by a margin of 1,915.

The prize winners for the evening were Chester Nowacki with 7,275 on the Shiners team, while H. Follendu was high on the Eagles with 7,040.

The following were the scores:

Shiners—Chester Nowacki 7,275; E. P. Mullins 6,955; A. Woodmansee 6,765; N. Petrone 6,625; W. O'Brien 6,425; J. Drake 6,405; Joe Kirchner 6,360; J. Leirich 6,190; Total 52,910.

Eagles—H. Follenuis 7,040; H. Marcus 6,900; Jas. Dwyer 6,885; W. R. Hastedt 6,665; E. J. Mullins 6,130; Thos. Fields 6,005; M. Shea 5,805; W. Caughey 5,565; Total 50,995.

Eagles Play Pinochle

In the pinochle tournament of the Eagles in which play was continued Thursday night at the Eagles home, the four high scorers were H. Marcus 7,170, D. Shea 7,080, D. Farrell 6,855, and T. Coughlin 6,770.

THAMESVILLE GANG IS DUE FOR TROUBLE

According to opinion expressed by some residents in Thamesville a gang of unruly boys who promenade the streets in that section of the town during the early evening hours on the search for barrels are going to get into trouble before the gladsome Thanksgiving day arrives. That is they are going to find themselves in hot water unless they cease their barrel stealing activities forthwith.

As one Thamesville resident puts it, "Barrel stealing isn't so bad a crime that boys ought to be hauled up in court. But when it gets to the point where a gang of young uncivilized Indians sneak into back yards and turn barrels and garbage tubs upside down and leave ashes and garbage in a pile on back lawns for someone else to clean up the boys responsible for such acts are going to find themselves in a peck of trouble; and I don't mean maybe."

Several days ago a Thamesville family lost a somewhat battered and paled ash barrel which now no doubt is one of a pile of other trophies awaiting the Thanksgiving night barrel burning celebration. The day after the barrel was stolen a new galvanized ash can was put in its place. The "gang" on the search for another trophy, sneaked into the backyard and finding the galvanised ash can not just the kind of fuel they wanted to carry off with them decided they would have a little "fun", anyway. They pulled the cover off the ash can, overturned the can left the ashes in a pile on the back lawn and then immediately disappeared.

BANQUET AND GIFT FOR PROFESSOR FARRELL

About 25 prominent business and professional men gave a farewell banquet Friday evening, in honor of Prof. Frank L. Farrell, who is now organist at St. Mary's church of the Dominican Fathers, located in the Yale section of New Haven.

The banquet was held at the home of Prof. Farrell at 262 Washington street and proved a most enjoyable affair. Dr. James J. Donohue was toastmaster for the evening, assisted by John P. Corcoran, and remarks were made by a number of Prof. Farrell's friends all expressing their feeling of loss in his departure from the city, but expressing pleasure in his advancement to a larger opportunity.

The surprise of the evening came when ex-Mayor Timothy C. Murphy paid a fitting tribute to Prof. Farrell and then presented him a substantial purse of gold, stating, that with it, went the sincere good wishes of a host of friends in Norwich. Prof. Farrell in accepting the gift expressed his regret at having to leave Norwich where he had formed so many pleasant friendships and stated that the gift would remain as a memorial to the happy years spent among his friends here.

Following the banquet Frank H. Murdy favored with a number of selections which were rendered in excellent voice and Prof. Farrell, at the piano played a number of selections which were heartily applauded by his delighted audience.

TELEPHONED POLICE THAT WATERING TROUGH STOLEN

No one has yet stolen the Soldiers' monument from Chelsea parade, the bell from the court house tower or any of the flashing beacons from the busy street intersections.

But a startled woman who swept her gaze over Washington square Friday morning might easily have believed any of these things possible, from what she saw, or rather did not see. The old familiar watering trough was gone.

She jumped to the conclusion that thieves had been at work and her next jump was to the telephone to let the police know what had happened over night. She breathed a sigh of relief and her heart stopped fluttering when she was assured that the relic of other days was still in the possession of the city, but had been moved to Falls avenue to continue its mission of usefulness for thirsty animals.

THURSDAY PINOCHLE CLUB CONTINUES ITS SERIES

When the Thursday Afternoon pinochle club was entertained this week at the home of Mrs. Herman Pukallus of West Main street, the first prize was taken by Mrs. Henry Geer, who played for Mrs. Albert Johnson, with a score of 7,080. Mrs. Charles Wright took second prize with a score of 7,050. The consolation trophy went to Mrs. Samuel Wilson, her score being 4,385. Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close.

Mrs. Harry Mason of Laurel Hill avenue, is to entertain the club next week.

Married In New Britain

Announcement has been received at Old Lyme of the marriage of William Bullock of Boulder, Colo., and Miss Helen I. Maynard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Maynard of New Britain. The Maynard family were former residents of Lyme. Mr. and Mrs. Bullock will reside in New Britain for the present.

AMERICAN LEGION ACCEPTS ARMISTICE SUNDAY INVITATION

Members of Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 6, American Legion, at their meeting Friday night, voted to accept the invitation of Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, to attend the special Armistice Day service at the church Sunday evening. It was voted that the members meet at the Legion rooms at 7 o'clock and go as a body to the church.

The meeting was presided over by Commander Samuel E. Jennes and considerable business was brought up. As no plans have been made for an observance of Armistice day in Norwich, the post voted that a wreath be placed at the World War monument on Chelsea Parade in honor of the hero dead of the World War.

Adjutant Jonathan L. Johnson read a letter regarding the "Un to France club," and several members spoke in favor of the idea. The convention of the Legion in 1926 is to be held in Paris, France, and thousands of American Legion men will attend. Norwich expects to send nearly a dozen men to the convention and the club proposal is to save so much weekly toward the fund, which is surprisingly low for the trip.

It was voted that Commander Jennes, and Comrades Rev. E. C. Dunbar and Warren Wilcox be a committee from the Legion to meet with the chamber of comerce and various representatives of local societies to discuss the Community Chest and hear a prominent speaker in relation to the movement to start a chest in Norwich. This matter had already been discussed by the Legion and a vote in favor of the Community Chest is a matter of record.

It was voted to thank the commander of the Marine Corps at the U. S. Submarine base for furnishing a firing squad at the burial of a World War veteran, in Groton, recently. A comunication from the Boy Scout headquarters regarding the need of leaders was also read to the meeting.

Past Commander William A. Anderson, chairman of the Legion show committee spoke regarding Princess Bonnie, which is to be presented this month by the Legion and stated that from all appearances the show would surpass any given previously by the post.

Adjutant Johnson notified the members that 1926 membership cards were on hand and urged a 100 per cent enrollment before the first of the coming month. After it was voted to make the next meeting of the legion a social meeting adjournment was taken.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS' HOLD SALE AND WHIST

The first day of the two day food and fancy work sale, being held at Buckingham Memorial by the Daughters of Veterans proved most profitable, most of the articles on sale for Friday being taken by patrons. The sale began in the afternoon and was followed in the evening by a whist and pinochle party at which a goodly number of tables were in play.

At the conclusion of play the prizes were distributed to the winners by Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury and Miss Lola B. Roath, as follows: whist, first prize H. Byington; second, Joseph Bowers. Pinochle, first prize, John Parsons; second, Mrs. H. Brown.

ST. JOSEPH'S ASSOCIATION CONTINUES DANCE SERIES

St. Joseph's association entertained 200 couples at a delightful dance Friday evening in Pulaski hall, it being the second number in a series of dances to be held this fall and winter. D'Atri's Wauregan hotel orchestra furnished the programme for the dancing which was enjoyed from 8:30 until midnight. The proceeds of these dances are to be turned over to St. Joseph's parish for the new school fund.

The committee in charge of the evening comprised John Oney, chairman, Joe Daniliowicz, Anthony Nowakowski.

The ticket sellers were Joseph Panek and A. Warakonski and the ticket collectors J. Mileski, M. Fenick. The ladies cloak room was in charge of Frank Suplicki, F. Keller and J. Stankiewicz while the men's coat room was in charge of B. Wojkiewicz, Joe Podriguz and Joe Golenefsky. Eddie Kohanski and Pete Korenkiewicz had charge of the refreshments and the candy table was in charge of Edward Kowalski.

JUNIOR CATHOLIC COUNCIL RECEIVES NEW MEMBERS

The monthly meeting of the Junior Council of Catholic Women was held Thursday evening, Miss Katherine Sullivan presiding. A number of new members were welcomed into the society. It was voted to give a sum of money towards the upkeep of Lakeville Manor, the Council vacation house at Lakeville, Conn., also for the benefit of a scholarship to any girl who is interested in social service work. An invitation was extended to members to attend the interstate meeting of the Connecticut Council, at the Hotel Bond, Hartford, today (Saturday).

The following advisory board was appointed to act on all matters of minor importance: Anna Carroll, Barbara Sullivan, Margaret Sheriden, Anna Brennan, Norine Shea, Stella Guertin, Fernard LaFreniere and Florence Taber.

Following the meeting a brief talk on gymnastics was given by Miss Mary O'Neill which proved most instructive to the members.

WHIST FOLLOWS MEETING OF HIGH OSGOOD LODGE

Hugh H. Osgood lodge, No. 6920, I. O. O. F., M. U. held its regular meeting in Steiner hall on Friday evening with Noble Grand Albert Turner presiding for the business session which was followed by a social program in which whist was played.

Those to take the prizes were Mrs. John Foley and W. Andrews, firsts; Miss Alice Beetham and George Morse seconds; Mrs. McKelvey and Arthur Olds consolations.

The next regular meeting of the lodge will be one of special interest as officers are to be nominated and other important business is to come up.

PIPE ARRIVES FOR NEW RESERVOIR LINE

The first shipment of the big 24 inch pipe for the line to the new Deep River brook reservoir arrived here on Friday from Boston. There were 1,300 feet of pipe in the lot and Abe Siegel, who has the carting contract, began to cart the pipe Friday to where the trench has been dug at Norwich Town.

Another shipment has been started from France and is expected to be delivered here in a short time.

IACOI GOES INTO LEAD WITH DUWELLS

HOLY CROSS FATHERS' DAY TO BE HELD FOR SECOND YEAR

Holy Cross graduates in Connecticut are interested in the announcement of a second "Fathers' Day" to be held at the college November 14th. Letters are being sent to fathers of students now at the Worcester institution inviting them to be present at the exercises Rev. Joseph N. Dinand, S. J., president of Holy Cross, states that the success of Fathers' Day inaugurated last spring has encouraged the trustees and faculty to make the event an annual affair. A Holy Cross Fathers' association has been formed, officers elected and a draft of the constitution and by-laws prepared for adoption next week. Those attending the reunion this year will be guests of the athletic association at the Holy-Cross-Rutgers game.

CITY'S WATER SUPPLY AGAIN IS DROPPING

Stony Brook reservoir was down 18 feet 1 inch, from the old full pond measurement early this week and the Fairview reservoir was down 7 feet 1-3 inches, both being very near the conditions that prevailed just a year ago when Stony Brook was down 22 feet and Fairview 9 feet, 2 inches. At the present time Stony Brook has six feet of water left in it from which draught can be made.

Last year Stony Brook reservoir was shut off completely on November 17 and it looks very much as if the same action would have to be taken about that time this year unless rains in the meantime result in a very substantial reinforcement of the city water supply.

MRS. PRISCILLA CLARK HELD IN $2,000 BAIL

HILLSDALE, N. J., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Priscilla Kent Clark, widow of William J. Clark, who was murdered Tuesday, tonight issued a statement in which she said that Joseph Cowen who is charged with the murder, is nothing more than a friend to her.

Mrs. Clark was released on $2,000 bail late today after her arrest as a witness at her husband's funeral yesterday.

The statement was given out through Mrs. Clark's lawyer, Frank Boettner, of Newark.

"I have nothing to conceal," it read. "Cowen was a friend of the family and spent more time with my husband and mother than with myself. I considered him a friend and the only time I was alone with him was once or twice when he drove me to Elizabeth to pay electric light bills. I was never alone with Cowen after dark. I have given the prosecutor every assistance and will continue to do so. I find it hard to believe what has happened. My only hope is that the murderer of my husband will pay every penalty."

No bail will be considered in the case of Cowen, who has been held by police since Tuesday, authorities said. He was not formally charged with the crime until late yesterday, however. Union County Prosecutor Davis said late today that he contemplated asking for an order to recall the grand jury which was dismissed on Wednesday, in order that the charge against Cowen might be placed before them immediately.

Mr. David said Cowen was not questioned today, and added that he considered the state "had a good case against Cowen." He said that "serious discrepancies" had been discovered in the statements given the police by Cowen and Mrs. Clark, but declined to say what the discrepancies were. Asked if he did not consider $2,000 bail a light bail for Mrs. Clark, he said the authorities "could get her if they wanted her."

THE HOMICIDE TRIAL OF DR. AND MRS. O. H. SWEET

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—(AP)—An element of mystery entered the second day's trial of Dr. and Mrs. Ossian H. Sweet and nine other negroes today when two sheaves of manuscript were displayed by the defense during the cross-examination of a state witness by Clarence Darrow, chief of the defense counsel.

The seven defendants are accused of homicide in connection with the fatal shooting of Leon E. Breiner, near Dr. Sweet's home Sept. 9 last.

Darrow did not offer the sheaves as exhibits. When asked by the prosecutor if he meant to do so, he replied: "Not just now."

Ray Dove, who lives across the street from the Sweet home, was the second witness. He said he, his wife, their baby, and two roomers were sitting on the front porch of their home when the shooting which resulted in the death of Breiner occurred.

Gun flashes came from the upper two front windows of the Sweet home, he testified, and from an upstairs window on the north side.

Breiner and Erik Hoberg, who was wounded by the gunfire, were standing at the side of Dove's porch, the witness said. He saw Breiner fall, he said, but did not know Hoberg had been wounded until later.

Darrow's first question in cross-examining Dove was: "Are you a member of any organization?"

Prosecutor Toms's objection was sustained by the court.

Later Dove said he and Breiner were Masons.

Darrow asked how long the witness knew that Dr. Sweet was going to move into the neighborhood.

"Why he had heard rumors for some time," answered Dove, "six weeks or two months, I should say."

In reply to Darrows question if he knew Sweet was a negro, the witness answered in the affirmative.

"And you didn't want him there?" asked Darrow.

"I don't believe in mixing white and colored together," replied

NEW PLAY SYSTEM TO BE TRIED OUT IN BROWN-BOSTON GAME THIS AFTERNOON

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 6—The football teams of Brown and Boston University were prepared tonight to make gridiron history in their meeting tomorrow in the new amphitheatre at Brown by testing for the first time the "play system" of measuring periods. While throughout the country mighty elevens are contesting for supremacy on many fields, football critics have intimated that at least a part of their interest will be centered on the game here and on the success or failure of the experiment.

The stop watch will be discarded and periods measured by the completion of 40 plays. A special addition to the scoreboard has been made to enable players and spectators to follow the game, while the officials chosen for tomorrow's contest have been familiarizing themselves with the new system.

Realizing that the future of the "play system" depends to a certain extent on its success tomorrow, the athletic authorities of the two colleges have been making every effort to have the innovation fairly tested. Local interest has been high and a record minor game crowd is expected.

Those favoring the system claim that it offers a remedy for the "stalling" tactics frequently indulged in by the team which has acquired a lead; and that it does away with the uncertainty and suspicion of timing accuracy and the frantic efforts of the distanced team to save time through the forward pass, frequently incompleted. Both players and spectators, it is claimed, are better able under the play system to know the exact progress of the game.

Opponents of the plan have suggested that it may result in abolishing of the forward pass, but the others claim it will merely restrict that form of attack to its legitimate uses.

The agreement under which the game will be played, is announced by Coach R. W. P. Brown of Brown University as follows:

A play is a recorded down. A down is recorded under the supervision of the referee, except when there is an incompleted kick off, except a penalty for foul or fouls unless declined, except a try-for-point except, when the referee waives the penalty for drawing an opponent offside and except when the snapper back does not hold the ball on the ground with its long axis at right angles to the place of scrimmage.

The game shall be 160 plays, divided into four periods of 40 plays each, although it may be a less number by mutual agreement of the contestant teams. In case no such agreement has been reached ten minutes after the time scheduled for beginning the game, the referee shall order the game to proceed and the full number of plays shall be played. This paragraph takes the place of rule four, Sec. 1, Par. 1.

Whenever the commencement of a game is so late that, in the opinion of the referee, there is a likelihood of the being interfered with by darkness, he shall, before play begins, arbitrarily shorten the four periods to such length as shall insure four equal periods being completed and shall notify both captains of the exact number of plays thus set. This paragraph takes the place of rule 4, Sec. 2, Par 1.

During an intermission the referee, with the consent of the two captains, may lessen the number of plays of the remaining period or periods. This

A period shall end when the designated number of plays has been played, but in case of a touchdown on the play of any period, the try-for-point shall be allowed. No play, however, shall be allowed for a fair catch on the last play of any period. This paragraph takes the place of Rule 4, Sec. 4.

The field judge shall keep the number of plays and upon inquiry shall give the number of the play that has just been played to a captain at any time during the game. He shall keep the time of intermission and delays, and may use the ordinary watch. This paragraph replaces Rule 18, Sec. 2.

Under delay of game, Sections 1 and 4 of Rule 14 are not used.

With the exception of these changes, all official football rules apply.

At the game tomorrow, there will be shown upon the score board figures 18 inches square informing the spectators of the number of the play that has just been completed.

AGGIES WILL PLAY NEW HAMPSHIRE SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 6—The Connecticut Aggies will have the opportunity to tumble an undefeated team from the heights tomorrow, when the University of New Hampshire eleven is met on Textile field at Manchester, N. H. It is the annual clash between the Granite state and Nutmeg elevens, one of the objective games of the year for each institutions. Proceeds of the contest, other than actual expenses and guarantees to the participating elevens, will be given over to the Visiting Nurses' Association of Manchester, and the New Hampshire Tuberculosis Association, which assures a strong backing from the people of Manchester, and a shattering of previous attendance records.

Connecticut's squad of twenty men, Coach Sumner A. Dole, and Manager John R. Kuhl left here at 9.30 this morning for Manchester. The trip is being made by auto bus and it is planned to have the final workout for the game on Textile field in Manchester this afternoon.

Four games have been played by the Granite Staters to date, three of which resulted in victories, and one a tie. Norwich was defeated 15-2 in the opening contest of the season, after which Rhode Island State was soundly licked by a score of 26-0. Following this, Springfield with the best team it has had in years went to Durham, and by virtue of a thrilling last half rally was able to come off the field with a 10-10 tie. A week ago, Tufts was defeated 9-6.

Contrasting with this splendid record, the Aggies have won three and lost three to date, Wesleyan, Tufts and Manhattan have fallen before Dole's men, while New York University, Maine and Massachusetts Aggies have defeated the Storrs eleven.

AGGIE TRACK TEAM ANNOUNCES 1926 SCHEDULE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 6—Announcement of the Connecticut Aggie track schedule for 1926 was made here today by Manager Donald C. Gaylord, '27, of Hartford. Four dual meets, and two intercollegiate meets is the slate drawn up for the state college trackmen.

Wesleyan is a newcomer on the Connecticut track schedule this year, marking the first time the two institutions have competed in this sport.

Stephen Daly of Hartford will handle the Aggie team, as in the past. The schedule: April 24, Wesleyan at Middletown; May 1, Rhode Island at Storrs; May 8, New Hampshire at Durham, N. H.; May 15, Eastern Intercollegiates at Springfield, Mass.; May 21, New England Intercollegiates at Boston; May 30, Trinity at Storrs.

NUTMEGS "RARIN TO GO" AGAINST J. C. SPEEDBOYS

After a two hour signal drill Friday evening, the Nutmegs are in A1 shape for Sunday's game at Jewett City with the Jewett City Speedboys. The game is to be played at Ashland Park which has been put in perfect condition for Sunday's encounter. The field has been roped off, the gridiron has been marked off and special police protection will be had.

The Speed-boys lineup will not be announced probably until starting time but it is rumored that several Plainfield High School and Conn. Aggie men will be in their lineup.

The starting lineup for the Nutmegs will be: Ends, Kelly and Carlin with Marchand and Burnes in reserve; tackles, Paliocha and Butts with Fidell and Boldrighine in reserve; guards, Grover and Hagberg with Brush and Adams in reserve; center, Sadinsky and Sullivan. In the backfield will be MacLaren at quarterback, Capt. F. McGrath and Ludlow at left half backs; C. McGrath and Conerty at right half back with Williams and Herlerits at full-back. With the above men the Nutmegs believe that they will bring home the bacon. The team will leave Franklin Square at 1:00 P. M. sharp Sunday and all member are requested to report on time.

After Sunday's game the Nutmegs expect to play at home games. Negotiations are now being carried on with teams from New Haven, Providence, Westerly and Hartford. Among the teams which the local boys are endeavoring to bring here are the Sacred of Westerly, Frog Hollow Senators A. C. of Westerly, Frog Hollow Senators of Hartford and Providence Colleians. It is hoped that these games can be put through and that local fans will turn out and support the local boys in their attempt at producing fast, clean Sunday football on a good field.

CANTER WINS RICH STAKE BY A SCANT MARGIN

Pimlico Race Track, BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Canter, winner of the Kentucky Jockey Club $23,000 stake at Churchill downs and the $15,000 Eastern Shore at Harve De Grace toppled the Pimlico futurity mile for two year olds, $40,000 added, with an out-thrust muzzle this afternoon. The clattering hoofs of the Idle Hour Farm's Bubbling Over were only inches behind when Clarence Turner pulled Canter's head down and shoved his nose first under the wire. Display, owned by Walter J. Salmon, was third and Commander J. K. L. Ross's Ironstick, an added starter, fourth

Canter paid $20.00 on a $2 pari-mutuel ticket. His time was 1:40 5-5 on a heavy track, ruling yesterday as the favorite, the J. Edwin Griffith colt was slighted in the wagering today, apparently because of rumors before the race that he had suffered from a fever.

Today's victory brought Canter's owner a total of $59,240, by virtue of his Maryland breeding. The futurity was worth $65,880 with $54,340 to the winner, with $5,000 added by the Maryland Jockey Club for a Maryland bred. Canter's reaching nose also brought his total winnings for the season to $104,474.

The Maryland colt trailed at the start, and had trouble with the club house turn. When he made his first bid on the back stretch, Bubbling Over and Prince of Wales were running easily in the lead. Rounding into the home stretch, Canter was crowding the Idle Hour Farm entry, and they fought it out shoulder to shoulder in the dash for the wire.

Fourteen juveniles started in the event.

McCLELLAN, BALL PLAYER, DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

CYNTHIANA, Ky., Nov. 6—Harvey McClellan, 31, former shortstop of the Chicago White Sox, died at a hospital here today after an illness of five months. McClellan started his baseball career on the small box mines of Harrison county and later performed for the Cynthiana team of the Blue-grass league and in the Western league before joining the White Sox. He was slated for the regular shortstop slot this year but illness prevented him from reporting, but when the Chicago City series was played, his teammates sent him his share of the gate receipts, $400. He will be buried here Sunday.

Hockey Meeting

MONTREAL, Nov. 6—(AP)—Professional hockey men from many Canadian cities and the United States were gathering in Montreal tonight for the annual meeting of the National Hockey League, which will open tomorrow.

It is understood that besides a motion to limit salaries, advanced by New York and Toronto, a motion is expected to go through to limit the number of players a club may carry through the season. The Toronto St. Patricks plan to move that the salary limit per club be set at about $35,000 a season.

Dartmouth Yearling Score Heavily

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 6—(AP)—The Dartmouth freshman football team established a season's record for high scoring among New England first year elevens today when it defeated Troy Conference Academy 70 to 0.

RED CLAD WARRIORS FACE CRUCIAL TESTS ON FOOTBALL FIELDS TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(By the A. P.)—Tinges of red, signs of football conflagration, flared at two great battlefields on the eastern front tonight as invaders approached—the crimson of Cambridge and the Carnelian of Cornell.

In this sectional strife, east pitted against east in traditional struggles, the advance of the western attackers has almost been forgotten. For the first time in this gridiron campaign the Atlantic seaboard is aglow with its own combat.

That Notre Dame comes east to face Penn State and Ohio Wesleyan advances on Syracuse is of interest but of little import to the eastern situation, for both Penn State and Notre Dame have been beaten and Syracuse is expected to have little trouble with the Ohioans, these are the only intersectional meetings of the day.

Cornell and Dartmouth, two undefeated and high-scoring machines, facing each other at Hanover, N. H., will command the attention of football students, for one of the greatest contests of the season is expected there. Enthusiasm over Harvard and Princeton, both conquered in earlier games is just as apparent as in past years but perhaps confined more to the faithful followers of both elevens than ever before.

The Red of Ithaca and Green of Hanover should be blended in a colorful spectacle, with about every regular in perfect condition for the fray. A damp field, caused by repeated frost in the cold hills of New England, will give neither squad an advantage, for both lines are powerful, fast-charging Phalanxes and the backfields are of the plunging, tackle-splitting type. There should be an exceptional duel between Oberlander of Dartmouth and Gasaner of Cornell.

Failing of gains by old-fashioned method, either eleven is capable of playing the forward passing game. It was in that way that Dartmouth won, 27 to 14, at the polo ground here a year ago, and Cornell is said to have been primed for an aerial thrust. Dartmouth rules favorite by reason of victories over Harvard and Brown, while Cornell's greatest conquest of the year was scored against Columbia a week ago by a small margin.

Harvard has high hopes in its engagement with Princeton the first game of the "big three" series. It has been a very lean year for the crimson, but a victory in Palmer stadium will wipe out all previous defeats. Harvard has lost to Dartmouth and Holy Cross and barely defeated William and Mary. All of the regulars, except perhaps Saltonstall at end, will be ready for the battle of their lives, with Maher, Miller, Captain Cheek, Coad yand Crosby in the backfield.

Princeton's Tigers are prepared, expecting an exacting contest. Their season, too, has been poor, with a loss against the navy and a defeat at the hands of Colgate. Captain McMillan, a husky lad, will start at the pivot post and Caulkins Slagle, Dignan and Gilligan behind the line.

Holy Cross and Fordham, both undefeated, come to grips at the Polo grounds, with the New England eleven a slight favorite after conquering Harvard, Fordham's easy victory over New York University a week ago has given its followers plenty of courage.

Pittsburgh and Washington & Jefferson meet in the new Pitt stadium and theirs should be a thrilling encounter, with the Panthers endeavoring to average a 58 to 0 defeat administered by the presidents a year ago.

Other games of interest in the eastern zone are: Yale vs. Maryland, Wesleyan vs. Williams, Lafayette vs. Rutgers, Columbia vs. New York University, Colgate vs. Providence and Navy vs. West Maryland.

Scores of the teams which meet tomorrow in last year's games follows:

Princeton 34, Harvard 0.
Dartmouth 27, Cornell 14.
Yale 47, Maryland 0.
Holy Cross 13, Fordham 0.
Williams 43, Wesleyan 0.
Rutgers 43, Lafayette 7.
W. & J. 19, Pittsburgh 0.
Brown 35, Boston University 0.
Muhlenberg 37, Franklin & Marshall 0.
Columbia 40, New York University 0.
Colgate 42, Providence College 0.
Massachusetts Aggies 28, Stevens 3.
Middlebury 26, Tufts 7.
Bucknell 39, Gallaudet 6.
Connecticut Aggies 6, New Hampshire 3.
Allegheny 14, Thiel 0.
Clarkson 26, Buffalo 0.
Dickinson 20, Gettysburg 12.
Maine 0, Bowdoin 0.
Penn Military 31, Susquehanna 3.
Swarthmore 13, Ursinus 6.

ILLINOIS-CHICAGO GAME IS FEATURE OF WESTERN GAMES

CHICAGO, Nov. 6—(A. P.)—Illinois the team which wrecked Pennsylvania's dream of a national football championship, and Chicago, undefeated in the western conference race, meet in campaign tomorrow in the outstanding contest of the middlewest.

A record-breaking crowd of 69,000 to 70,000 spectators will pack the $2,000,000 Illinois Memorial stadium to pay tribute to "Red" Grange, who plays his last conference game on the gridiron which three years ago gave him his start to fame.

The Chicago-Illinois game, a contest between bitter rivals, is the puzzler. Chicago may have lost to Pennsylvania and Illinois may have beaten the Quakers, but past defeats and victories will not mean anything.

In addition to the Maroon-Illinois battle, the western conference has other games up for decision tomorrow, the results of which will figure in determining the 1925 champion, Michigan, undefeated and with its goal uncrossed, comes to Chicago to play Northwestern.

Iowa's championship aspirations will receive a severe test, meeting Wisconsin at Iowa City tomorrow.

SHUGRUE GETS VERDICT OVER SAMMY SANCHEZ

TORRINGTON, Nov. 6—(A. P.)—William Shugrue, of Waterbury, was given the referee's decision, over Sammy Sanchez, of Mexico, in a ten round boxing match here tonight. The decision was not popular with the spectators. They are featherweights.

Rex Bell, of Ausonia, was given the decision over Sammy Lawson, of Thomaston in a six round bout.

Ray Cummings, of Staten Island, won the decision over Baby Doll, of Waterbury.

Young Dundee, of Waterbury, won from Meadow Brooks of Bristol when the latter's seconds threw a towel into the ring in the fifth round of a scheduled six round bout.

PRINCTON FAVORED TO WIN OVER HARVARD

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 6—(A. P.)—Final workouts for both the Princeton and Harvard football squads preparatory to their twenty-sixth annual meeting at Palmer Stadium tomorrow were held here today and both squads were pronounced fit by their coaches.

The Harvard party of 55 persons, 36 of whom represent the squad, arrived this morning and this afternoon tried out their pays at the stadium. Following practice they were taken to Trenton where they were to spend the night.

The Tiger team took its final workout on University field, Coach Bill Roper putting his men through a hard signal drill. Single features in the afternoon's activities, he being called upon for most of the running and passing for the first backfield.

Coach Roper announced that if there was no rain tomorrow he would for the first time this year permit his team to uncover a rounded game of football. The veteran coach stated that he considered his present team decidedly stronger than the one that defeated Harvar on Soldiers field last year.

Hundreds of alumni and visitors invaded the town today but the main progress was not expected until tomorrow. Among those who plan to watch the game tomorrow are J. Butler Wright, assistant secretary of state; Hon. Henry P. Fletcher, ambassador to Italy; William "Big Bill" Edwards and many others.

BABE RUTH TO TRAIN ON THE GOLF COURSE

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(A. P.)—Preparations by Babe Ruth to spend the winter months on the links in Florida were explained today as due to a conviction on the part of the erstwhile home run king that golf will better condition him for regaining his lost diamond laurels than any other form of exercise.

The illness which overtook Ruth last spring almost as soon as he reached the southern camp of the New York Yankees, after the big outfielder had put in the winter on his farm in Sudbury, Mass., convinced the American league siege gun that he should do his off-season conditioning in a warmer climate. Ruth claims he is no fonder of golf than he is of shooting big game, but he has already taken a hunting trip into the north and is expected shortly to leave for the south to begin a new battle against excess weight and weak legs.

"A ball player doesn't get as much work during a season as people think," said Ruth. "Half the time during a game he is on the bench. In the mornings and at night he does nothing but sit around the hotels. I believe ball players do more sitting than any other outdoor men. For that reason their legs stay in shape for speed but not for endurance.

"When we loaf in the winter it is a tough job to get back in shape, and I figured that golf in a warm climate should make me just right. Florida sounds good to me. Just watch and see if I don't show you something big next spring."

PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL IS MENACE TO AMATEURS

NEW YORK, Nov. 6. (AP)—Efforts to popularize professional football this season bring the colleges of the country face to face with "even greater difficulties than formerly in keeping up amateur standards," Brig Gen. Palmer E. Pierce, president of the National Collegiate A. A., announces in issuing his call for the 20th annual meeting of the association at the Hotel Astor here Dec. 29 and 30.

The subject of amateurism and a definition of the amateur law is expected to be a high spot in the discussions of the meeting.

Summer baseball is another problem being dealt with by the N. C. A. A. and President Pierce experesses the hope that a committee dealing with this, headed by Major John L. Griffith of Chicago," will assist in solving the vexed question of a practical definition of the amateur law and its application to intercollegiate athletics."

The N. C. A. A. also is at odds with a recent ruling of the International Amateur Athletic Federation over the sanction of international college athletic meets, according to President Pierce. The effect of the ruling is that permission for such meets as well as permission for university athletes to go outside their own country for such competition must be obtained through the national sports governing body, which is the Amateur Athletic Union in the case of the United States.

General Pierce takes issue with this, however, pointing out that colleges have never before asked authority of an outside organization to participate in such events and that "attempts made to outlaw undergraduates who participated in international collegiate meets have not been successful."

"It is hopeful," General Pierce continues, "that the International Amateur Athletic Federation, at its meeting in 1926, will amend its regulations and not again attempt to exercise jurisdiction in athletic competions between representatives of colleges and universities in this and other countries."

Speakers at the annual meeting of the N. C. A. A. will include President Hopkins of Dartmouth and General Drain, commander of the American Legion.

HIGH SCHOOL DIRECTORS INVITED TO BRADFORD GAME

The pupils, teaching staff and athletic coaches of the Norwich Free Academy, Chapman Tech of New London, and the Stonington High School have been invited by the management of the Bradford Football Club soccer team of Bradford, R. I., to be the club's guests on Sunday afternoon, November 8, at 2:30 o'clock when Bradford and Wayposset, leading team of the Rhode Island Soccer League, meet in a league contest. Bradford has added three new players, all of whom have previously played on big teams in England, and this additional strength makes the Bradford team look like like the best that has ever been assembled in this section of New England. For the information of Norwich guests, there is a fine paved road from Westerly to Bradford with plenty of parking space, for which no charge is made.

Yantic vs. Tigers Sunday

The Yantic A. A. football team is preparing for the Greeneville Tigers who they play on Sunday. Although the first game played by Yantic ended in a disastrous defeat the Yantic boys are out to get the scalp of the Tigers. It will be a different team entirely that will be seen at Yantic on Sunday. Among the players on the Yantic team will be C. Cardle, J. Cobb, Red Andrews, J. Lamphere, "Bull" Nawrocki, Simrock, Rogers, Reed, B. Lasky, Steinman, Berkman and H. Schatz.

TIGERS IN FINE SHAPE FOR BATTLE WITH YANTIC

Sunday afternoon at Mohegan park field the well-known Greeneville Tigers will clash with the Yantic A. A. eleven for what should be a treat to the local football fans. The Yantic outfit is reputed to be one of the heaviest teams in Connecticut and the Tigers are well known for keeping up the fight until the final whistle, and also for old-time "science."

The Yantic crew has had three nights of good practice, while Coach Boothe of the Tigers has worked his men out to very good advantage five nights this week. The Tigers lost a well-played game last Sunday to the Jewett City Speedboys by a little hard luck but are out to win all future encounters.

The Tigers will have such players as McGowan, a former N. F. A. star, at center; G. Maloney, Christe and also M. Recherson of the N. Y., N. H. & H. Engineering school, three huskies who can pile 'em up, will hold down the guard positions, Lukowski, a former N. F. A. wizard; Sullivan, of the Western A. C.; Longevin, a former Wilby High wonder, will play tackles. The end positions will be played by Gay, a former U. S. F. star, Kid Mac, the ex-Pastime A. C. flash, Red Monahan, a former Dublin University end; in the backfield will be "Lou" Gorton, the hard-hitting fullback from Mercersburg Academy; the halfbacks will be "Nurmi" Nelson, the ten second man; Bill Higgins, speed demon and ex-N. F. A. star, and Swanton of New Haven A. A.

The quarterback position will be handled by Major Breen, a former Warner Military school quarterback, and Johnny Tennant, the snappy signal caller who is a product of Stevens Tech, who keeps the Tigers in the fray every minute of the game. The game will start at 2.45 p. m. sharp.

INDOOR BASEBALL LEAGUE TO BE INAUGURATED

An indoor baseball league with games to be played at the Armory is to be formed by Battery B in the near future. The league is to be composed of four teams and games will probably be played twice a week. The four teams to enter will probably be Battery B, Nutmeg A. C., Joe Faber's All-Stars and another team to be named later. It is thought that the other team will be either the Fitchville All-Stars or the Tigers. This effort on the part of the local military organization will be greatly appreciated by local fans as it will afford an opportunity to see good, clean, fast games and pass away the long winter evenings. On the roster of the above-mentioned teams there appears the names of many fast men, well-known to local sport lovers so that good fast contests should be in store at the Armory this winter.

Monday evening Joe Faber's All Stars will invade Norwich for an exhibition game with Battery B at the Armory. Faber's team contains many leaguers and local semi-pro luminaries who will give the Battery a good run in order to avenge the 27 to 1 defeat sustained at their hands several weeks ago. Joe Faber will pitch and try to bring the bacon back to Jewett City.

YALE-MARYLAND GAME IMPORTANT FOR YALE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 6—(AP)—The Maryland football squad will arrive here early tomorrow morning ready to meet the Yale Bulldog in the bowl tomorrow afternoon. The southerners, characterising the Eli eleven as one of the best in the East this year have expressed a hope that they will be able to keep the Yale men from scoring.

The game will be an important one for Yale as it will determine somewhat, the final choice for many of the positions on the team for the "big three" games to follow. It was announced tonight that the first varsity team would start against Maryland tomorrow, but that unless the Maryland team proves more powerful than expected, the first team would be removed at an early point to enable the long list of substitutes to get some needed experience.

Westerly Beats Warwick

Westerly High swamped Warwick High Friday afternoon at Westerly, 37 to 0.

Chapman Smothers Stonington

Chapman Tech completely smothered Stonington High Friday afternoon at New London, winning by a score of 20 to 7.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

A new fight arena has been opened in Memphis.

The number of billiard players in the United States exceeds 3,000,000.

Winter racing at Havana this year will not get under way until about Christmas.

St. Louis is to have a municipal athletic commission to supervise professional and amateur boxing and wrestling matches.

The dean of English sportsmen is Richard Ferris, who at ninety-nine years of age is still an enthusiastic rider to hounds.

The course in Van Cortlandt Park, New York, where many national and metropolitan cross-country championships are held, is lightly more than six miles in length.

The oldest rowing organization in the United States is the Atlanta Boat Club of New York. The club was first formed in 1848 by ferrymen plying between New York and Hoboken.

Winners at the fortieth annual exhibition of the National Horse Show association, which is to be held in New York city the week of November 23, will divide $35,000 in cash prizes among them.

On the way to Los Angeles, where a game will be played with the University of Southern California on November 21, the University of Iowa football team will stop for workouts at Hutchinson, Kas., and El Paso, Texas.

Frank J. Marshall, the American champion, is among the competitors in the international chess masters tournament now being held in Moscow, and which is the first big event of its kind to be held in Russia since before the war.

Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, the supreme arbiter of baseball, does not look much like a diamond star today, but it is a matter of record that back in his youthful days in Logansport, Ind., he was a nifty twirler for amateur and semi-pro teams and it is said that he refused several offers to join professional clubs.

Out of 125 college football games played throughout the United States on October 24, thirteen of the games resulted in deadlocks, and in eight of these no points were scored on either side. In seventy of the games the defeated teams were whitewashed.

Yale and West Point met on the gridiron for the first time in 1893, and in the 28 games played between the two the Elis have won 16 to 3 for the Army. The last time the Army won was in 1911, by a score of 6 to 0. Seven games between the two teams have resulted in tie scores.

The first Dartmouth-Pennsylvania football game was played back in 1896 and Pennsylvania won. In 1913 a series of annual games was begun. Dartmouth won three in succession before Pennsylvania got a tie in 1915 and followed with two victories. Then Dartmouth came back by winning three years in succession.

ACADEMY INVADES STRONGHOLD OF ANCIENT RIVAL, BULKELY, TODAY

The Academy gridsters after a week of intense practice will meet their ancient rivals, Bulkeley, at Morgan Park this afternon in what promises to be one of the best interscholastic football games that has been played in this section of the state for some time. Both teams are in the pink of condition after their week of intensive drilling, and are both confident of winning by a decisive score. The local eleven has a decided advantage over their down the river rivals and will enter the game the favorites to win. The Academy after their victory over Plainfield High and Chapman Tech are confident that they will not have much trouble in turning back Bulkeley.

Coach Whitney has kept the team hard at work all this past week and in practice Friday afternoon they looked as if it would take a better team than Bulkeley is reputed to have to beat them. The local boys got off to a bad start but in their past two games have made up for it and are confident that they will win the remainder of the games on this seasons schedule. Polsky and Mousley, who have been out of practice this past week due to injuries received in the Chapman Tech game last Saturday, are expected to be in the starting lineup this afternoon. Mousley had light workouts on Thursday and Friday and is back in his old form once again. Polsky, however had some trouble with his leg and was not in uniform until yesterday afternoon and then was only given a short workout. Mullens, another member of the squad who has also been out of practice due to an injury will not be in uniform but will see the game from the sidelines. The remainder of the squad is in the pink of condition and those who are called upon to play should give a good account of themselves. No definite line-up was to be had at a late hour Friday evening but the following are the men who will probably start: Ends, Marks, Sargent; tackles, Stefano, Mousley; guards, Fiddle, Polsky; center, Schwartz. Norm Courbois will probably hold down his regular berth at quarterback with C. Brewer at right half and either Williams or Pheno Tombari at left. Radie Ed Brew

Just do your best
In days of joy or day of strife
Just do your best
In everything both great and small
Just take a hand and roll the ball

Just do your best

If something great you'd like to start
Just do your best
If others tell you you're not smart
Just do your best
Get in the place where you belong
Take up your pace and jog along
And prove the other fellows wrong.

Just do your best
And find there's nothing you can say
Just do your best
Assume the best of meaning air
And tell the world you are a bear
Let others stop you if they dare
Just do your best

If something you would like to do

Lay of Dried-Apple Pie

Sunning themselves on the southern porch,
Where the warm rays fall from the towering torch
Of the great sun flash in the glowing noons,
The drying apples in long festoons
Drink the breath of the crisp fall days,
Borrow the blush of the warming rays,
Storing their sweetness their rich bouquet
Against the savage and wintry day
When the housewife's fingers shall by and by Mould them into dried-apple pie.

There they mellow and there they brown
Hanging enough to a man from town
Merely strings of some shrunken fruit,
Swung in the sun. And yet they're mute
Memory-ticklers to those who know
The ways of the farm in the long-ago:
The kitchen table, the heaping store
Of round red apples upon the floor,
The purr of the parer, the mellow snip
As the busy knives through the apples slip,
The merry chatter of boys and girls,
The rosy clatter of paring curls,
As hurrying knives and fingers fly,
O'er the luscious fruit for dried-apple pie.

I'm idly thinking it sure must be
That the rollicking sport of the apple bee,
The sweetness of smiles, the touch of the white
Hands flashing there in the candlelight,
Must all in a mystic way be blent
In one grand flavor;—that such was lent
To those mellowing strings, those festoons dun
Swinging there in the late fall sun,
For lo, as I look I seem to see
A dream of the past, a fantasy—
A laughing, black-eyed roguish girl
Chanting the words of the old mock spell
That all we children knew so well:
"Three times round and down you go!
Now who is the one that loves me so?"

Merely a fancy, a passing gleam
Of the old, old days; a sudden dream
Begotten by some of a blurring eye
And the tricking sonr of a big blue fly:
Merely a fancy, and yet, ah me,
How often I've wondered where she can be.
There they mellow and there they brown
Homely objects to folks from town:
Only some apples hung to dry
And doomed to be finally tombed in pie.

Old Man Hudson's Auction

Old man Hudson's auction day
Drew a fearful mob.
All the village folks were there,
Eager on the job,
For the things he had to sell
Were "priceless" so he said;
Tables all with marble tops,
And a walnut bed.

Antique hunters came in droves,
For 'twas noised around
That many relics of the past
Could hereabouts be found,
Did Jim Felton stood.
And his sunbaked, wrinkled face
Seemed as carved from wood.

"Now folks—what'm bid for this?
Come set the ball along."
So his voice droned clearly out
In a quiet ring-song.
He never laughed nor cracked a smile:
But his wit was keen.
And the bids came thick and fast—
No time in between.

Old Jim Felton knew the "folks."
Called them all by names;
Seeing Jones, the butcher there,
Fourteen big gilt frames,
Dishes, too, of divers sorts,
Hooks and stands and chairs,
Baby's cradle, kettles, pans,
Andirons, several pairs.

Then a chap who sells antiques
Said he'd like to bid
For the doors about the house—
And that's what he did.
Everybody laughed at that,
Thought it such a joke;
But the joke was all on them.
For the doors were oak.

Then the other antique friends
Lost inside the place,
And they bid the wainscots off.
It was just a race
To see who'd make the biggest haul:
Cupboards torn from wall,
Attic stairs pulled out of place
In the old front hall.

Old man Hudson's wreathergs home
Looked a dreadful sight
When the auctioneer was through;
But that very night
Old man Hudson chuckled long,
And he told his wife
That they'd made enough that day
To keep them both through life.

PATIENT MERCY JONES

Let us venerate the bones
Of patient Mercy Jones.
Who lies underneath these stones.

This is her story as once told to me
By him who still loved her, as all men might see—

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS

Nov. 11—Club No. 1 meets in Chamber of Commerce hall, Willimantic.

Darius, her husband, his age seventy years,
A man of few words, but for her many tears.
* * * * * * * *
She was patient with dogmas, where light never dawns,
She was patient with people who trod on her lawns,
She was patient with folks who said blue skies were gray,
And dentists and oxen that pulled the wrong way:
She was patient with phrases no husband should utter,
She was patient with cream that declined to be butter;
She was patient with buyers with nothing to pay;
She was patient with talkers with nothing to say;
She was patient with bunglers and fault-finding churls,
And tall awkward lads who came courting her girls;
She was patient with crockery no art could mend,
And chimneys that smoked every day the wrong end;
She was patient with readers who never would go;
She was patient with relatives, when, uninvited
They came and devoured, then complained they were slighted
She was patient with crows that got into the corn,
And other dark deeds out of wantonness born;
She was patient with lightning that burned up the hay,
She was patient with poultry unwilling to lay;
She was patient with rogues who drank cider too strong,
She was patient with sermons that lasted too long;
She was patient with boots that tracked up her clean floors;
She was patient with pedlers and other smooth bores;
She was patient with children who disobeyed rules,
And, to crown all the rest, she was patient with fools.

The neighboring husbands all envied the lot
Of Darius, and wickedly got up a plot
To bring o'er his sunshine an unpleasant spot.

This plot to break down the patience of Mercy Jones was for her husband to bring home for her use as firewood the crookedest lot of sticks he could find.

Home came the gnarled roots and a crookeder load
Never entered the gate of a Christian abode.
A ram's horn was straighter than any stick in it;
It seemed to be wriggling about every minute;
It would not stand up and it would not lie down;
It twisted the vision of one-half the town.
To look at such fuel was really a sin,
For the chance that starshismus would surely set in.

Darius waited for the outburst of indignation from Mercy which would indicate that her patience was exhausted at last. But she continued uncomplainly to use the crooked sticks until all were gone, and it was time to gather another load. Then Darius expected to "catch it."

But Mercy, unruffled, was calm like the stream
That reflects back at evening the sun's perfect beam:
And she looked at Darius, and lovingly smiled.
As she made this request, with a tender voice unriled;
"We are wanting more fuel, I'm sorry to say;
I burn a great deal too much every day,
And I mean to use less than I have in the past:
But get, if you can, dear, a load like the last:
I never saw wood that I liked half so well—
Do see who has nice crooked fuel to sell;
There's nothing that's better than wood full of knots.
It lays so complete round kettles and pots.
And washing and cooking are really like play
When the sticks nestle close in so charming a way."

OLD CORNINGTOWN

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: About two miles from Norwich center may be found the charming old farming settlement of Corningtown. Masterly from the main thoroughfare, the old Corning road winds up the sloping hillside, through the original Corning tract, and to this day retains its initial chdracteristics. Along this old road modern houses have been erected, but the old Corning homesteads may easily be recognized, in their quaint composure among these newer dwellings.

From the brow of the hill the scattered farm houses, the way beyond hills, the wandering courses of the Shetucket river and yonder spires of Norwich city, form a fascinating picture of contentment. This must have been a marvelous outlook of uplands and river before thoroughfares had been cut, disfiguring factories had marred the beauty of the Shetucket river banks, and the city extended to the neighboring shores.

The history of the Corning family in America dates back to 1621 from a Samuel Corning of Beverly, Mass. Shortly after this date Nehemiah Corning came from Hampshire county, Mass., and bought this large tract of land, which has ever since been known as old Corningtown. His sons Uriah, Jedediah and Elias built their homes along the borders of the old Corning road, and some of these homesteads are still occupied by a Corning or descendants. Each successive generation in atavistic custom bought their home lots from the previous one, and much of the land remained in the Corning family for four generations. It is safe to say that the sixth generation of Cornings is living in old Corningtown.

The original Corning homestead, which was known as the little "red house" is located at a distance from the Corning road. Doubtless it was the custom in these days to build the homestead in the middle of the farm. It is said that the builder of the "red house," with its sloping roof almost touching the ground, has never been ascertained. It is still standing, but no longer habitable as a dwelling.

But it was always a delight to look across the hills from the main highway toward the little "red house" so reposeful, and the two stately southern pine trees, which seemingly stood by its side. These pine trees were distinctly not of native growth, and so unlike their companions as to be always conspicuous. Up to within a few years these trees were a picturesque feature of old Corningtown, but have now been removed.

The story of Joe Bill's hole has always been of more than potential interest in old Corningtown, and every generation faithfully passed on "Joe Bill's hole."

Every school child, and perhaps every visitor was supposed to make the ascent to Joe Bill's hole. The writer climbed the rocks many years ago, and with awe and reverance peered into the recesses of that gloomy cavern. The story is that Joe Bill in 175- made his home in a little cabin in the neighborhood of Corningtown—a depression in the ground is yet pointed out as the original spot. This Joe Bill was said to have made counterfeit money, which he either made or hid in this cave. According to authentic history, he was convicted and executed on Bedloe's Island before the war of the revolution.

It is many years since I peered into the depths of Joe Bill's hole, but I fain would have again made the ascent and climbed the treacherous rocks for a glimpse into this famous hole, which remains undisturbed to this day, and is as of yore one of the interesting land marks of old Corningtown.

But the old Corning family is nearly extinct, and but few remain to carry the name in old Corningtown. Yet, the flowers still bloom by the roadside, the myrtle and the old-fashioned roses still freshen the door yards, and the trees lean lovingly over the old homesteads. The homesteads and the stone walls which their hands so patiently laid are unchanged, and the mountain laurel blooms in the springtime as luxuriantly as ever around the entrance to Joe Bill's hole. Across the fields the winds sigh and the shadows play over the old tombstones which for two centuries or more have marked the final resting place of many of the pioneers of old Corningtown.

THE LITTLE SPINSTER.

MUCH TO BE THANKFUL FOR

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: How are you all this bright and pleasant day? It makes us wish that October had given us more such days. Just think we shall start in on November tomorrow, and Thanksgiving will be with us ere we realize it. The falling leaves, the fields of brown grass all show us that winter is slowly approaching.

I don't think the autumn foliage was ever more beautiful. The variable bright hued tints were surely pleasing to the eye—but they are going and soon all nature will be wrapped in its winter sleep to come alive and to be more beautiful if possible than ever in the spring.

I suppose the most of you are settling down for the fall and winter. The season of canning is nearly over, although I suppose many of you do a little through the winter.

I am sorry to read of so many who have had to face sorrow and part with some dear one. We all grieve over the passing on of a sister but we feel and know that it is their gain. We miss the letters and often think of them as their influence lives on.

To the sick ones whether at home or in the hospital I think of you and you have my love and sympathy.

Huldy and Remember Me: I wonder if you have gone home or are still in the hospital. I know how one longs to go home. I was in a hospital for nine months, but still if it is best you will be bright and cheery and continue to look forward to returning. Things may look dark for some of us but let us pierce inward for the silver lining to our cloud. I think it helps when feeling despondent to count or repeat to ourselves our blessings. If we do even when trouble almost overwhelms us we find we have much, very much to be thankful for.

I have enjoyed reading of the picnics and now the monthly indoor social meetings. It gives the housewife a change and rest from her daily routine and then the opportunity of becoming acquainted with each other means much, for "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." So take time when you can for a little pleasure to mingle with others gives food for thought when we are home darning stockings, etc. Go while you can, and I hope every single one of you will have a very happy winter. Lets keep this Corner full. Let's every one, the younger writers and also the older ones write. I do wish the older sisters would write oftener.

I am not feeling very good but try to be as little a burden as I can. I try to practice what I preach, to be bright and cheery. If one tries one accomplishes something. So we can keep on trying. Remember I think of you all. Best wishes.

DIANA.

SOME NEW SALADS

Dear Editor and Members o the Social Corner: Am sending some new salads.

Butterfly Salad: Take slices of canned pineapple and cut in half, put round sides together, garnish edges all around with thin slices of pimento and dot the wings with same. Use an olive for the head and made tendrils of curled celery, standing out from either side of head. Make body of light American cheese. Shape it long and round, and put a teaspoon of mayonnaise into small lettuce leaf at back end of body. Very pretty; also delicious.

Macaroni Salad: One large head lettuce, 1 grated onion, 1-2 cup chopped celery, 1-2 pimento cut in thin slices, 1-3 cup schredded cabbage, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 package of albon macaroni that has been cooked and chilled, serve on lettuce leaves with narrow slices of pimento.

Tulip Salad: Cut small pears into form of tulips, arrange on individual serving plates, two or three to a serving, and fill between petals with different dressings.

Marshmallow Salad: Four bananas, half can pineapple, 1-4 pound white grapes, 1-4 pound marshmallow, half cup walnut meats, cut in small pieces. Serve with fruit whipped cream

Fruit Dressing: Beat one egg, all juice of one lemon and one orange, 1-2 cup sugar, little salt, cook in double boiler until thick and when cool add 1-2 pint whipped cream

CLUB NO. 5'S MEETING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: We have had our meeting at the Buckingham and was such an enjoyable one. There was a large crowd and all were so pleased with the fine dinner and fine entertainment of music and readings. Our hostess, Truth, with her helpers, Mid Clover, Saville, Prudence, Plain Jane, and Silver Leaf, certainly were very efficient in their efforts to please us all. Honey Dew was our pianist and all enjoyed it very much.

Bridge and Prudence presented us with ten yards of linen for tablecloths.

With best wishes for the success of the Social Corner Club No. 5.

I would like a social Corner pin.

CLUB NO. 1 MEETS ARMISTICE DAY

Dear Members: As I had charge of the program at the meeting of Club No. 1 last time I did not report, as I thought some one else would.

Our October meeting was another red letter day with an attendance of 70, and we were favored with the presence of Jennie, Mayis, Whirlwind, Foxglove, and Olive.

Rose Lee and her assistants were able hostesses, and everything was ready, and right on time.

The tables were attractively decorated in yellow, and fairly swayed under the weight of food, they were so heavily laden with baked beans, delicious salads, pies, cakes, doughnuts galore, cheese, fruit and coffee.

Directly after this followed the program.

Readings by Sincerity, Jennie, Lonesome Pine, Neighbor Eveready, Whirlwind, Selinda, Olga, Paleface interspersed with songs.

I thank all who assisted.

Our next meeting is Armistice day. Come prepared with patriotic readings and let's sing, Keep the Home Fire's Burning, The Long, Long Trail and review our community singing.

Don't forget to bring your songs along.

As ever and always,
NEIGHBOR EVEREADY.

WINDOW CURTAINS

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Perhaps not all have finished the fall housecleaning. However, I should like to offer a few suggestions regarding window curtains, especially those for bedrooms. Having had two of my bedrooms recently repapered and wood work and floors varnished, it appeared to me, the curtains needed a little up-to-date touch, also.

In the different stores, I had observed samples for demonstrations of the valence, or deep ruffle overhanging the top of the white curtain. These are of different material some fancy cretonne and others of brocaded silks, etc. I noticed in one store the kind of rod that held curtain and valence, and found there were two rods on a single fixture, each end attached to the window casing. As I had all new rods (purchased not long ago) I did not see fit to cast them aside, so decided to study up some plan, to utilize what I had and thereby make the single rod, do double duty for curtain and valence. First I selected some very pretty blu crinkle crepe (having a small butterfly design) for one of my rooms, that has white and blue figured paper. For each window I took one yard of the crinkle crepe; first cut a strip 3 inches wide from one edge (that is lengthwise) which will furnish the tie backs for the curtains, which style is very popular now. Cut the large piece of crinkle crepe in half, width ways, and join ends together.

Next stitch a little narrow hem on each edge, then fold over 5 inches, as if to make a hem, and from the edge of fold 1 1-2 inches, stitch across, then 3 1-2 inches from that line of stitching, run another line of stitching. This is for inserting the rod. You will observe now that about 3 inches of loose cloth remains below the insertion, and I sew on this to gape along the top edges of your long white curtains, which of course will be on the under side of the valence proper, which should leave about 11 inches to fall over the outside in finished condition. The rods having the curved ends, make the most attractive display, although the straight across rods can be used just the same. Take the 3 inch strip that was first cut off, for the tiebacks, which cut each piece, fold in the edges, and stitch around as a band. These will make about the right length to tie the curtains back. I used small brass head tacks, and tacked them in between the edge of window casing and wall, so as not to mar the wood work. I think the tie-backs of the same material as the valence, match up very attractively. The crinkle crepe makes a very pretty deep ruffle, as it is light and soft, and hangs in ripple folds.

As some prefer to carry out a particular color scheme for their bedrooms, the crinkle crepe valence and tie-backs have an important part, and there are many beautiful shades, in plain, or designs to select from. As I said before, I used blue, for one room, and the other room, I used ornange, both had a floral design. I am quite pleased with my new window display of both rooms, with a small expenditure. Perhaps some one else, as well as I have this way of using one rod, to support both curtain and valence, but if not, then just try this plan, for it works well.

To add a few lines more, will say, in my blue room, I have the stamped "butterfly" on pillow shaws, and bureau covers, work in blue silk, and in the "orange" room, I have, golden silk outlined on miniature baskets of flowers, for the bureau cover and pillow shams. This latter room is where I sleep and dream amid the Social Corner colors. Best wishes to each and every sister,

JENNIE.

CARING FOR BABIES

Dear Corner Members: When making white sauce, make an extra cup and set it away in the ice box. It will be useful to warm up for lunch in a day or two. Make plenty of good brown gravy to serve with your roast meat, and keep part of it especially for the various forms in which the roast may reappear.

Reader of the Social Corner: It is some time since my children were small, so I will answer your letter about Babies to the best of my knowledge. Baby may be taken outdoors for an airing at any time between nine in the morning and two in the afternoon, in early autumn say October but in the summer on a very hot day choose the early forenoon or late afternoon.

Babies should not be rocked to sleep neither should you give them soothing syrup and I think they should be protected from all excitement.

A healthy new born baby will sleep 17 to 20 hours out of the 24. At six months they should have at least 14 hours; at one year, 14 hours; and during the fifth to eighth years 11 to 13 hours.

I think babies should sleep alone. I read some time ago about a baby being smothered to death sleeping with the mother and every year many babies are killed in that way. I think it a good way to teach them to go to bed at 6 o'clock. It is better for the babies and the mother has a time to rest. I don't know how long you have tried nursing your baby. If you are ill or run down I would consult the family physician. I do know that babies who nurse from the breast will often have diarrohea because the mother is sick or tired out. Naturally the milk will make them sick but so long as the mother is well the baby will be well. I would not drink tea or coffee for it does not improve the milk. I will tell you one or two things that make wonderful milk and that is for the mother to drink pure milk and drink freely of water. If I could nurse my baby I should. I have read where eight to ten bottle fed babies die to one breast fed and I certainly believe it, and I would advise never to feed the baby on a bottle without the advice of a physician. One of my children I brought up on a bottle, but it is hard to know what to do. At last I used cow's milk diluted with imperial granum water. Barley water is good and oatmeal water, but I would not give babies milk or the bottle without consulting a physician and finding out what agrees with him. Be sure and not cook your milk too long as it makes them constipated. I will say one thing and agree with the doctor who says that good clean milk does not need preserving, sterilizing or pasteurizing. The pasteurization of milk is a complicated process and bad results may follow if not properly done. The use of cooked milk for any length of time will be harmful.

I do not think condensed milk is good for babies. It fattens them, but they are seldom strong. Milk powder I would prefer to condensed milk.

Ask your physician about the amount. I have always been told that the amount of milk given to an infant in 24 hours depended mostly on his age, weight and digestive power, and that an infant under one year old needed one and a half ounces of milk to every pound of their own weight, but when I began with my infant he was two months old and only weighed eight pounds and I began with 1 ounce to every pound weight. I think that it is unwise to feed a baby every time he cries. Artificially fed babies do better on a 3 1-2 hour interval. I know a great many do not agree with me but nevertheless, I really think it is better. I would say give them 6 1-2 bottles in 24 hours, with feedings at 6:15 and 10:15 A. M., 2, 6 and 10:15 P. M. A baby that nurses I think you can feed oftener but as I have said ask your physician. Overfeeding causes more sickness than underfeeding.

I have seen so many mothers taste the food by putting the nipple in the mouth. I don't think it is just the thing to do. Make babies food in the morning and keep it covered until ready for use, then be sure and warm it—not too cold or too hot—just about blood heat and feed him regularly. I do not believe in feeding babies when they are six months old potatoes or any other table foods. I know some have been killed by eating these things. They are poisonous to their system. Orange juice is the greatest value and one tablespoon a day of orange juice to all children over 7 months old is good.

I fed my boys when nine months old a crust of bread. That was the beginning of feeding them.

Cleanliness is essential. Give baby a bath every day but do not bathe baby until an hour after feeding. I used to put bran in a piece of cheese cloth and stir it around in the water I bathed baby in. Soap is all right. I think pure castile soap is good but use it sparingly. I can't tell you which rubber is the better for the nipple red or black but I always used rubber. Use 1-2 teaspoon of borax to 1 cup of hot water and wash bottle with this afterward rinsing thoroughly with cold water.

I always used soda when the babies had nettle rash and put about one teaspoon in the water you bathe him in.

Sore mouth often comes from improper care of the bottles. I think colic sometimes comes from that.

When the baby cries it is almost always because he has over eaten or is dressed too warmly. A pin may be sticking into him, perhaps its constipation. Someone may have given him something they shouldn't, he may need attention, his feet may be cold, he may have wind in his stomach, he might be lame from being trotted to much, he might be hungry—you can rest assured something ails him. When he cries look and see and remove the cause at once. In severe cases of chafing, clean with a bit of absorbent cotton dipped in baby soap suds. After drying with a piece of soft linen or gauze rub in the vaseline or cream and then sprinkle with powder made of boric acid and corn starch, equal parts. I neglected to say that I think an infant four months old should be nursed about once in three hours. As I said after six months more solid food is given.

I will tell you now as your baby grows older never give it that for which it cries. If you do the will keep your busy the same as mine did. And never promise to give a child something when it is done crying.

KITTY LOU.

MORE MEMBERS SHOULD WRITE

To All Corner Folks: I want to say hello for it is a long time since I have spoken to you, though I have read your letters and received much good from them.

I want to say to Rural Auntie that at one time Primrose and I each wrote one letter a month for one year and now both seem to be writing when the spirit moves. We have lots of members who have never sent in but one or two letters. Now that is hardly enough for us to get acquainted with them. We feel they can write some very interesting ones so hope to read some of them later on.

Poplar: Welcome to our Corner. Something tells me that I know you so here is a guess. Those who know the poplar tree realize how it spreads joy and gladness all about it by the continual dancing and fluttering of its leaves, so you too with your bright eyes and cheery smile cast happiness all about you. You both belong to the blond family and while you are tall and graceful like the poplar I will have to tell the sisters that you are not as slim.

I wonder what has become of Mine? It has been a long time since any of us have seen a letter from her. Know she did not get lost at Oakland beach this sumer.

Yes, Whirlwind, I had a vacation, of one week and that in two installments. The first one spent at Oakland beach cleaning our cottage, after the tenant had left. Enjoyed it just the same for was doing necessary work while getting the salt breezes and nice fresh fish, also had a chance to call on friends there. The second was an auto trip which took us to Providence and Oakland beach, R. I., Swansea, Avon and Hough's Neck beach, Mass. This one was all play and a good time.

For a long time have thought it would be nice to have a Corner meeting at our beach cottage so will see what can be done in the spring. We let it through the summer as our time would have to be before it is occupied.

Peggy Alder: How are you feeling? Am going to write that promised letter soon.

My sympathy goes out to all shut ins and all those who are sick or in trouble.

LOCATED IN NEW HOME

Dear Friends: I wish to thank all who so kindly sent cards and flowers when I was ill. They were greatly appreciated.

Remember Me and Aries: The cards were forwarded; thank you.

I am now in my new home at 72 Chestnut street where I will be glad to welcome all my friends.

Greetings to all and sympathy for those who are ill or in trouble.

WANTS TO JOIN CORNER

Dear Editor of Social Corner: I have long enjoyed reading the letters in the Social Corner finding them very interesting and helpful, and should like to become a member. I will take for my pen name,

DAWN.

(This penname is very similar to another. To avoid confusion please make another selection and it will be recorded.—S. C. Editor.)

GLEANING WHAT NATURE PROVIDES

Dear Corner Friends: Nature's storehouse is filled with abundance and variety. Instead of utilising native resources in some way that would more than delight a resident of some other state we "shop" to fill another's Christmas with delight.

Think how much some southern friend would appreciate maple sugar in an unadulterated form! And yet we insist on sending embroidery or "what not" for remembrances. How glad many would be for some eastern bayberry candles that stand unused on a pantry shelf in New England.

Those who live in a land of pine trees love to heap the open fire with cones. Why not gather a bag for winter? Why not put some pine needles in a pillow for someone during the Christmas season and long evenings following? A small chunk of the tree might be labeled, "Your Yule Log" and placed on the top of the sack.

The choicest cones in shape may be smoothed at the bottom, slightly hallowed at the top, varnished and made to hold a tiny candle at each plate on the Christmas table. Of course for these choose the cones that have opened. There is no greater delight to the children than the pine needles to sprinkle on the fire in the grate. And the older ones as well enjoy the snapping, crackling and "woodsy" odor following.

The ground pines are excellent for Christmas wreaths, the many colored berries will put the last touch of color.

There is really no excuse for hunting artificial flowers when the wayside and woods abound in wild rose pipe, bittersweet, partridge berries, black alderberries or wintergreen. These combined with the many pretty grasses make as many and varied decorative combinations as one's time and ability to create permit. There is no decoration more effective for hall, table or dining room than a low, wide bowl filled with soft moss as a foundation; cones, grass, seed pods and evergreen leaves placed or wired above the moss. A wreath of ground pine around the base is the finishing touch.

HOOKED RUGS

Dear Cornerites: One sister of the Corner wished to know about hooked rugs.

Grandmother used old coffee or potato sacks as the foundation for her rugs; we may follow her example or buy "store burlap" by the yard. Thrift was her watchword and so her outworn pillase and the remains of Samuel's trousers and Priscilla's plaid school dress were ripped and washed and cut into strips and used as the "hooks" for grandmother's rugs.

But if the rug is designed for a room with a definite color scheme and the flannel cannot be procured in the right shade, we take a leaf from grandmother's book and dye it at home.

The only tools you need for hooked rugs will be a wooden frame about 45 inches long by 16 inches wide, and a steel hook set in a wooden handle. If you cannot obtain such a steel hook a large bone crochet hook will do very well. The frame can be made by a carpenter from pine wood two inches wide and 7-8 of an inch thick, with half lap joints at the corners. The design of the rug should be traced on a light weight cardboard or a card that we cut out for stenciling. Then you can cut out all the different forms accurately with scissors, and place upon burlap, which should be an inch and a half larger on each of the four sides than you wish the rug to be when completed. With a pointed bristle brush and some diluted bluing mark around the edge of each shape and then the design will be drawn on the foundation.

By this method of transferring the design, I find even the stock design may be made the individual creation of the maker of the rug. As whole new effects can be obtained by placing different parts nearer together or farther apart or transposing them in various fashions. I think the best rug designs are border plans or decorated centers, and bands of plain colors of varying widths. A Corner design or one or more conventionalized figures called units repeated at intervals, between the corners, usually composes the borders. The outer edge should then have a band of plain color and even this can be indicated on the burlap foundation by drawing a straight line next. Arrange the cardboard forms for the corners, and mark around them, placing the units you have chosen between. Do this on all four sides of the rug, and the border designs will be completed. If ornaments you prefer in the center of the rug, find the central point and transfer the design in the same way. The burlap is now ready to be tacked on the frame. In doing it, be especially careful that the threads are straight with the edge of the frame, as the work cannot be straightened when finished if the foundation is twisted. Double your inch and a half margin several times before putting in the tacks for you will find it will hold better by having several thicknesses of the cloth. The frame is long enough for an ordinary sized rug, but not for width of one. On the fourth side of the frame therefore, double your extra material several times and tack through it. When you have finished working the section held by the frame, you can remove all the tacks and shift the rug, tacking them through the finished section of the rug.

The flannel I cut in strips something less than a quarter of an inch wide, but a 1-3 inch strip can be used in larger spaces. In fact I like a little chance, in width, it gives variety to the finished work.

Strips about one yard long I think the most convenient length. You can measure your pieces, and 1 1-3 yards of flannel will make about one square foot of rug.

Since your burlap is fastened to the frame and you are ready to begin, hold a strip of flannel in the left hand under the burlap and with the right hand pass the hook down through the burlap and draw the flannel up in a loop. Repeat, setting the loops close together as possible so that there will be only a few threads of burlap between where the hook is inserted.

Work until the middle of the frame is reached then turn it around and work from the middle towards the nearest edge. You will find so such custom prevails as in sewing of always going in one direction, and after a little practice you will be able to go from right to left, to right or up and down with ease.

The loops should stand about 1-2 inch above the burlap; but even with the greatest care, these will be a slight variation in their length. This however, will only lend a pleasant variety to the finished rug, as the loop ends can be cut and the shorter ends be left in their original loops. When a piece in the frame is finished cut the surface with long bladed shears, placing the left hand under the burlap and slightly raising the finished work.

To make the back of the rug even and neat, draw the ends of each strip of flannel through the burlap to the right side, where they can be cut to the same length as the loops. When the entire rug is completed, turn back the burlap at the edge and hem with linen thread. Then bind with braid and line the whole rug with figured burlap.

I think each worker in hooked rugs will discover many little devices of her own which will improve the rug and make the work easier. For instance to form narrow lines, loops may be set and to end instead of side to side. And also an end can be used to form a tapering point in the design. For plain centers and wide plain bands the strips should be cut somewhat wider.

Of course there are hooked rugs and hooked rugs, just as there are people and people; but if any artistic judgment is exercised in planning the rug and the rug is done skilfully there need be no limitation set upon its beauty. They add a certain individual touch especially if designed and created by the owner herself, that no manufactured rug can attain.

PLANTING BULBS INSIDE

Dear Corner Sisters: I wonder how many readers of the Corner have ever thought of raising tulips, daffodils, or hyacinths, starting now when bulbs are plentiful and setting out a pot or two every few weeks. I have found this a lovely pastime and so often in the winter months I have been able to give pleasure with the bright blooms of my plants, to those who are ill and shut-in.

I do not always feel able to spend money for cut flowers so these bulb blooms help me out greatly and it seems to me that folks treasure them even more than an article which has just been purchased.

I had only to mention to a friend of mine that I wished I could fall heir to some pots for plants and she immediately said, "My! I have a dozen or more in the basement which you are welcome to." I was grateful for them and then I got my bulbs and planted my indoor garden. I simply plant in good earth and set in a dark place but not where they will freeze. I water them occasionally but not too often as too frequent watering rots the bulbs. I feel of the soil before watering and thus judge whether more is required. After several weeks I have tall green stalks coming up. I do not take them out of the dark until I see my flowers have formed and are sprouting through. Then I remove them to the light. I have noticed that by setting them in the light too soon, the leaves become yellow but by keeping them in the dark the leaves are a beautiful green. And the flowers soon blossom too, when I set them out in the light.

I might also add that in my summer garden I plant what we term, "Life Everlasting." I have a great number of them in beautiful shades. I pick them in the fall and take all leaves and hang my flowers in bunches, head down. After they are thoroughly dried, I bunch them and have found that these bunches are also greatly appreciated by shut-in friends as these flowers retain their beauty all winter.

I trust that this idea may help someone as bulbs are so reasonable and the care the plants take doesn't amount to anything in proportion to the joy they give to others.

Yours for the good of the Corner.

RECIPES FOR THANKSGIVING

Dear Social Corner Editor and Corner Sisters: I am sure every one is enjoying these lovely, clear, frosty November days and bright moonlight evenings.

And as we are getting along towards Thanksgiving will send in some seasonable recipes.

Mince Meat: 2 cups of beef, (cooked tender) 4 cups of apple, 1 tablespoon of cinnamon, 1 tablespoon of salt, 1 1-2 teaspoon cloves (ground), 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup sugar (granulated) 1 cup molasses, 2 cups vinegar, or partly cider with lemon juice, currants, citron, and raisons, as many as desired. This makes 3 pints.

Fruit Cake: 1-4 pound butter, 1-4 pound brown sugar, 3 eggs, 1-2 pound raisins, 1-4 pound citron, 1-2 opun currants, 1 ounce dates, 2 ounces figs, 1-4 pound almonds, 1-2 tablespoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-4 tablespoon nutmeg, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 1-4 teaspoon soda, 1-4 pound flour. Bake in moderate oven one and one quarter hours.

The Corner page is full of nice recipes and interesting letters of all sorts.

Congratulations to those receiving the yellow slips.

Greetings to the sick and hope for their speedy recovery.

Good luck to all and hope that all have a very joyous Thanksgiving.

CLUB NO. 1 MEETS WEDNESDAY

Dear Social Corner Editor: Hope I am not to late to answer the 'roll call' to the name of Sis. I would like a pin if there is one for me.

Last month I was asked to be hostess for Club No. 1 meeting in the Chamber of Commerce hall in Willimantic, No. 11, 1925 and I would like to have all the Corner members come who can and please bring plate, knife, fork, and spoon, also cup and something good to eat.

Sis (March 10.)

AT SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Dear Corner Members: First I wish to thank the editor for the yellow slip. It was indeed a surprise, as I only wanted to help our Sister Kitty out on hooked rugs.

The sisters who failed to call on True Blue Saturday night don't know what a jolly good time they missed at her silver wedding. The music by G. E. M's daughter and Master Woodrow Hammel was greatly enjoyed by all, Miss Mell being an expert at the piano as well as the uke. The house was tastefully decorated in Hallowe'en colors, Jack o'lanterns and black cats being in all the rooms as well as witches here and there which gave rather a spooky appearance as one entered the house. The dancing by Master Tom Murphy certainly was wonderful, that young gentleman not being five years old yet. If he keeps on he will be an expert in a very short time but he is a good entertainer even if so young. The waitresses were G. E. M's daughter and sister Lorna who did their part in a very pleasing manner.

True Blue: Were you tired next morning? Hope you have many more pleasant anniversaries and live long to enjoy your beautiful gifts of money, silver, cut glass, china, linen, besides your beautiful fern and flower basket. The last two will just fit in on your porch when the good old summer time is with us again. I didn't return to my home until Sunday night having passed the day with Maple Leaf. Sunday afternoon Maple Leaf, Lorna and myself took a trip in Maple Leaf's car all around the city and then down to the submarine base up over Fort hill thence on to Mystic, my old home, through Stonington and on to Westerly, where we made a couple of stops on business and rested for a while. The scenery along the line was very pretty, as we followed the water for quite a distance. We came home by way of Milltown. Having left North Stonington behind we soon passed the place known to many by the familiar name of Timmymetamouse. I wonder who is occupying that place now? At one time I did know, I think at one time one of our Social Corner brothers lived there, but later it changed hands when he moved on down the line.

Linnette: I think I know you. Didn't you spend the afternoon with me quite recently? If so, glad to know you are to meet occasionally with us. And did you not go to South Coventry with me once when we met at Sister Biddy's house?

Yours for the good of the Corner.
CRIMSON RAMBLER.

FINDS DIFFERENCE IN MAINE

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: The pin which was sent to me was very much appreciated and I wish to thank the editor for the same.

Many thanks also, to Whirlwind, Arlea, and Black Eyed Susie for the birthday cards they sent. It is always a pleasure to be remembered.

Joan and Forgotten, who were so kind to send the wine recipes, I also wish to thank you for them. I used them both and liked them very much. I hope to be able to do as much for all of you some time.

I enjoyed the new hall and I look forward to the meeting there very much. I hope as many of the sisters will come as are able, both those of Club No. 1 and those out of town. It is always a pleasure to have a large gathering.

I enjoyed my Maine trip very much, but was glad to get back to our own state again. I thought the sea coast of Massachusetts and Maine much bleaker than our own. The summer is much cooler there than it is with us, and the gardens were not as far advanced. Maine did not seem to be as much of a farming country as our state is. I also found this difference—we say to a stranger, "Won't you have a chair and be comfortable? but in Maine they say, "Can't I get you something to eat?"

Best wishes to all.

MARIGOLD.

South Coventry.

THE BEST EVER

Dear Social Corner: You are right, Wurdy Belle, the 50 sisters that met at the Buckingham for Club No. 5's meeting on the 4th had the jolliest time ever enjoyed. The dinner was fine and such loads of it! I hope you did not make yourself sick with your pie and cake on the side.

The musical program was most enjoyable and our musician well earned the note of thanks for the old time and present day songs and the dance music.

Fidelity: You would dance till you wore great big holes in the soles of your shoes. Am glad you are to be hostess next month. I love to see you work.

Bridge: Your gift of ten yards of table cloths is much appreciated and

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

There was nothing out of the ordinary in the Norwich news a half century ago, but people were finding enjoyment in usual ways. Tom Thumb and his wife visited the city and several other shows appeared.

News of the week as taken in part from the Norwich Bulletin of 1875 is as follows:

Monday, November 1, 1875—Stone throwing has become a practice of youths of the city and several cases where injuries have been caused have been reported to the police. Saturday morning a woman passing along on Main street was struck in the face by a large stone, nearly rendering her unconscious. The boy throwing the stone was caught after a chase and will be severely punished.

George A. Kies, director of the Norwich Conservatory of Music is announcing that classes are again to start as the fall season will come to a close on the 15th of this month. The charges are $15 a term and many accomplished musicians have been produced by the organization, the low price of instruction affording an unusual chance to learn some instrument.

The cold weather last night pretty well filled the lodging rooms of the police station with tramps.

A game of baseball took place at the Park Saturday afternoon between a portion of the Arctic and Sachem clubs in which four innings were played, resulting in nine for the Arctic side and eight for the Sachem side. Grumpson took a fly ball on the jaw and Adams took one over the right eye, which were loudly applauded. Several others were more or less mangled in the game, and had it not been for rain putting an end to the game, the ambulance corps of the old Uncas club would have been called on to carry off the wounded and dead.

Tuesday, November 2, 1875—The M. F. E. society gave a very successful exhibition of Mrs. Jarley's Wax works in Lawrence hall last evening. The entertainment met with instant approval of the large audience and the figures were presented in groups of eight, being brought to the front of the stage and described separately by Mrs. Jarley, after which they went through their various motions. The figures were fully as good as when exhibited in England although some were troublesome as they had not been used for some time.

Directors of the several banks of the city have declared a semi-annual dividend of three per cent. payable on and after the 15th of the month.

A new stable is being built at the corner of Main and Hitch streets in place of the old landmark that was taken down some time ago. In shape it resembles a monster dry goods box but it will be a good livery stable just the same.

There was quite a flurry of snow yesterday and the cold weather is a warning of the approach of winter.

Wednesday, November 3, 1875—The season for hunting coons is now in swing and Edwin Appley and William Weaver of Lisbon went out Monday evening and bagged five plump ones.

In connection with the plan for cutting up the territory of Fisher's Island into miniature town plots and villa sites, we are informed that it is intended to have a fast steamer to connect with the Norwich line steamer and the railroads.

Yantic having become a telegraph station on the New London Northern road, A. L. Bennett has been appointed station agent, replacing H. Butterfield, resigned. The many friends of Mr. Butterfield learn with pleasure that he is to continue with the railroad.

The old Stafford Woolen mill at Stafford Hollow was totally destroyed by fire Monday night at a loss of about $25,000.

Reports are that the Bridgeport Stranger's store does a business of $1,000 a week and that they have saved in three months, the matter of $2,500 on coal alone.

Bishop, Porteous and Mitchell, Norwich merchants, are to establish a branch store in New London in the near future.

Thursday, November 4, 1875—Mr. White, the celebrated checker player, has arrived in the city. Tonight he will play at White's hall and Saturday night plays at Owaneco hall, Greeneville. He is reputed to be the best player in the world.

Probably the last blast on the Laurel Hill tunnel was made yesterday. The work of arching the remainder of the tunnel will be proceeded with as rapidly as possible.

A cuon weighing 15 pounds may be seen at Bruce & Harris. It was one shot by a Taftville man who took two others from the same tree.

Tom Thumb and his wife Minnie Warren, are to appear in Breed hall this evening.

Two New London men, members of the crew of the schooner J. Chapman, Capt. Farrell, reported lost at sea have been found by boat crews at Barrington, N. S. The two men were nearly insensible when found but have recovered nicely.

Friday, November 5, 1875—Twelve Norwich men have closed a deal with Albert L. Avery for the purchase of a tract of land at Eastern Point. The land has a frontage of a thousand feet on the harbour and includes fourteen acres. Each are to build a cottage and the land will be developed.

Killingly has voted to give the job of collecting taxes to the lowest bidder. Evidently the job is profitable in some manner for it has been given to a man who bid one dollar.

Children in the city enjoyed a treat yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb walked the streets. A crowd of children followed wherever they went and took much pleasure in the treat of seeing this noted couple.

There was a report in town yesterday that a milkman had killed a man. Unless he did it by secretly selling him pure milk the story is false.

The new iron bridge for the New London and Worcester road is expected to arrive today.

The principal marine excitement yesterday was the arrival of a sloop loaded with clams.

Saturday, November 6, 1875—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wauwecus Hill Gold, Silver and Nickel Mining company, the following gentlemen were elected directors: J. Fillmore, Providence; William H. Wilson, Providence; George M. Roberts, Norwich; Reuben Safford, Norwich; Edwin Rose, Sprague. At a meeting of the directors Rev. J. Fillmore was elected president and William H. Wilson secretary and treasurer for the ensuing year.

One of the Mystic fishing steamers took 500,000 bonyfish in two days near Watch Hill this week. The entire catch by this boat this season has been over 5,000,000 fish.

The new fifteen cent currency notes have reached the city. They bear the likeness of William H. Crawford, secretary of the treasury under President Jackson.

The new Willimantic directory is out, combined with the Rockville directory.

The Riffs

The Riffs, against whom France and Spain are now waging war, are not wild Arab hillmen, as many suppose, but Berbers, the descendants of the ancient Lybians, who once ruled in North Africa, and of the Norse vikings, whose adventurous raids extended to Lybian shores. Professor F. Berlioux, one of the foremost French historians of the day, has traced back the ancestry of the present day adversaries of France and Spain. The ancient Lybians, says Professor Berlioux, once formed a powerful confederation in northern Africa and attained a high degree of culture. It is thought that the early Greeks obtained their coit of Pallas Athene from the Africans, for the oldest statuettes of the goddest show her with the characteristic Berber plaid of goatskin, which was the usual dress of the ancient Berber maidens in the Atlas mountains.

Airservice to India

A weekly mail service between England and India is being undertaken by the Imperial Airways, Limited, through a subsidy and a five-year contract given by the air ministry. Mails will be delivered in Bombay in five days against the present 15 days and when the service comes into regular operation next summer passengers also will be carried. At the outset passengers will be carried only between Cairo and Basra. The route, just under 2,500 miles in length, will be from Kantara via Ramleh and Amman to Baghdad, thence to Basrh and Karachi. To prevent forced landing, especially designed three-engined aircraft will be used.

Courtship and romance are more interesting than marriage and history.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

A. O. H. AUXILIARY

Division No. 26 of Taftville held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening, transacting routine business and making plans for a whist party next week in their rooms. Officers were elected as follows: President, Susie Malone; vice-president, Mrs. J. Waldron; recording secretary, Miss Mae Nolan; financial secretary, Miss Nora Murphy; treasurer, Mrs. H. Flynn; mistress at arms, Mrs. T. Breault; sentinel, Mrs. J. Brennan; chairman of standing committee, Mrs M. Coleman.

B'NAI BRITH AUXILIARY

Rose of New England Auxiliary, No. 40, I. O. B. B. held a successful card party at the Buckingham Memorial, bridge, whist and pinochle being played.

The winners of the bridge prizes were Miss Marcia Bruckner, Miss Anna Rabipovitch, Mrs. H. E. Martoff, Mrs. A. Levine, Mrs. A. Silverberg, Mrs. H. Schwartz, Mrs. R. Henschel. Miss Sarah Sachner and Mrs. B. Lazaroff were awarded whist prizes.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the entertainment committee. Dancing was enjoyed, the music being furnished by the new Orthophonic Victrola, compliments of the Hanover Curland Co. Plans were laid for many social events during the winter.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS

Buckingham council, No. 14, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening with Vice Councilor George Faulkner presiding. The council voted to go to New Britain Friday, November 13 to work the degrees. There is to be a bus leaving the city at not later than 6:15 p. m. The council is holding a box social next Wednesday night. The councils from New London and Noank have been invited to attend, as well as the Daughters of America of Norwich, New London and Noank. The state officers will also attend the meeting. There is to be a $75 silk flag presented to Buckingham council, for the largest gain in membership.

It was also voted that the degree team under Degree Master Faulkner is to hold a special meeting Monday night the 9th.

V. F. W. AUXILIARY

A semi-monthly meeting of the R. E Hourigan auxiliary, V. F. W., was held Wednesday evening in the post rooms on Main street. Owing to the absence of the president on account of illness the meeting was in charge of the senior vice-president, Mrs. Ida Fairbanks. Regular routine business was discussed. The entertainment committee announced a whist party to be held in the post rooms the 18th of November. Also plans are underway for a rummage sale. After the business session a social hour was enjoyed.

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Tuesday evening Norwich chapter, No. 124, Women of Mooseheart Legion, went to New London to present the Mooseheart traveling emblem to New London chapter, No. 347, presentation being made by Senior Regent Mrs. Mary Hunter of Norwich chapter. After the presentation an entertainment by Norwich chapter was given, after which the New London chapter served an apetising luncheon. The members left in cars loaned for the occasion by Mrs. Emma Beaver, Mrs. Caroline Hastedt, Mrs. Grace Walx, Mrs. Anna Helbel, Mrs. Irene Burns, Mrs. Mary Hunter and Ben. Wunderlich.

EAGLES

Norwich Aerie, No 367, F. O. E., held its regular meeting on Monday Night. Routine business was transacted and several applications were presented and acted on. The resignation of Trustee R. A. Krohn was read and accepted, Henry Follenius was nominated to fill out the unexpired term. Election of the trustee will be at the next regular meeting, November 16th. The Thanksgiving class initiation committee reported that everything is being done to make this the biggest class the Aerie has ever initiated.

The pinochle committee reported that they have arranged for ladies' night on Wednesday, November 11, when there will be pinochle, whist and dancing and the committee promises all a good time.

MOOSE

It was at a gathering of members of the Loyal Order of Moose. All sorts of conditions of men were present, from railroad switchmen to bankers and manufacturers. The band was playing and the entertainment of the evening was at its height. Suddenly the presiding officer banged his gavel upon the table and called for silence. "It is now 9 o'clock," he said, amid a solemn hush, "at this moment our children at Mooseheart are kneeling in prayer at their bedsides. Let us all stand up and for one moment concentrate our thoughts upon these helpless little ones!"

It is a wonderful thought. A heterogeneous assemblage of grown-up men, with their work and their troubles on their minds, many of them with children of their own to worry about, gathered for an evening's pleasure and pausing in the midst of it to bestow a thought upon children of men who had passed away and whom their organization is supporting and schooling and training. A kind-hearted, charitable thought, too, but the significance of it passes far beyond the reach of charity or kindness of heart.

Every night at 9 o'clock, all loyal Moose, no matter in which part of the world they are, turn toward Mooseheart, Ill., and say a prayer for the welfare of the children there. How wonderful it would be if all followed the example of the Loyal Order of Moose and at 9 o'clock each evening, paused for just a brief moment, to give a thought to all the children of the United States.

ODD LADIES, M. U.

A regular meeting of Victory Lodge, was held in Steiner hall on Thursday evening with Noble Grand B. Hartley in the chair. The routine business was transacted and the members made their final arrangements for the supper and sale to be held in Steiner hall.

GROTTO

A grand pilgrimage towards New Britain of Grotto members from all parts of the state will be under way today, drawn by the fall ceremonial of Azis Grotto, which has something unusual in Grotto annals in that Governor John H. Trumbull will be one of the candidates and another will be the grand master of the state of Connecticut. Nemrod Grotto prophets from this city will send a good-sized delegation and will add to the colorful features of the event by having their uniformed patrol and band on hand. The Norwich prophets will leave in the early part of the afternoon and many of them plan to stay over night in New Britain.

A. O. H. AUXILIARY

The regular meeting of Division 4, held Wednesday evening, with the president, Mrs. Julia Brock, in the chair, was largely attended. The reports from the officers were read and accepted, the secretary's report showing the auxiliary to be in good financial standing and a larger membership roll. An invitation was received and accepted from Division 26, Taftville, for the local auxiliary to attend a joint installation of officers of the A. O. H. and Ladies' Auxiliaries of New London county, which is to take place in Parish hall, Taftville, Sunday, Nov. 29. Tuesday evening the second of a series of whist and pinochle, Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards, chairman of arrangements committee will be given.

The first state board meeting of A. O. H. and Ladies' Auxiliaries, since the election of officers last August at Bridgeport, will be held in New Haven next Sunday. Among those attending from New London county will be Mrs. Julia Brock of Norwich, state treasurer, Mrs. Susie Malone of Taftville, county president, and John Kennedy, county president.

BUS TRANSPORTATION VITAL TO NEW HAVEN

company has $1,000,000 invested in approximately 100 busses. He described the overcrowded conditions of jitney busses operated in Bridgeport and stated that recently 50 per cent of the busses in that city were out of operation at one time. He stated that some operators in that city sleep in their jitneys. He declared that Bridgeport jitneys picked the cream of the passenger traffic and did not run when the picking was not good. He disagreed with one speaker's statement that a large organization could not operate busses as efficiently as a small concern. He said they could be operated with better results for the public because of the use of supervisors inspectors, extra repair units and attention to details.

A. P. Marsh of Hartford, secretary of the Connecticut Motor Truck association, alleged that the New Haven was trying to stifle the bus interests of the state. He believed in protecting the New Haven against useless competition when it was rendering good service. He waxed strong against giving the New Haven a monopoly of transportation.

Attorney Arthur L. Shipman, of Hartford, representing the motor truck interests claimed that the pending application of the New England Transportation company for bus franchises was a step in the direction of entering the motor trucking business.

One director of the chamber who declared he represented "Mr. and Mrs. Public" called attention to the recent hearing before the public utilities commission at Putnam, wherein representatives of business organizations appeared from six different cities in favor of granting the bus franchise to the New Haven road as against untried and unknown interests. Another director declared the constitution of the United States offered equal opportunity to all as against monopoly for any one interest.

In opening today's meeting Ernest E. Rogers, of New London, treasurer of Connecticut and president of the Connecticut chamber of commerce predicted that it was probable that within a few years the directors would be discussing transportation problems of the air. He read a statement by the late Lieutenant Lansdowne of the ill-fated Shenandoah in which he stated that transportation was the biggest problem facing the country today.

George B. Chandler, vice president of the chamber, gave a summary of the study of many aspects of transportation that had been made by a special committee during the last three years. He termed the efforts of the directors to formulate a policy regarding the field of bus transportation as a continuance of this work.

Mr. Freeman, Mr Shipman and Mr. Marsh all stated that they believed the management of the Connecticut company should be returned to the New Haven road.

Today's meeting drew the largest attendance of the chamber's directors in many months, there being 40 present. The directors voted to hold an adjourned meeting in the near future at which the policy of the organization regarding bus transportation will be formulated.

The Man Who Taught Dawes To Swear

Gen. Charles Stanton, U. S. A., retired, who is described by Vice President Dawes as the "man who taught me how to swear." He said this yesterday on seeing his old friend in San Francisco for the California Diamond Jubilee. Colonel Stanton, who was identified with Mr. Dawes with the service of supplies in France during the War, is the author of the famed phrase "Lafayette, we are here."

"so say they all"!

To date—conservatively calculated — 250,000 owners . . .

Not such an impressive total as automobile registrations, en masse, are recorded today . . .

But—Willys-Knight owners are not "mass" owners . . .

They are a select lot. Select, and selective. The motor-car sophisticated. An owner-group value-wise.

Ask any Willys-Knight owner why he bought his Willys-Knight . . .

Ask him for a full and frank expression as to the satisfaction he has had in his car . . .

Ask him about engine-repair bills —about enforced lay-ups because of valve-grinding or carbon cleaning . . .

Question him about performance—about the condition of his engine, at 5,000 miles, at 25,000-and-50,000, at 75,000 miles or better . . .

And, above all, ask "If you ever had to buy another, what car would you next buy?"

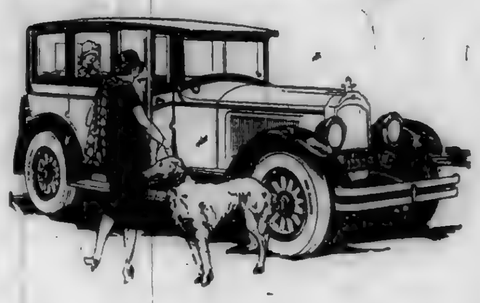
. . . . . .

An overwhelming majority of Willys-Knight owners will tell you they bought their present Willys-Knights for one of two reasons—

Either they had previous first-hand experience with another Willys-Knight, or because one or more other owners told them in emphatic terms a Willys-Knight was the car they ought to buy! . . .



Anyone of the quarter-of-a-million will tell you that the service he has enjoyed has been literally flawless, through his entire period of ownership—that his engine-repair bills have been practically nil. As for valve-grinding or carbon complications of any character, these are outside his experience. He has never expended a dollar because of either, nor has he been without the use of his car for a day or a single hour! . . .

There has yet to be discovered the Willys-Knight owner who does not appear to exaggerate when the question of performance is to the fore. A sweet-running car, powerful, quiet, smooth, from the first turn of the engine—at 5,000 miles, as at 25,000-to-50,000, it is still more powerful, still smoother, still quieter. And at 75,000 miles-and-over, an even greater improvement is in evidence. For this car is driven by the patented Knight sleeve-valve engine, the only motor-mechanism that improves with use—the only engine that, up to a mileage-point still undetermined after 16 years' use, increases in power, increases in smooth and silent running, increases in all-around efficiency with every mile! . . .

"Another Willys-Knight"—this is the answer, inevitably, to the query as to what car any one of the 250,000 present Willys-Knight owners again would buy. Extraordinary satisfaction. Extraordinary performance. Extraordinary long life. Naturally, your Willys-Knight owner is an enthusiastic owner. And he is steadfast in his loyalty. He will buy another Willys-Knight. He will recommend the same course to all who inquire.

He knows that neither you nor he can realize such perennially magnificent service in any other car!

SOCIAL CORNER

I believe there are napkins too; but I did not hear the name of the giver.

Theasurer: Your report brought out a good hand clap—$7 surplus in the treasury—fine.

Inez—Your cordial greetings make every body feel at home.

The success of Club No. 6 is assured.

CECIL BRUNNER.

WANTS DIRECTIONS FOR GITNEY LACE

Dear Social Corner Members: I am glad to see the Social Corner page full every week with such nice letters. I never write so suppose I am a slack member, but the other sisters do so much better than I that I think they should have the space my letters would take.

I guess everyone enjoyed the poetry, Forget It, sent in by Geraldine. I am sure I did.

I want to ask if anyone has directions for crocheting Gitney lace. If so would they be kind enough to send it in.

I will close with best wishes for editor and all members.

SUNSET.

EASY AND GOOD PIE CRUST

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I haven't written or been to the hall for some time but went to two of the picnics this summer and enjoyed them.

Many thanks to Black Eyed Susie for remembering me with a birthday card.

I was saddened by the illness and death of Red Clover. She had been a dear friend of mine for a number of years.

I will send a rule for pie crust which is very easy to make and always good.

It was given me by Aunt Joe.

Pie Crust: Take 1-2 cup of lard and a little salt, pour over it 1-4 cup of boiling water let melt and stir in with a spoon, 1 cup of flour or little over, just enough to roll out; roll slowly and carefully and place on pie plate same as cold water crust. Try it and you will not want to bother with the old way.

I would like a Social Corner pin if not too late.

Best wishes to all.

WESTERLY

Trial of cases in the regular Friday morning session of third district court in Westerly did not begin until after 10 o'clock, but at 9:30 o'clock Clerk M. Walter Flynn, Jr., read the following civil docket:

New writ entered, George W. Saunders vs. Edward B. Crumb. No appearance for Mr. Crumb and if unanswered during day case was continued one week.

Samuel Soloveitzlin, admx., vs. Witnesses. Entered, by Attorney John J. Tuttle and if unanswered during day continued one week.

Old writs. Samuel Fishman vs. Thomas Veitch. Continued one week.

Criminal Docket

State, Oliver P. Crandall, director of public aid, vs. Edward O'Connell. Dismissed.

State, Oliver P. Crandall, director of public aid, vs. Angelo Turano. Continued one week.

State, Thomas E. Brown, chief of police of Westerly, vs. Angelo Turano, Continued one week.

State, Thomas E. Brown, chief of police of Westerly, vs. Joseph Sylvester. Continued one week. Clerk Fay announced that all witnesses summoned by the state in this case were to appear next Friday, without further summons.

State, William L. Kay, deputy chief of police of Hopkinton, vs. Charles Golden of Providence. Marked ready.

State, R. I. State Trooper Norman, No. 38, vs. Charles Golden of Providence. Continued two weeks to Nov. 20 and state to be represented by the Rhode Island attorney general's department.

State, R. I. State Trooper Norman, No. 38, vs. Bolis Pukas. Marked ready.

Monday evening at 7:30, Miss Bacon is to speak to the girls of Westerly High school at the Methodist church. The address is to be followed by a reception at the parsonage.

Bolis Pukas was called by Judge Michael J. Turano, when he took up the trial calendar in the Third District court Friday in Westerly, on the complaint of Rhode Island State Trooper Norman, No. 38 of the Scituate barracks, on the charge that on Nov. 3rd, he operated an automobile, on the Moore Neck Hill road without having the motor vehicle equipped with a red light in the rear, discernable a distance of 60 feet. Respondent entered a plea of guilty. The state trooper told the court that the defendant had operated the motor vehicle since Thursday, Oct. 29th without a rear light. Judge Turano imposed a fine of $20 and costs which was paid.

Charles Golden, 22, of 163 Burnside street, Providence, was arraigned on complaint of State Trooper Norman, that on Sept. 22nd he received a tire and tools to the value of $30, fraudulently, knowing them to be stolen from Edward G. Wells of Hope Valley, town of Hopkinton. Represented by Attorney Israel Horenstein of Providence, a plea of not guilty was entered by the accused. The case was continued two weeks to Nov. 20th for trial, the state to be represented by the Attorney General's department. Rebecca Golden, mother of the respondent, became surety in the sum of $200 for his appearance at that time.

At 12:15 o'clock after a trial lasting the morning court session, in the case of the state, William L. Kay, deputy chief of police of the town of Hopkinton, complainant, vs. Charles Golden of 163 Burnside street, Providence, Judge Turano adjudged respondent probably guilty of obtaining goods under false pretenses, and bound him over before the Grand Jury of the superior court for Washington country, which convenes at West Kingston, Nov. 16th. Rebecca Golden, mother of the respondent, became surety for his appearance in the sum of $2,500 bonds. The goods referred to were about 500 pullets which the respondent, together with two others carried away from the farm and the property of Charles M. Hall, of Hope Valley, town of Hopkinton, and took to Providence in his truck when the fowls were disposed of. In the transaction a check for $600 was rendered, signed by one of the three men "Frank P. Gorman." On this check payment was denied at the Washington Trust Co., and the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co., Providence, on which latter bank it was drawn, and the information was given that there were no funds there and when the books were looked up, the clerk informed Mr. Hall there was no such man there. The check was submitted in court, dated Sept. 23rd.

FOG IS RESPONSIBLE FOR AUTO ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 6.—William E. Chapman, 50, a painter, residing at 99 Beach street, was struck by the automobile operated by Judge Oliver H. Williams, Friday night, about 9:30 o'clock and knocked to the ground. The accident happened when Chapman was crossing Railroad avenue at the junction of Canal street in the thick fog and at a dark place in the highway. He received a cut on the side of his head. He was taken to the office of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon for treatment where it was found that his injuries were slight and he was sent to his home. Police Officer George H. Champlin made an investigation at the time and declared it an unavoidable accident.

NICHOLS COUNCIL PRESIDENT—

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 6.—John D. Nichols, only member of the old Westerly town council among the seven members elected last Tuesday was made president Friday night at an organization meeting of the new councilmen which lasted from 7:00 until 10 o'clock. The new councilmen were sworn in by Town Clerk Everett E. Whipple and he in turn was sworn to his duties by President Nichols.

Elected members of the committees were, Harry H. Coleman, Rogers E. Trainer and Isaac G. Smith; lighting committee, Peter Nardone, A. Clifford Holdsworth and Thomas F. Moore. Former Town Solicitor John Ferguson Jr., was re-elected town solicitor. Other minor town officers were re-elected as they have served for the past two years.

FIRST MODERN APARTMENT IN TOKYO RENTED BEFORE READY

TOKIO, Nov. 6 (AP)—Residents of Tokio are to have their first experience with life in a modern American apartment. The first such building ever constructed here will soon be ready for occupancy.

Prof. K. Morimoto of the Imperial University has supervised the work of construction, with the assistance of his wife, and will direct the management.

The building is on the American style throughout. It is four stories high, fire and earthquake proof, built of reinforced concrete and contains 42 apartments ranging from one room to six. More than 170 persons have filed applications for the apartments. As the government advanced part of the 500,000 yen which the building cost. It was stipulated that not more than one-third of the occupants may be foreigners.

The building is fitted with a hot water heating system, electricity, gas, telephone and other modern conveniences. The walls and ceilings are sound-proof. The bath rooms are furnished with foreign enameled tubs and have tile floors. The floors of other rooms are of polished wood.

On the first floor of the building are public rooms, including dining rooms, reception rooms, banquet hall and stores. In the basement are laundry and drying rooms, the heating plant and a garage. There are accomodations for servants, who may be had by the hour or by the day at a nominal fee. Foreign style food will be served in the restaurant, which will be open to the public. Service may be had from the restaurant to any apartment.

The apartments were built as an experiment by the Culture Diffusion Foundation, to show the practicability of modern Western apartments in Japan.

TAOS INDIANS BEST TYPE OF ALL THE ABORIGINES

TAOS, New Mexico, Nov. 6 (AP)—Of all the aborigines, the Taos Indian appeals to members of the famous Taos artists' colony as having the background best suited to the brush.

The picturesque setting in which the Indian is found and the Indian himself with his statuesque physique are the reasons why the 11 persons—ten men and one woman—who form the colony are here.

"The Indians of Old Taos hold to their customs and costumes more tenaciously and remarkably than any others," says Burt Phillips, dean and founder of the colony. "They live in a picturesque environment, which they fit to summer and winter. The lure of the native Spanish life around the plaza of Taos pueblo and adjoining villages is strong. An endless variety of subjects are here available—the mountains, canyons and mesas and, above all, the marvelous coloring, which seems to find its equal nowhere else in the country."

The Taos group is said among the first band of artists to receive a large order for pictures as an organization. Each member was commissioned to paint three murals for the Missouri state capitol building. As a result of the commission, the panels of the new Missouri capitol may be expected to reflect accurately the spirit and methods of the Taos Society of Artists.

One member of the society, John Sharp, now is confining himself entirely to the painting of Taos Indian subjects. The Taosans are a stalwart race, everyone a striking figure, given to standing on housetops in white robes at sunrise. They have furnished Sharp with an inspiration which now is occupying his entire attention.

The colony is the outgrowth of a friendship struck up between Phillips and E. L. Blumenschein in the Latin Quarter of Paris during the late nineties.

The pair pioneered into the Taos country shortly before 1900 after an arduous trek overland from Denver. Blumenschein later went to Arizona to paint Pima Indian subjects, but Phillips stayed on and it was his persevering efforts that finally led to the coming of the other ten artists.

CITY'S RECORD OF "NO TAXES" THREATENED ONLY BY POLITICS

SOUTH RIVER, N. J., Nov. 6 (AP)—The record in this municipality of 11,000 of "no local taxes" is endangered only by the intrusion of politics.

Revenue from the city owned pumping plant and from license and franchise fees kept the tax wolf away during the last year. Mayor Allgair now stipulates that if politics is held in abeyance the city can continue the no-tax program and at the same time reduce sewer rates.

When borough officials last fall took up consideration of the 1925 levy, they found surplus revenues of $45,000 on deposit. Rates for lighting current were reduced to those charged by competitors and local taxes abolished

MANNEQUINS NOW TAUGHT TO STRUT, GLIDE, PAUSE AND POSE

PARIS, Nov. 6 (AP)—It was the Mock Turtle in Alice in Wonderland who studied "reeling and writhing" in his undersea school. Paris is going to the Mock Turtle one better in a school for Mannequins, where "pausing and posing, and strutting and sliding" will form part of the curriculum this fall.

Less mysterious in their nature are the simple physical exercises to keep the girls' figures trim and neat—the instruction in the art of "wearing furs" and initiation into the secret of "showing off" a gown. The course requires 18 to 20 lessons.

WELL DRESSED TEACHER HAS MENTAL EFFECT ON PUPILS

SAN FRANCISCO—Nov. 6 (AP)—Appropriately and attractively dressed public school teachers are in favor with their superintendent, Joseph Marr Gwinn. The superintendent maintains that teachers should be well dressed because of the mental effect upon the children.

"The clothes of the teacher are the ornament upon which the eyes of the children are bent more frequently than anywhere else," said Mr. Gwinn. "Also it is generally proved that whenever one is dressed properly and well, he or she is more optimistic and does better work."

Noted Danish Explorer To Try Polar Flight

COPYRIGHT KEYSTONE VIEW CO., NEW YORK

The noted Danish explorer, Peter Freuchen, who was recently found in Baffin Land in the Arctic after being missing from civilization four years, is to make another Polar trip, but this time by plane. He is making negotiations with Lieut. Nobile, French aviator who has the same idea in mind.

OVER 70 YEARS OF SUCCESS

The Nervous System

The human nervous system is really a living telegraph line made up of electrical condensers, thinks Dr. W. R. Whitney of the General Electric Co., according to science. This idea is sharply disputed by scientists, who say that nerve messages do not travel at the speed of electricity, but Dr. Whitney demonstrated with condenser apparatus that the transit time of a message can be slowed down even to three seconds a time much longer than the known nerve reaction time of a human being.

1,845,000 in Moscow

Moscow's population as of June 15, 1925, is officially announced as 1,845,000. These are police figures and should be fairly accurate, as the registration is thorough. The increase during the year was 90,000, of which 25,000 was the excess of births over deaths. The death rate in 1925 was 15.5 per 1000, compared with 14 in 1924. Births were 30 per 1,000, compared with 39 before the war. Marriages were 18 per 1,000, compared with 6 before the war—possibly because of the facility and low cost of civil weddings. On July 1, state, cooperative and other public organizations had 257,000 employes, and private organizations, 75,000. Workmen in the city numbered 150,000, compared with 82,000 in 1921.

Last Fall Flower

The last fall flower is the November blossom of the witch hazel, or, as it is sometimes called, "the frost flower." It looks like an ice crystal in shape and color and can be found low on the ground among the brown stubble. This sturdy blossom is not in the least like the fragile Summer flower of the witch hazel. It never grows to more than three inches in height, so must ordinarily be sought for before it is found.

Transatlantic Phone

Success of experiments in transoceanic radiotelephony has led to the prediction by engineers that commercial transatlantic radiophone conversation will be a regular part of the telephone system before many years pass, says Scientific American. It will then be possible to lift the receiver of the ordinary telephone in any section of the United States and ask central for a number in London, just like a long-distance call is made.

It is understood that the experiments have utilized an entirely new principle with secrecy. A special form of carrier wave is radiated from the big station at Rocky Point, Long Island, which serves the same purpose as a telephone wire, along which the voice currents are superimposed on the carrier wave. The words are picked up at Chertsey, England, and are then passed through transformers and forwarded to London by underground wires.

ARTIFICIAL COTTON AND WOOL IN TURIN

In Turin is offered for sale the first time the new artificial wool and cotton made by a process analogous to that which produces artificial silk in abundant quantities. The invention is the work of Italian experimenters, and Italian firms are ready to commercialize it as soon as its practicality has been proved. Apparently the first results are not wholly satisfactory, but researches are continuing in the Rossi textile works and other factories. Should they prove successful, the result might be a profound alteration in the currents of world trade. Most of the raw materials of the new invention can be obtained in Italy, which may thus become largely independent of American and Egyptian cotton producers and of the English shepard.

Relativity Still Holds

In spite of all attacks, the theory of relativity is still on a firm foundation, according to Dr. Charles E. St. John of the Mount Wilson Observatory. All the tests of the theory suggested by Einstein, and several he did not think of, have supported the theory when put to trial.

One of the crucial tests of relativity consists in measuring the spectrum shift. If light has mass, as the Einstein theory postulates, it is subject to gravitational attraction. Therefore, the sun would tend, at least slightly, to pull back its light, even at the moment it sends it out. This would lead to the displacement of a source of light, having little spectrum as compared with the spectrum of a source of light, having little gravitional attraction, like an arc light here on earth. Dr. St. John made this test with delicate instruments and found the predicted shift.

Thomas B. Appleget, executive secretary of Brown university and assistant to the president since 1917, has resigned and on January 1 will go to New York to undertake for John D. Rockefeller, Jr., secretarial work in connection with the latter's general philanthropic activities.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Who puts his wit to constant use
For risking life has poor excuse.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

Slowly up the Long Lane in the moonlight ambled Jimmy Skunk. He wasn't in the road, but in the grass and bushes beside the road. You see, fat beetles were to be found in there sometimes, and Jimmy is always looking for fat beetles. Behind him, but unknown to Jimmy, were Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse. Nanny was a little doubtful about it. It seemed to her as if they were running a great risk. She knew that Jimmy Skunk took the greatest care to keep a respectful distance between himself and Jimmy. Jimmy continued on, and Reddy, as is his way, sniffed at Jimmy's tracks. Instantly he pricked up his black ears. Then he took a long sniff. "Meadow Mice!" said he under his breath, "Meadow Mice! And they have passed along since Jimmy did. They must be right behind him."

Very stealthily Reddy began to creep along with his nose to the ground and his eyes fixed straight ahead. The Meadow Mouse smell was very strong. In a moment he saw the grass move a little way ahead. It was only a very short distance behind Jimmy. Just then Jimmy looked around. He saw Reddy at once. Jimmy was provoked. Yes, sir, Jimmy was provoked. He didn't like the way he was being followed by Reddy Fox. He stamped his feet angrily. Reddy retreated rather hastily. All the time Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse were squatting perfectly still under some grass. They knew Reddy was following them. Nanny was frightened, but Danny thought it was a joke. You see, Danny felt absolutely safe. He knew he had nothing to worry about as long as Jimmy didn't see him. And it turned out just that way. Reddy Fox didn't dare to get near enough to catch Danny and Nanny because that would bring him within reach of that little scent gun Jimmy always carries with him. At the same time, Reddy didn't want to explain to Jimmy why he was following because he knew that Jimmy would try to catch Danny and Nanny, and of course this wouldn't suit Reddy at all.

Now you see Reddy's difficulty. There were those fat Meadow Mice and he didn't dare catch them. And at the same time he couldn't ask Jimmy Skunk to help him. So Reddy kept following along, hoping that Danny and Nanny would drop so far behind Jimmy that there would be no danger in catching them. But Danny was too smart for anything like this, and Nanny kept right close to Danny. So they moved along up the Long Lane in the moonlight toward Farmer Brown's barnyard, and all the time Reddy Fox was getting hungrier and angrier, and there wasn't a thing he could do about it. Right into Farmer Brown's barnyard walked Jimmy Skunk. With Nanny at his heels Danny dashed across the open yard and under a haystack. They were safe! So this is the way that Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse finally arrived at Farmer Brown's barnyard.

(Copyright, 1923, by T. W. Burgess.)

The next story: "The Richest Meadow Mice."

"I hope you are finding good hunting," said Reddy in his politest manner.

enjoys a dinner of Mice once in a while. But Danny insisted that they were safe. He said they were much safer than they would have been had Jimmy not been there. You see, Danny was taking great care that they didn't get near enough for Jimmy to know that they were following him.

Presently Jimmy Skunk met some one. Who do you think it was? It was a gentleman in red. It was a very smart little gentleman dressed almost wholly in red. It was Reddy Fox. Reddy stopped as soon as he saw Jimmy Skunk. "Good evening, Jimmy Skunk," said he, and said it most politely.

Jimmy looked up a trifle surprised. "Evening," he grunted, and stopped to pull over a stone in the hope of finding a fat beetle beneath it.

"I hope you are finding good hunting," said Reddy in his politest manner.

"There's plenty of hunting, but mighty little finding," grunted Jimmy and began to amble along straight toward Reddy.

Reddy most politely stepped aside and went around Jimmy Skunk, He

UNCASVILLE

Wednesday evening at the Union Baptist church, Montville, Mrs. Mary B. Wilson state vice president-at-large of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who was delegate from Connecticut to the world's convention in Edinburgh, Scotland, gave a very interesting talk about her trip, telling many amusing incidents in connection with it. She is an interesting and enthusiastic speaker and although large of the Woman's Christian Temperance all were interested and entertained. The members of the Loyal Temperance Legion (the children's branch of the organization) sang "I Will Soon be Twenty-One" and "Stand up for Law Enforcement". Rev. Edward L. Nield, pastor of the church sang a solo. The meeting closed with the hymn "Saved, Saved," which Mrs. Wilson had mentioned as being one she had heard sung with much enthusiasm in a little church in Scotland.

The local branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union holds its meeting at the home of the president November 12 at 2:30. Reports of the state convention will be given by the delegates.

At Sunday school Sunday Miss Gertrude Allen gave an interesting report of the older girls' conference held in New London. Miss Allen was one of the delegates.

At the meeting of the Boy Scouts of Montville last week a court of honor was held at which nine eight tenderfeet, Lloyd Chapin, James Davis, Clinton Sharpe, Frank Tiffany, Peter Tiffany, Elmer Johnson, William Sipple, William Wolfe, were made second class scouts. A large number were present.

The troop is now holding its meetings in Palmer Memorial school, having outgrown its previous quarters.

An interesting talk was given by John Lynch about things he saw while on a western trip.

A first aid kit was presented to troop by Harry E. Hasty. Norman Allen served one of his famous oyster suppers after the meeting.

The court of honor consisted of W. W. Lyman, Howard Rogers and Frederick Craven. The committeemen are Harry Hasty, secretary, A. J. Huggard, H. W. Rogers, Hubert Dart and F. B. Craven.

Mrs. Joseph E. Colton of East Northfield has returned to her home after spending two weeks with her mother, Mrs. Julia W. Starr.

Miss Elinor Vaill and Miss Jessie Parker of Waterbury are guests of Miss J. N. Starr over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Almon F. Weeks and children of Somersworth, N. H., spent a night in Montville, as guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. French. They are taking a trip to Florida in their automobile and expect to spend the winter there.

Walter Fitzgerald, 12 son of Frank Fitzgerald, of Island Falls, Me., was accidentally shot through the head by a companion, Albert Richards, while hunting late yesterday. He was rushed to the Houlton hospital, with no hope of recovery.

END BUNION PAIN FOREVER

No Need to Suffer Another Day Those Agonizing Torturing Pains.

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflamed, swollen toe joints and get them down to normal and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer from such enlargements would be wise to reduce them before they reach a more or less chronic stage.

Ask any first class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces lasts a long time and furthermore if this wonderful discovery does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Emerald Oil at once. Applied night and morning as directed they will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

WAUREGAN

At the Wauregan Congregational church a large number attended the annual roll call and enjoyed the excellent programme provided. Miss Dorothy Atwood's account of her visit to Panama and Costa Rica was interesting and instructive. Mr. Case's speech showed him to be a live wire.

Time may be money, but some men spend a lot of money in trying to have a good time.

WOMAN, 80, DEAD NEAR NEW LONDON, NEVER BEFORE NEEDED PHYSICIAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Anzis Bobsein, 80, widow of William Bobsein, died this morning at her home in Jranitexille, Waterfrd. She is survived by three sons, William Bobsein of Norwich; James Bobsein, New London and Louis Bobsein, Waterford and by a daughter, Mrs. Michael Conway, of his city. Mrs. Bobsein was taken ill with pneumonia last Sunday and with her illness came the first and only visit she ever needed from a physician.

The Union Bank & Trust company, executors of the will of Gertrude T. Pace, today sold the three story dwelling on the easterly side of Montauk avenue, between Blydenburg and Willetts avenues, to Barney Belgrade. The price paid was $25,000.

Max S. Abrams today sold an undivided one-third interest in a parcel of land on Lincoln avenue to Maurice Jacobs.

Louis Olbrys, 19, son of Louis Olbrys, of 26 Richards street, died at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital Wednesday as a result of injuries sustained at Groton Sunday afternoon when the motorcycle he was operating collided with a machine owned and driven by Matthew J. O'Brien, of Groton. The funeral was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Peter and St. Paul's Polish church. The body was taken to Norwich for burial in the National Polish cemetery.

A single case of intoxication was all the business before the police court this morning. The fellow prosecuted was a first offender. He got the service but a few words of advice. The wife was so filled with joy that she made trouble for himself and his fellow cellmate, who arrested him. The policeman put the youth in a cell, the bar that operates between the drunk and cook again in town a short time. There he had an idea to make it clean out the police and other things which a sober man would hesitate to attempt. He was fined up and this morning was taxed $5 or jail folly. He was a wiser youth when he left the police station than he was when he entered it. He was impressed with the necessity of telling the truth, too, for he endeavored to contradict the testimony of the officer and made a bad mess of that effort.

Irving Bottomly, a young mechanic who is unprecended here for the authorities at Leominster, Mass., as a fugitive from justice, was taken back to the Bay State this morning by the chief of police at Leominster. He went with the daddy of a baby given birth at Lawrence hospital) a few days ago to Edith Penney, 18. Bottomly expresses a desire to marry the girl and said so if she can secure the consent of her mother or her stepfather, but the latter holds out for the punishment of Bottomly. It seems to lawmakers here that Mr. Stepfather has no cause to say as to what course Edith Penney shall pursue, and they believe he will be convinced of that fact in Leominster. The girl is still in the hospital here where everyth ng possible has been done for her the expense being assumed by Bottomly, who says he does is one of genuine love that exists him and his wife into marriage relations that will be most happy

Manuel Beatrice, 52, die dihis morning at his home, 89 Willetts avenue, after having been ill with an incurable disease. Mr. Beatrice was a fisherman for many years, but during recent years had been employed by the Bulletin Printing Press Manufacturing company.

Edward C. Littlefield, formerly of New London, died suddenly of heart trouble this morning at his residence in New Haven, death being caused by heart trouble. Mr. Littlefield was employed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and during his residence in this city was employed as trainmaster, with headquarters at Union station.

Mary E. Bishop, widow of Nathan A. Woodworth, 77, died this morning at the residence of Quaker Hill. Waterford. Mrs. Woodworth, who had long been in ill health, is survived by two daughters, Miss Laura Woodworth, Quaker Hill and Mrs. Grace V. Lasson of Hartford and by a son, Thomas Woodworth, selectman of the town of Waterford.

Five cases occupied the attention of Justice Victor Prince in the juvenile court late yesterday afternoon and with the closing of the session the disposition of one of the youths was decided. The boy has been arrested several times of late because of petty pilfering and to prevent him from becoming a confirmed thief the lad was committed to the state reformatory for boys at Meriden. The other youths were given some wholesome advice as to their future conduct and were given into the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

An automobile owned and driven by M. Solomon, 11 Home street and an unidentified machine were in collision on Bank street early this evening. Solomon's car was damaged, but the extent of damage sustained by the other car is not known because it was operated away without the knowledge of the operator.

Patrolman David Nagle reported at the police station late this afternoon that an automobile bearing license plates which had been parked at the corner of Broad and Morgan streets a day or two. It was later found that the car was registered in the name of Edward Holmes. Holmes was located and explained the parking of the automobile being due to depleted battery and assured the authorities that the car would be removed to a garage tonight.

The police court will convene tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock, upon orders to that effect issued by Deputy Judge Lewis Crandall. The reason for the calling of the court session a half hour earlier than usual is to permit the court officials who desire to do so to arrange for attending football games.

When the court convenes it is flable to bring about the presentation of more drunks than have been in court at a long time, except possibly on a Monday morning, when the grist of court material is that which has been gathered in within 48 hours. Tomorrow however there are four drunks who will be given a hearing and probably before morning there will be several others to explain their departure from the straight and narrow path. Caroline Williams Corcoran, Clarence Wells and Edward Riordan caused a quartette of drunks to be locked up in the cells this afternoon, two being gathered in, when they were discovered about the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, in the vicinity of the union station.

John Riley Wall, colored, 17 Stony Hill, arrested by the New London police yesterday afternoon at the request of the state police from the Groton barracks, charged with reckless driving, was arraigned before Prosecutor Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court this evening and upon pleading guilty was fined $25 and costs.

Wall, in company with another negro, George Wesley, 14 John street, was in a car owned by Wall early Thursday morning when Mallory Hill, station 6, Waterford, the car crashed against a machine owned and driven by Joseph H. Stevens, 3 Squire St. Wall was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and evasion of responsibility, but this evening the charge was amended to the lighter offence. Besides the financial loss, in receiving the penalization of the court and the almost total destruction of his automobile, Wall suffered a fracture of the right forearm and laceration of the left hand, the latter injury being sustained when the negro was thrown through the windshield by the collision.

Joseph Woitysiat, 50, formerly of 1 Warner street, where he resided at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Perka, died this morning at the Mitchell ward of the Lawrence hospital, where he had been under treatment but a short time. Mr. Woitysiat was formerly employed at the plant of the New London Ship & Engine Co., and so far as is known he is without kin.

Mrs. Margaret Land of Mystic; Mrs. Catherine Harrington, 81 West Colt street; Miss Eleanor Henderson, Bucell street, Groton; Perry Frankson, Saybrook; William Byrne, United States Coast Guard service and Mrs. John Rugby, Voluntown, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Dr. George P. Cheney is in New York in attendance at the annual convention of the New England Railroad Surgeons' association of which he is a member. Dr. Cheney is a division surgeon here, in the employ of the Central Vermont railroad.

Mrs. Philip J. Heudel and son, of Broad street, are spending a few days in New York.

Mrs. Lillian Noble, 16 Mercer street, has secured employment with the New London Ship & Engine company.

Mrs. Arthur E. Bartlett and son, 93 Vauxhall street, are spending a few days with relatives in Boston.

Mrs. Cox and her daughter, Mrs. J. William Clark of 403 Broad street, have started for Washington, D. C., where they will remain ten days or a fortnight. Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Cox are making the trip by automobile.

Mrs. Roy C. Barker, 403 Williams street, has been summoned to Mercerville, N. J., because of the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. William H. Hutchinson.

Two or three members of the police department evidently believe that they are in a position to criticise the acts of the police court; for following Deputy Judge Lewis Crandall having received information that the acts of the court were being severely criticised by members of the department, the deputy judge, together with Acting Prosecuting Attorney Percy J. Hollanderaky this afternoon, called Captain Charles A. Finney into conference and made it plain to the head of the department that criticism by his subordinates must cease, or there would be trouble for the officers making the utterances criticising the impositions of fines and other acts of the court. Deputy Judge Crandall made it plain and specific that the criticising officers must cease their tactics and it would not be surprising if within the next 24 or 48 hours one or more of the officers who have caused friction in the smooth running of the department would be given a severe and possibly a public reprimand.

BELIEF SUBMERGED S-51 WILL BE FLOATED VERY SOON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8—It is believed by officers in charge of the force at work on the task of floating the U. S. S. S-51, which went to the bottom of Block Island sound two months ago following being rammed by the Savannah line steamer, City of Rome, will be floated within the next few days. Pontoons have already been placed beneath the undersea craft, which houses about 28 victims of the crash, and an additional three pontoons arrived at the scene of the salvaging this afternoon. The latest pontoons to arrive and which were shipped from the Brooklyn navy yard, will be lowered into position tomorrow and within the next 72 hours it is believed that the big submarine will be brought to the surface and then the bodies of the remaining officers and members of the crew will be readily recovered.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PRINCESS BONNIE WILL AFFORD ENTERTAINMENT

Princess Bonnie, a Spanish American musical play, to be presented at the Broadway theatre on November 17 and 18 by R. O. Fletcher Post, American legion promises to be one of the best plays ever presented by the legion in Norwich.

The leading characters have all appeared in one or more local plays and have built up reputations which will attract hundreds to the theatre to see both performances. The chorus groups are also of experienced local talent and the many novelty numbers are heavier and more intricate than those of previous shows.

Everything possible is being done to put the show over in true legion style, which means a good show, and tickets are now on sale by members of the cast and legion members.

First Evangelical Lutheran Church

Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, meeting of the Ladies' Aid society.

Thursday evening at 7.30, meeting of the Luther League.

Men Study Household Arts

Universities throughout the country are establishing a household arts course for men students. It is maintained there is a demand for it. It is now possible for men students to take a full year's course in food selection for house managers, camp cookery, elementary food economics and household management. In camp cookery courses it is difficult to accommodate all of the men who want to take it.

Blind, He Plans to Preach

A. J. Milburn, a blind piano tuner of Pawnee, Okla., has taken up the study of the Bible with the intention of becoming a minister. He is 32 years old and has been blind since he was an infant. His father was a retired minister. His interest was aroused when a number of his friends in Pawnee City presented a Braille Bible to him. He now has a Braille typewriter also.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Grotto Circus and Freak City

Carnivals, bazaars, entertainments, etc., have been conducted by various local organizations in this city, in seasons past, but nothing has ever been attempted that can compare with the Grotto Circus and Freak city, to be held on the evening of December 8-9-10 in the armory on McKinley avenue. It is in no sense a carnival, it is absolutely unlike any thing ever offered the public of Norwich and should have a large patronage each night.

Fred H. Graves of Stone Company Inc., of Boston is manager of the show and is working in conjunction with the prophets of Nemrod Grotto in putting it over. Mr. Graves has bona fide freaks, the greatest array of human oddities ever brought together under one roof, in addition to these freaks there will be three big vaudeville acts, which are top notchers, also dancing every evening from 8 to 11.

The armory will be transformed into a circus lot of the the typical type and there will be peanuts, popcorn, hot dogs, pink lemonade and in fact every thing, such as you would find at Ringland Bros. circus. Right here let me say a word about the freaks, be sure and see Zip, who has traveled all over the world. Zip is the exhibit that startled P. T. Barnum in the show business way back in 1858 a sailor leading an animal or man, which ever you care to call it, went into the office of the late P. T. Barnum. He sought to sell Zip. Barnum asked the question "What is it?" to which the sailor replied, "You named it," so since that time, Zip has been commonly known as Barnums "What is it?" Next we have the tenderfoot girl who is only 17 years old, the lady, the fire eater, snake charmer, a man who has only one leg but has two feet, then there's the Wild Man of Borneo, who eats raw meat, these are only a few of the many freaks you will see. In the line of entertainment this is entirely new, it is a wholesome entertainment and the public of Norwich and vicinity should avail themselves of the opportunity to attend this wonder show at the Armory Dec. 8-9-10.

The price of admission is only a dime. Watch for the big street parade on the opening night, some of the freaks will be in line, headed by the Nemrod Grotto Drum Corps, the line of march will be published later.

Broadway Theatre

"Soiled," the next attraction coming to the Broadway Sunday, was recently given its world's premiere showing at the magnificent Forum theatre in Los Angeles. For the benefit of those clients who like to read reviews before they run to buy tickets, we take pleasure in quoting the opinions of the Angel City press.

The Express, a "family" evening paper, said:

"Good gamblers are presumed always to pay their debts of honor. Therefore, a girl stands ready to make good a large sum of money that she borrows from a wealthy rogue, even at the price of dishonor. Such a dramatic theme motivates tense action in 'Soiled,' an unusual problem comedy that piques interest of patrons attending the Broadway theatre this week.

The Examiner (Hearst) took pleasure in exposing the secrets of showmanship while reviewing the picture as follows:

"The Forum theatre is not taking any chances. In fact, it is going to have everybody in Los Angeles out this week, by following the well-known law of averages. That is, it knows that while one star may appear to be more popular than another, yet taken in the gross, actually each one has an equivalent drawing power, so it is advertising ten stars in one picture.

"Through certain fistic manipulations of excellent Johnny Walker and equally fine Kenneth Harlan, the villain, played by Robert Cain, acquires a double header of black eyes which would indicate that the title might have more 'standing room only' punch if changed to 'The Soilers' featuring Kenneth Harlan and Johnny Walker.

"Vivian Martin, late of musical comedy, returns to the screen via this production. She make an appealing heroine, especially in the scenes with her mother, nicely played by Mary Alden. Wyndham Standing is his usual suave self, and Maude George as Mrs. Duane is equally interesting. The butler of James Mack is well done, while Aleo Francis in a scene with Mildred Harris shows what he can do in the part of an old rone.

"The end has a comedy punch which is unexpected and mirth-provoking."

Buffalo Bill, Jr., initial starring vehicle "Rarin' to Go," which is scheduled for the second feature at the Broadway theatre on Sunday boasts of a number of hair raising secenes, among them one which has the villain going head foremost over a 1,500-foot cliff in an auto.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Willys-Overland Automobiles

Continuing its policy of bringing out new models only as demanded by automobile purchasers, Willys-Overland now announced production of a new seven-passenger Willys-Knight car.

Ever since the Willys-Knight six was first introduced last spring there has been noted a constant demand on the part of new car owners for a seven-passenger car to round out a complete line of this model. In producing the new Willys-Knight six for seven passengers, Willys-Overland has made several important changes in construction and equipment which add to the beauty of the car as well as to the comfort of its occupants.

Because of the success of the Willys-Knight six engine no changes have been made in it, while the chassis remains unchanged with the exception of an increase in rear spring strength to care for additional passengers.

Conspicuous among changes in the new seven-passenger Willys-Knight sixes is the mounting of the spare rim on the left hand side of the body forward of the left front door, adding considerably to the long sweeping lines of the car, and presenting a completely filled out body at the rear.

Probably the most amazing part of the new seven-passenger models is the addition of little additional weight as compared with the five-passenger sedan and touring of the Willys-Knight six. While two additional seats have been provided for additional passengers and comfortable leg room added, the increased weight of the car is but slightly more than the model 66 five passenger cars.

The new seven-passenger Willys-Knight sixes are being built in both touring and sedan body types and completely round out the Willys-Knight lines of fours and sixes. With the wheelbase of the seven-passenger models and the overall length remaining at 126 and 175 inches respectively as in the five-passenger models, the body length from the engine hood to the rear of the body has been considerably increased to care for additional passengers. Auxiliary seats of the disappearing type are employed which completely fold out of way into the backs of the front seat, the compartment into which they fold being utilized, when seven passengers are riding, for leg room of the two auxiliary seat occupants. Approximately seven inches of additional space is provided from the front of the rear seat cushion to the backs of the auxiliary seats while the distance from the backs of the auxiliary seats to the back of the front seat has been established at 25 1-2 inches, providing ample leg room for the two extra passengers. Height of the auxiliary seats from the floor of the car is 13 5-8 which, with the reclining angle of the seats provide the most of comfort for the occupants.

List prices of the touring and sedan seven-passenger models of the Willys-Knight Sixes are $1950 and $2495 respectively, fob, Toledo.

Breed Theatre

If you can't decide whether you want to see a motion picture or a stage play go see Monta Bell's Pretty Ladies, a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production coming to the Breed theater. Pretty Ladies is both in one. It's a picture on the screen of stage life before the footlights and back stage, too. It shows you how stage folk live and it proves they are just as human as people who never have set foot in a theatre except as members of an audience.

The story is a colorful tale of a stage star who had everything she wanted—but a man. How she got one and then kept him in the face of a lot of opposition, is told by Belasco dramatic way.

Zasu Pitts is featured, and Tom Moore plays the leading male role. Other important cast members are Conrad Nagel, Norma Shearer, Lilyan Tashman, Bernard Randall, George K. Arthur, Paul Ellis, Helena D'Algy, Roy D'Arcy and Lucille Le Sueur.

Adela Rogers St. Johns wrote the story upon which the film is based. Alice D. G. Miller adapted it to the screen.

George O'Brien, who has been delighting audiences at the Breed theater in his latest production, The Fighting Heart, will leave tonight. Directed by John Ford, maker of The Iron Horse, this Fox picture is full of action, pathos and humor. In the cast are Billie Dove, J. Farrell MacDonald, Victor MacLaglen, Diana Miller and James Marcus.

Lyceum Theater

Sound, wholesome theatrical entertainment of the sort that has characterized all John Golden's plays, is within reach of Norwich playgoers at the Lyceum, New London tonight, when Seventh Heaven, the Golden record-smasher will be presented with a brilliant cast for the final performance. Although a heavy advance sale forecasts one of the season's largest audiences, there are still good seats at all prices.

Seventh Heaven ranks second to Lightnin' in the list of Mr. Golden's successes, as measured by the length of their Broadway runs, but from an artistic standpoint it is probably his most significant contribution to the American theater. Heights of virility and color untouched by Lightnin'. The First Year or Three Wise Fools are attained in this love drama of the Paris slums without sacrifice of the gentle humanity and humor of the earlier offerings. Added to other elements that have made friends for the Golden plays it holds thrills and heart throbs reminiscent of Madam X and The Two Orphans.

85-Year-Old Speaker at Y. M. C. A.

The public, especially those who have an interest in the work of the Young Men's Christian association, will be afforded a rare privilege on the coming Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Levi P. Rowland of Detroit 85 years old, and still active, will deliver a heart to heart talk which will doubtless be of unusual interest. Mr. Rowland was the first paid secretary in America of the Y. M. C. A., filling that office in the city of Boston, where he labored with marked success for a time, afterward going to Philadelphia, where he did splendid service in the association. He became well acquainted with John Wanamaker; they came to be warm friends as they worked together in the Y. M. C. A.

It is an opportunity for many who are interested in the great work the Y. M. C. A. is accomplishing all over America and the world will avail themselves of this unusual privilege. Hugh Kinder will render vocal solos.

Next Week at the Congregational Church

The Brotherhood meets at the Community House on Monday evening for supper at 6.30, this followed by an address by Rev. Myron E. Genter.

The Sodalitas meets in the church school rooms, Monday evening at 7.30. Members are asked to bring pictures suitable for use in scrapbooks to be made for a children's hospital.

Mid-week worship Thursday evening at 7.45. Mr. Abbott will speak on The Second Phrase of the Lord's Prayer.

The Junior Guild will meet at the Community house at 7.30 on Friday evening. Every member is urged to be present as there will be much work to do.

The regular meeting of the Camp-Fire will be held in the church school rooms at 7.15 on Friday evening.

U. S. STEEL FEATURED MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(By the A. P.)—Establishment of the highest quotations ever recorded by U. S. Steel common at 138, up 5 1-2, featured the resumption of the upward movement of prices in today's stock market. Net gains of 1 to 13 points were spread over a broad list, but there was also a number of substantial declines in stocks which were heavily liquidated under the cover of the strength of the market leaders.

Speculators for the advance started to bid up prices at the opening, stressing, as bullish factors, the drastic tax cuts proposed by the house ways and means committee, the growing number of increased and extra dividends, and the millions of dollars pouring into the stock market for investment and speculation from all parts of the world.

The weekly mercantile reviews again emphasized the steady improvement in trade. "After the favorable developments in October," states Dunn's Review, "a new month has opened with a further acceleration of business activity. The forward movement has been steadily gaining momentum as reports and statistics have demonstrated, and the sustained and orderly advance has strengthened sentiment throughout the country." Bradstreets sets forth that "trade and industry remain good and active as November opens, this after a heavy month's business in October."

General Motors, which is expected to declare an extra dividend of $3 to $5 at the directors meeting next week, jumped 5 points to a new record high at 149 3-4 and then slipped back to 147 3-4. Du Pont which owns a large block of General Motors stock, soared 12 points to a new peak at 270, or 32 3-4 points above last week's close. Heavy profit-taking was apparent in most of the other motors, but the net losses, as a rule, were small.

Further accumulation of the coppers was based on the belief that the Anaconda dividend would be increased at the next meeting and that an enormous increase in copper consumption would take place next year as a result of the huge hydro-electric power projects under way in all sections of the country. American Smelting crossed 125 to the highest price since 1907. Anaconda sold above 53 for the first time in two years and Kennecott, Utah and Cerro de Pasco sold at the highest prices in a year or longer.

General Electric soared nearly 15 points to 334 3-4, or within 3 points of the record high established before the separation of the electric bond and share properties. Other outstanding industrial strong spots were Brooklyn Edison, Central Leather preferred, Coca-Cola, Continental Can, Federal Mining and Smelting, the Kelly-Springfield preferred issues, National Lead, New York Canners, Republic Iron and Steel, South Porto Rican Sugar, Union Tank Car, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and U. S. Rubber, all of which closed to nearly 10 points higher, many of them at the highest prices ever recorded.

There were several weak spots, among them American Radiator, Continental Insurance, Brooklyn Union Gas, Louisville and Nashville, National Distillers common and preferred and Railway Steel Spring, all of which closed 2 or more points lower.

Call money rengwed at 4 3-4 per cent, and then dropped to 4 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Trading in foreign exchanges quieted down considerably with French francs rallying nearly 10 points from yesterday's low to around 4.30 cents. Demand sterling opened at 4.84 1-2 and then eased slightly. Japanese yen advanced 1-8 of a cent to a new high record for the year at 42 1-4 cents. Other rates moved within rather narrow and irregular limits.

Two women fainted and the doors had to be closed during the sale at the Adams store here on Friday. The women were given first aid and recovered as soon as they were taken from the crowd. Balloons were thrown from the top of the building before the sale and bore the following numbers which were awarded prizes, 32, 16, 4, 24, 13, 38, 40, 21. The envelope numbers were 13, 21, 31, 73, 67, 47, 44, 29, 39, 26.

NORWICH TOWN

The religious service at the Sheltering Arms Sunday afternoon, will be in charge of some one from Grace Episcopal church Yantic. It is expected that Lay Reader E. Allen Bidwell, of Hilma place, or the visiting clergyman who may supply this parish on that day will officiate and that several members from the choir will furnish the singing.

The November meeting of Home Chapter of the King's Daughters, Monday afternoon at the Johnson Home, is to take the form of a meeting for "thanks." At this time, the report of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Connecticut branch, of the International Order of King's Daughters and Sons, held in Norwalk, October 13th and 14th, will be submitted. Mrs. Thomas Keene was first delegate from Home Chapter.

Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, attended the two days' session this week of the forty-eighth annual meeting and general conference of the Congregational churches of Connecticut, held at the Center church in South Manchester. Rev. Mr. Bailey was chairman of the nominating committee. Herbert L. Verrinder was the delegate from the Norwich Town church.

The Norwich Town class, Mrs. William Weaver leader, is to hold an all-day meeting Tuesday, November 10th, at the home of Mrs. Arthur Fulton, of Huntington avenue, when Miss Edith Strain, a specialist from Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, will instruct the class in dressmaking. This is under the auspices of the Home and Farm Bureau Extension work.

An outline of the programme at the National Council of Congregational churches held in Washington the latter part of October and to which he was a delegate from the New London association of Congregational churches and ministers, is to be submitted during the Sunday morning worship, at the First Congregational church, by the minister, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey.

FORECLOSURES ARE GRANTED IN NORWICH AND NEW LONDON SUITS

Foreclosures in this city and New London were granted by Judge C. L. Avery in the superior court short calendar session here Friday morning.

Attorney John C. Geary of New London obtained a foreclosure judgment for $2,996.70 on a second mortgage against property of John J. Gagnon consisting of two stores, with all modern improvements on Ocean avenue in the rear of the Lawrence hospital. The first mortgage is for $6,000 and the limitation for redemption is the first Tuesday in Lecember. A real estate dealer placed a valuation of $8,500 on the property.

Foreclosure for $666.25 in favor of Harry Markow of New York on a second mortgage against Stanley and Kiety Dziaczyski on the property, 141 Elizabeth street, this city, a two tenement dwelling house. A prior lein for $5,000 is held by the Norwich Building & Loan association. Two real estate men, John A. Cunningham and Richard L. Tarrant, estimated the value of the property at $6,500. The first Tuesday in January is the limitation for redemption.

The Westminster Bank of Providence, R. I., was given judgment of $2,739.53 against Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Davis of Stonington. This amount was due on a $2,600 note with interest at 6 per cent given to the bank by Mr. Davis bearing the indorsement of his wife.

Rev. Walter F. Parmalee of Ohio, a member of the Ku Klux Klan, who resided for some time with his wife, on the farm of Mrs. Charles E. Senior at 279 Huntington street, New London was given a judgment for $759.57 against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of Atlanta, Ga., doing business in the state of Connecticut. Judgment was rendered as per sworn bill of particulars, which was sworn to by Mr. Parmalee to Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, of the law firm of Hull, McGuire and Hull, his counsel in the matter. There was no appearance for the Klan.

In the sworn bill of particulars as on file with Clerk George E. Parsons of the superior court, Mr. Parmalee, claimed $259.07 for traveling expenses saying that he had expended that amount from Nov. 1, 1924, to Jan. 10, 1925, while up Klan business. His salary, according to his statement was $50 per week, and amounts to $550, which is from Nov. 8, 1924, to Jan. 17, 1925.

Bond of $75 for costs to be filed within two weeks was made in the case of Sullivan vs. Kennedy.

Judge Avery granted an order on sale in the case of the H. G. Craig & Co., Ltd., et al. vs. Uncas Paperboard Co. The receiver, Frank W. Browning, through counsel, stated that several prospects are being negotiated with for the sale of the property, located in Thamesville, this city. The order which gives the receiver the right to sell the real estate, machinery, and equipment, exclusive of accounts receivable and inventories, directs that the property be sold for not less than $300,000.

The receiver's statement of orders from March 14, 1925 to Nov. 1, 1925, was approved by the court, while the matter of order authorizing the receiver to execute an option went off.

In regard to the receiver executing a lease to the Connecticut company, this was granted. Poles, etc., on the land of the Paperboard company, owned by the Connecticut company, were cassd for $1.000. The re-hearing allowance claim of Robert Blank was postponed.

Permission was granted to three attorneys to sue the receivers in the matter of Jaffe vs. S. & W. Self Service Stores, Inc. These were attorneys for Boynton-Boston Co., Bishop Gidwell & Co., and P. Berry & Sons, Inc.

Continuance for 30 days was granted in the case of Routh vs. Levitt, et al.

Disclosure of defense or judgment in the case of Marbridge Finance Corp. vs. Clay was postponed as was the case of Joseph Zdancewics vs. Veronica S. G. Zdancewics, hearing on motion for allowance to defend.

In the case of the Textile Engineering Co., vs. Still, et al., demurrer to answer of the Braided Thread Corp.; motion to expurge part of G. E. Still's answer; motion to expurge part of the Braided Thread Corp. answer was postponed until next week.

The following matters went off the list:

Rabine vs. the American Woolen Co., disclosure of defense or judgment; Moran vs. Manning, et al., appointment of guardian ad litem and disclosure of defense or judgment, Bohdan Cuprak vs. Louis Cuprak, et al., disclosure of defense or judgment; Helen Cuprak vs. Louis Cuprak, et al., disclosure of defense or judgment; Louis Cuprak vs. the Interstate Trucking Co., disclosure of defense or judgment.

ASKS STATE TO PAUSE ON ARMISTICE DAY

In a proclamation designating November 11 Armistice Day, Governor Trumbull recommends that all business and traffic stop for two minutes at 11 a. m., the hour firing ceased on the western front Nov. 11, 1918, "in solemn tribute to the memory of our soldier dead."

"We cannot too often reconsecrate ourselves to the great things for which they gave their lives," the proclamation adds. The governor also suggests that the day is an appropriate occasion to remember in terms of practical gratitude the disabled soldiers and to renew the spirit that prompted their service.

"We cannot," the proclamation says, "soon forget the great sob of relief, the storm of joy and thankfulness and solemn pride, which swept over the nation at the news of the armistice on that eventful day of November, 1918.

"For all of us it meant a renewed sense of national security; a justification of high ideals; a consciousness of a fight well fought and honorably won. It becomes, however, increasingly easy to regard phases of the late war in the light of an evil dream; to overlook the shattered remains in our hospitals; to ignore the need at our own doorsteps to stifle even the spirit which prompted our own service. To the end that this spirit may be kept alive in our hearts, I designate Wednesday, Nov. 11, next, as Armistice day and recommend that it be observed throughout the state as a day of thanksgiving for the victory of our arms and a day of commemoration for all the heroic men and women whose sacrifices made that victory possible.

"I suggest that it is an appropriate occasion to remember in terms of practical gratitude our disabled soldiers, and I recommend further that on this day, in so far as may be practicable, all business and traffic be suspended at 11 o'clock for a period of two minutes in solemn tribute to the memory of our soldier dead. We cannot too often reconsecrate ourselves to the great things for which they gave their lives."

INFIRMARY NEAR COMPLETION AT ODD FELLOWS HOME

The new $225,000 infirmary at the state Odd Fellows home in Fairview, Groton, will be completed in about six weeks, according to an opinion expressed Friday by Herbert J. Phillips, superintendent of the home. Construction of the large stone building was begun a year ago this week. The corner stone of the infirmary was laid with official dedicatory exercises last June on grand masters day.

Work on the building is progressing in accordance with the schedule anticipated at the start. The main construction has been completed and all that remains to be done now is the interior finish. The heating plant is being installed and it is expected that it will be tested and put into operation within the next two weeks. Present conditions indicate that the infirmary will be ready for occupancy shortly after the beginning of the new year.

Plans for the dedication of the building are still in the making. It is anticipated that suitable exercises will be arranged upon the completion and formal dedication will take place next June.

JURY CASES ASSIGNED, FOR SUPERIOR COURT

The following jury cases have been assigned by Judge C. L. Avery for trial in the superior court in this city:

Tuesday, November 10.—Moran vs. Klingon (on trial); Mary Gunning vs. Albert S. Hoffman; Patrick F. Gunning vs. Albert S. Hoffman; Terry vs. Hoffman; Hall vs. Connecticut company.

Friday, Nov. 13.—Short calendar, bar meeting, and assignment of cases.

Tuesday, Nov. 17 (Special)—Berkowitz, et al., vs. Levine; Druger vs. Nugent (misf).

Special Assignments

Tuesday, Nov. 24—Schweinert vs. Sea Sled company, Ltd.

Tuesday, Dec. 1 — Hutchins vs. Stewart, Admr., appeal from probate.

Tuesday, Dec. 15—Morgan vs. city of New London.

Sooner or later the crooked man will find himself in straits.

HYGIENIC CONDITIONS IN PRINTING TRADES GOOD

A report by S. Kjaer, an investigator of the bureau of labor statistics, has just been issued at Washington on hygienic conditions in the printing trades, which gives in detail a grist of information of interest to publishers, descriptions of processes of various branches of the printing industry, including ink grinding and roller making, reports on ages and character of workmen, detailed descriptions of hazards, etc.

S. Kjaer's survey consisted of personal investigation of approximately one thousand plants located in twenty-one principal cities. Detailed reports were made of surveys of 536 of larger plants, including some night operations. Number of employes included in the investigation was 81,134. In this connection report said, "The industry is one of considerable importance, since product is used in all industrial business, and every day life, ranking among the necessities of present lare. Various branches of work performed in over 35,000 establishments by more than 600,000 workers, including proprietors, managers, superintendents and clerks."

Of 81,134 workers employed in all branches, one-fifth were females; one sixtieth were over 60 years of age, ranging as high as 91 years.

Eating in work rooms should be prohibited. Compulsory washing of the hands should be enforced in all cases where lead products are in use, as greatest source of lead poisoning arises from eating with hands soiled by lead oxide from handling type fold type particularly) plates and metal slugs and ingots. Warm water for washing purposes is found to be necessary to remove all traces of lead from the hands.

Inhalation of lead dust is injurious. This danger has been greatly lessened by non-distribution system now generally in use. Lead dust in type cases can easily be removed by vacuum cleaner. Cleaning of the plungers on linotype and monotype machines is fruitful source of lead dust. Can be done away with by washing in water or by the use of closed cleaners.

Third possible source of lead poisoning; fumes from molten metal, can easily be disposed of by proper ventilation and should not be neglected, unless it is proved conclusively that lead poisoning is not derived from inhaling the fumes. There is no evidence to make such conclusive proof and many authorities deny the claim that fumes are poisonous.

Acute and violent cases of lead poisoning wer exeldom found or heard of during the survey. Rarity of these cases is borne out by mortality statistics of United States Bureau of Census, which gives death rate for lead poisoning per 100,000 enumerated population, for the special districts surveyed in both 1910 and 1920 and which contained more than one-half of population of the country, as 0.2 for both years. Only 14 cases of lead poisoning in five years previous to survey were heard of by the investigator.

A. N. P. A. bulletin, commenting on this phase of the report, says:

"As the census reports show two-tenths of one per cent of 'more than one-half the population of the country' suffered from lead poisoning it is apparent as there were only fourteen cases among 81,000 employes covered by survey, lead poisoning cannot be considered an 'occupational disease' of printing trade, but on the contrary printers have very much less of it than those following other vocations. This explodes one of the myths regarding hazards to which members of printing trade unions are subject."

Information was requested from employers in various establishments regarding tuberculosis cases appearing among their workers during five years preceding the visits. Result was rather surprising. Only 29 cases were mentioned for 536 establishments employing 31,314 workers. Only conclusion that can be drawn is that some of instances were withheld, or not known to employers, because these cases were simply attacks of the disease and not deaths, while according to statistics on subject deaths would ordinarily be nearly 100 annually for the 31,000 workers or 500 for the total period of five years.

TRAVELERS MAGAZINE DISCUSSES HIGHWAY PLAN

The current issue of the U. C. T. Monthly features an article on Modern Transportation which is devoted to the developments at the recent Norwich-Putnam highway hearing at Central Village. The article says:

The public hearing on the re-location of the Norwich-Putnam Trunk Road, before State Highway Commissioner J. A. Macdonald at Central Village, brought out some rare views from sources unexpected. Very weak, indeed was the arguments brought forth by the opposition. It was particularly noticeable, that the future requirements of modern transportation, was entirely lost sight of by those who spoke against the plan as presented by Norwich Council, U. C. T. of A.

Chambers of Commerce, the supposedly one organization or forum of recognized authority, whose action should express the sentiment of the leading minds in communities, straddled the question. Just because a red herring is drawn across the landscape, by someone unfamiliar with modern highway construction, should not be sufficient grounds for wobbling and straddling the issue.

Bridging Aspinook Pond

The bridging of the Aspinook Pond was broadcasted as a wild undertaking, an engineering feat of great magnitude, comparable with the Bear Mountain project. Let's see just how wild it was and how it worked out? Sixty years ago the towns of Norwich and Sprague, bridged the Shetucket river at Occum with a two span iron bridge. Each span being 110 feet in length, resting on a central pier, the bridge being 220 feet in length. As far back as 1865 it was not considered out of the ordinary as an engineering proposition.

The proposed bridge across the Aspinook Pond at Jewett City calls for a similar two-span bridge, with each span 100 feet in length, a total of 200 feet. Nothing very wild about that. Twenty feet less in length than the Occum bridge across the Shetucket river. The Occum bridge was financed by the towns of Norwich and Sprague. The bridge at Jewett City will be financed by the state of Connecticut and the federal government.

Federal Aid

Federal aid is adjusted on the basis of the number of miles of improved road, in a given year, as against the total miles of unimproved roads in the state. That being the case and Connecticut standing second in the number of miles improved in 1924—should receive from the federal government from one-third to one half the cost of rebuilding the Norwich-Putnam trunk highway. To be specific, the State of Connecticut will get federal aid at the rate of $15,000 per mile of rebuilt highway, and will pay one-half the cost of the Aspinook Pond bridge. Call the proposition wild if you please. These facts were laid before the reading public of Eastern Connecticut through the press and were given chambers of commerce prior to the hearing.

Grade Crossings Impossible

The future growth of motor traffic over through trunk lines, spells the doom of the dangerous railroad grade crossings. Wherever there is to be a new trunk highway constructed the grade crossing is very properly laid on the shelf. Not for one minute will the state highway department consider crossing railroad tracks at grade, on through trunk lines, where same can be avoided.

The reason for this is not wholly due to the danger risk, but because of delays to traffic as well. To build state highways at a cost of many millions of dollars and not eliminate bottle necks, the gain in expeditive traffic would be out of all proportion to the cost involved. Putting up the bars across modern highways every few miles is a thing of the past. The big thing in the future, in the way of avoiding congestion on our splendid concrete highways, is to speed up traffic. States in general are recognizing this and are removing the speed limit ban on automobiles.

Highway Up-Keep

It was brought out at the hearing that some five miles of improved highway would revert back to the towns through which it passed, provided the re-location plan became effective. Divide this among the four towns interested, viz: Killingly, Brooklyn, Plainfield and Griswold, and a trifle over one mile would revert back to each. Compare this additional cost of upkeep with the benefits gained by these towns and the public-at-large, viz: Five miles of newly developed roads, re-routing through traffic around and not through congested centers, the unquestionable saving of many human lives, and the development and growth of rural communities. Town officials, long the prey, of these four towns must have recognized their error, in not spontaneously accepting this great opportunity to stand by the state and federal government. We hope reason will prevail and that Eastern Connecticut will not lose out on this wonderful plan of highway betterment.

TWO WIVES SECURE DIVORCES THEY SOUGHT

Two of the four divorce cases on the short calendar session list of the superior court here Friday morning heard by Judge C. L. Avery and the divorces granted. The two other cases were postponed.

Alice Goyette Stamm of Hanover, formerly of Norwich, was granted divorce from Walter Stamm of this city whom she married March 24, 1920, she alleged intolerable cruelty since Sept. 19, 1923 and testified that while living in a rooming house in this city her husband once choked her and threw her on the bed, bruising and injuring her. The court gave her the custody of a four-year-old daughter.

Divorce for desertion since March 2, 1923, was granted to Myra Weir Minhold of New London from Oscar M. Minhold who is with the coast guard service stationed at New London. They were married April 20, 1914. Mrs. Minhold's testimony that her husband has been known to keep company with other women was corroborated by another witness. She was allowed to resume her maiden name of Myra Weir.

Hallowe'en Masquerade

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Coffey of 2 Church street, a Hallowe'en masquerade party was given by Master Bob Coffey to about twenty-five friends. The evening was passed pleasantly with Hallowe'en stunts, instrumental and vocal music. Games were enjoyed by the little tots. Irene Shea took first prize for pinning the tail upon the donkey. The other prize was taken by Master Foley. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Coffey assisted by Mrs. J. F. Leiper and Mrs. Connors. The room was decorated in black and orange, also the table. Guests from out of town were cousins from New London, Providence and friends from Canada.

NORWICH SECOND IN NON-RESIDENT AUTO ACCIDENTS

Less than half the motor vehicles which figured in accidents in the first six months of this year were "away from home" at the time of the mishaps, according to a check-up, completed by the state motor vehicle department. Reports to the department show that 14,278 motor vehicles had accidents in that period and that 6,704 or 45.5 per cent. of them came from towns or cities other than those in which the accidents occurred.

So far as the larger cities were concerned, New London had the highest record of out-of-town cars in difficulties within its limits, 35.6 per cent. of 284 machines damaged in that city being owned elsewhere. Norwich came second, with out-of-town cars making up 32.6 per cent. of 243 cars in accidents coming from other places. New Haven came next, with a percentage of 29.9, followed by Bridgeport, with 28.5 per cent., Hartford with 24.6 per cent. and Waterbury with 24.3 per cent.

Police chiefs in several of the cities have pointed out, at various times, that much of the traffic difficulty which they encountered was due to out-of-town drivers. The theory of some of them has been that most of the resident operators were familiar enough with the bad intersections and other dangerous locations within their own cities to be cautious in approaching them, but that their education in this respect was counterbalanced to a considerable degree by the unfamiliarity of out-of-town drivers with these places.

COURT IMPOSES FINE FOR DEFECTIVE BRAKES

Five dollars and costs was the fine meted out to Vito DeBartolo of this city when he was presented before Judge H. H. Pettis in the city court Friday morning on a charge of having defective brakes on his machine. A charge of evading responsibility was nolled.

DeBartolo left his machine parked on Pond street and in some manner, due to defective brakes, the car ran down the hill and damaged another machine. It is claimed DeBartolo drove the machine away without ascertaining the amount of damage done to the other car. He claimed that he was around the scene of the accident for two hours. The state did not press the evading responsibility charge.

Tony Izzarelli of this city was fined $3 flat on a charge of not having his operator's license with him when apprehended by an officer.

RETURNS TO HOSPITAL TO HAVE HURTS TREATED

Earl Leino, one of the two men injured when their Dodge touring car overturned near the Newent church on the Lisbon road late Thursday night and who refused treatment at the Backus hospital when taken there in the ambulance returned to the hospital Friday for treatment. He has a badly damaged left eye and a large lump on the side of his face. Leino put up such a fuss at the hospital Thursday night after he had to be taken away by the police, who let him go after questioning him at police headquarters and finding that he displayed no signs of intoxication.

Automobile and Wagon Collide

Thursday night a Chevrolet express delivery driven by Elton McKenzie of Germania street and a wagon driven by Joe Smotrich of No. 20 North High street, collided on Providence street, Taftville. The damage to the wagon consisted of a broken right front wheel and the damage to the machine comprised a bent left front mudguard. No one was injured.

PINK AND WHITE FOR BIRTHDAY PARTY DECORATIONS

About fifty friends and relatives attended the birthday party given in honor of the fifty-ninth birthday of Mrs. Mary Durr at the home of her daughter Mrs. Henry La Plant of 257, North Main street, Thursday evening. The dining room was prettily decorated in pink and white. In the center of the table was a beautiful basket of pink roses and white carnations which was given by her daughter, Miss Louise Durr. A large birthday cake with fifty nine candles aglow was presented to Mrs. Durr by her daughter Mrs. Edward Kane. A dainty lunch was served consisting of salads, sandwiches, cake, ice cream, coffee, candy and nuts. Later in the evening punch was served. The hostess was assisted in serving by Miss Bernice Higgins and Mrs. Teresa Partridge. Several selections were beautifully rendered on the violin by Mis Laura Peterson of Attleboro, Mass., assisted by Mr. Bernard of New York on the piano. Games and dancing were enjoyed by all. Mrs. Durr was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

DESCRIBES M'ALL MISSION WORK IN FRANCE

Mrs. David M. Miller of Elizabeth, New Jersey, told an interested audience Thursday afternoon at the Osgood Memorial, many details of the work of the American Medical association in France. It is known there as "La Mission Populaire Evangelique de France."

The miscellaneous articles of all kinds sent over by members in this country, are being distributed to the suffering poor in the devastated territory. The French government has made this condition. So great is the need that even the wooden cases (similar to those used by the Red Cross) in which the articles are packed, are converted into cupboards for use in the homes of the poor. Mrs. Miller told how one cake contained 49½ lbs of sugar, and a bale of carpet rags. Some of the old war ambulances and hotel busses are being used for gospel wagons.

Mrs. James C. Colgate of New York, the national director in this country, was in France this spring, and gathered together a group of American women over there who are working to interest other Americans in the work of the mission.

Institutional work is being done and some of the stations have playgrounds and gymnasiums large enough for a group of 100.

Mrs. S. H. Herne, treasurer of the Norwich Auxiliary, gave an encouraging report, and assured the members that she never lost hope and always had expectations."

In helping the victims of the World war restoring some to health, bringing comfort to cripples, the members of the McAll are realizing the joy of an adventure in international Friendship. Miss Elizabeth Huntington presided over the meeting.

NORWICH BOY SCOUTS WILL SEE YALE GAME

About ten automobile loads of Boy Scouts from Norwich are planning to see the Yale-Maryland game at New Haven this (Saturday) afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Scouts have been directed to assemble in the section at the Yale bowl which will be marked "Norwich."

Machines for the transportation of the Scouts are to be furnished by Thomas M. Shields, A. G. Lillibridge, Dr. R. R. Agnew, Forest Lewis, Rev. John J. Reilly, F. A. Benton and several others.

POETRY

The Footstep on the Stair

The sweetest sound, beyond compare,
It sets my waiting heart a-beat,
Is Mabel's footstep on the stair.

Its music chases every care;
Oh, how I love the patter sweet—
The sweetest sound beyond compare.

So lithe is she, so dainty fair,
Like wind-blown rose-leaf, flimsy, fleet
Is Mabel's footstep on the stair.

The sunbeams through the window share
My joy, and brighter grow to greet
The sweetest sound beyond compare.

Now she's coming—listen—there!
Too fine for earth—for Elfland meet
Is Mabel's footstep on the stair.

But—will she heed my lover's prayer?
Pain would I kiss her tuneful feet—
The sweetest sound beyond compare,
Is Mabel's footstep on the stair.

A Contented Mind

I weigh not fortune's frown or smile;
I joy not much in earthly joys;
I seek not state, I reck not style;
I am not fond of fancy's toys;
I rest so pleased with what I have,
I wish no more, no more I crave.

I quake not at the thunder's crack;
I tremble not at news of war;
I swoon not at the news of wrack;
I shrink not at the blazing star;
I fear not loss, I hope not gain,
I envy none, I none disdain.

I see ambition never pleased;
I see some Tantals starved in store;
I see gold's dropsy seldom eased;
I see even Midas gape for more;
Neither the lofty nor too low;
This, this is all my choice, my cheer—
A mind content, a conscience clear.
—Joshua Sylvester.

AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS ARE STEALING CARS TO ORDER

Members of a Large Ring of Thieves Are Reported to Have a "Clearing House" in the Vicinity of Springfield—The Ring Also Conducts Extensive Bootlegging Operations —An Arrest Was Made in Hartford Saturday Night After a Running Gun Fight.

HARTFORD, Nov. 8—The arrest of George Lohs after a running fight here Saturday night, has disclosed, according to Joseph P. Harrison, investigator for the Automobile Insurance company of this city, that automobiles are being stolen to order by a large ring of automobile thieves operating throughout New England. Lohs is alleged to be a member of the ring. The ring has been operating with considerable success throughout New England and a number of eastern states for the past few years, Mr. Harrison said.

Mr. Harrison, who has been actively engaged in running down a number of members of the alleged ring, declared that its central office and clearing house is located somewhere in the vicinity of Springfield, Mass., and that its agents are working in every large New England city. He predicted the ultimate smashing up of the ring some time this winter.

"The ring has been stealing an average of 800 cars annually," Mr. Harrison said, "of which number more than 200 have come from Connecticut and some fifty from Hartford and environs. And these cars have not been stolen haphazardly. The ring has its salesmen who go out and sell cars even before they are stolen. A prospect is found and asked what kind of a car he desires. This knowledge is then referred to the ring's field workers and the car is obtained and the sale completed.

"The ring is also engaged in extensive bootlegging operations and we have not been able as yet to determine which of the two occupations is its sideline and which its regular business. But we are sure of one thing. We are rounding up a number of its lesser workmen and are gradually getting closer and closer to the leaders."

ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH $8,000 JEWEL ROBBERY

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. (AP)—After an 18-months police search, which extended from the east to the west coast and back, detectives today brought Harry Sitamore, 31, back to New York from Kingston, N. Y., in connection with an $8,000 jewel robbery in the Hotel Alamac in May, 1924.

The Jewels were stolen from the suite of Mrs. Edna Johnson, wife of Howard Johnson, a song writer. Harry Behan, a former convict, the principal in the crime, was convicted six months after the robbery and is now serving a term of 20 years in a state prison.

In 1924 Behan and his wife made the acquaintance of Mrs. Johnson and were invited to dinner at her suite. While Behan was alone with Mrs. Johnson for a moment he bound and gaged her, stripped her of her jewels, seized others from her jewel case and then escaped with his wife. Behan was arrested as he was about to leave the city.

Then the search for Sitamore, who was charged with acting in concert with Behan, was taken up. The trail led as far as Los Angeles, Cal., to the west and south to Washington, D. C., New Orleans and Memphis.

Word was received by police several days ago that Sotamore was expected to arrive at Kingston in an automobile. Two detectives were sent to that city and the fugitive was arrested yesterday.

After the Johnson robbery police said that the crime bore evidences that it might have been done by the same persons who killed and robbed Dorothy King and Louise Lawson "Broadway Butterflies" between the time of the Johnson robbery and the date when Behan was arrested. Edith Bobe, fashionable dressmaker to both Miss King and Miss Lawson, was robbed of $50,000 worth of jewelry. Police expressed the belief again that the same criminals had planned all of this series of robberies. Police later announced that they had determined that Behan had been in Miss Lawson's apartment with her six hours before she was strangled to death. They were unsuccessful, however, in their attempts to connect him with the crime.

After his arrest Behan told police that shortly before the Johnson robbery, which he admitted, he and two gunmen had invaded the apartment of Mrs. Mildred Monroe, former Follies dancer and robbed her of $200 worth of jewels.

DROPPED DEAD WHILE PLAYING GOLF IN HAMDEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—C. S. Spencer Richardson, manager of the New Haven office of Hincks Brothers and company, investment brokers, dropped dead today while playing golf at the Meadow Brook country club in Hamden. Medical Examiner G. H. Joslin, of Hamden pronounced death due to heart trouble.

Mr. Richardson had been playing three hours when he informed his partner, Phillip Brill, that he was going to stop playing. Mr. Richardson then dropped to the ground and was dead when a physician reached him.

Mr. Richardson had been a resident of New Haven for about nine years, coming here as manager of Hincks Brothers and company from New York where he was associated with the Russell Sage foundation for a number of years. He was 47 years old and leaves a wife and one daughter.

SAYS MILITARY HOUSING SITUATION IS ATROCIOUS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. (AP)—Time and elements rapidly are robbing the army of house and home, Secretary Davis of the war department said today in a statement advocating congressional approval of a building program.

The military housing situation is so bad, he said, that it is ranked as "the most pressing problem which confronts the war department."

If congress will authorize it, he added, a good part of the expense for needed buildings can be met by using proceeds from the sale of army real estate, including some in Florida.

This picture of the army's plight was sketched by the secretary in a formal statement:

Upwards of 37,000 officers and men living in temporary shelter, mostly wooden barracks thrown up hastily during the World war.

One regiment in Hawaii housed in a temporary building erected in 1913.

One in Panama in a temporary cantonment originally designed to house canal laborers.

One at Fort Benning, Ga., that has had nothing but canvas over its head for six years.

Army hospitals and nurses quartered in war time shacks.

About 30,000 horse and mules in very flimsy stables.

To witness the impracticability of such a situation, the secretary said that last year, 250 fires among the dry timbers of army structures destroyed property costing originally more than $1,500,000, while much time that should have been devoted to military training was spent by army detachments laboring to keep their buildings "liveable."

RECOMMENDS BEER FOR WOMEN GOING TO BED

BERLIN, Nov. 8. (AP)—"If American women drank a stein of strong beer before going to bed, they would need less opiates," writes Dr. Gretz Schueler-Helbing, a well-known woman physician in the Tageliche Rundschau. "It is far less harmful to drink beer, which in most cases has a quieting soporific influence, than to get used to opiates. Almost always opiates after they have been employed once or twice lead to a regular habit."

Dr. Schueler-Helbing, finds that women usually start with a mild opiate and then by progressive stages continue until they reach morphine or a similar drug.

"The use of alcohol in itself," she asserts, "does not lead to drunkenness, as only people so predisposed fall victim to it. Healthy persons never, only in rare and exceptional cases, exceed moderation.

"To the physicians alcoholic liquors are indispensable for medicinal purposes. Even in severe cases of grippe where absolute lack of appetite is frequent, I often prescribe beer as a restorative, because I find the very sight of fresh good looking beer has a stimulating effect on the appetite."

For colds she finds alcohol an excellent germ killer. Women supporting families by their work are often so exhausted, the physician declares, that a moderate quantity of wine or beer will work wonders of restoration. Her estimate of beer as nourishment is summed up—"Beer may well be designated as liquid bread."

CELEBRATION AT RUSSIAN EMBASSY IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Nov. 8—The German government headed by Chancellor Luther, Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister and Dr. O. Meissner, secretary of state, representing President Von Hindenburg, attended the celebration at the Russian embassy last night of the eighth anniversary of the founding of the soviet republic, in this manner for the first time they officially participated in the triumph of bolshevism the further spread of which they have been bending every effort to prevent.

Most of the foreign ambassadors were present, and comment was general that the fete constituted the greatest recognition ever accorded the soviet regime at any place.

TO OFFER PRAYERS FOR "AN EVENTUALLY WARLESS WORLD"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—The commission on international justice and good will of the Federal Council of Churches tonight made public an appeal to pastors and church leaders to offer prayers during "Armistice week" which began today for guidance of American international relations toward the attainment of "an eventually warless world."

WOULD CALL ARMISTICE DAY "WILSON DAY."

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Resolutions calling for a redesignation of armistice day as "Wilson Day," in order to honor the memory of the war president, were adopted today by the downtown chamber of commerce of New York.

Italian Steamer in Distress

LONDON, Nov. 8. (AP)—A Lloyds despatch from Oporto, Portugal, says the Italian steamer Carmel Opolizzi is sending out constant S. O. S. messages calling for immediate assistance as she is in danger of sinking. The steamer, bound from Palermo for Rotterdam, tonight was 15 miles north of Leixoes, very near land.

Arabs Hanged at Damascus

DAMASCUS, Syria, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Three Arabs were hanged publicly in Merjt square at dawn. They were members of a band which attacked a Bagdad convoy last summer, killing a French captain and wounding others. The bodies were left suspended for six hours, a large poster affixed to each body describing the crime. Great crowds gathered to view the hangings.

PRINCE PAUL OF GREECE FAILED TO REACH WEBSTER

WEBSTER, Mass., Nov. 8—Prince Paul of Greece, scheduled to be the guest of honor at the dedication of a Greek orthodox church here today failed to appear up to a late hour tonight and the 4,000 Greeks gathered here for the occasion feared for his safety.

Peter Gianoros, Greek publisher and a member of the prince's party, arrived here at 5 o'clock and was almost overcome when he learned that Prince Paul had failed to arrive. He said he left New York in an automobile right behind the prince, who was accompanied by Gianoros' son, Peter. Reports that the prince was in an automobile accident in Hartford were received here but could not be verified.

Had Motor Trouble

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 8—Paul Christian, crown prince of Greece, returned to the home of William B. Leeds and his wife, the former Princess Xenia at Oyster Bay tonight after having stopped here for a few hours. He left Oyster Bay at 2 o'clock this morning, driving his own car, and bound for Webster, Massachusetts, where he was to attend the dedication of a new Greek orthodox church but punctures and motor trouble so delayed him that he abandoned the trip to Webster and returned to Oyster Bay after resting here.

FIVE WOMEN WERE FOUND DEAD FROM POISONING

HIBBING, Minn., Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Five women, hotel employes here, were found dead today, either from poisoning or asphyxiation.

A gas jet open in the kitchen of the home in which they were discovered, may have caused the deaths, although a coroner's inquest has been called to determine if wine, in small glasses before each, contained poison.

The dead:

Mrs. Ella Kuusisto, 35, owner of the cottage.

Mrs. Ida Hardy, 35, her tenant.

Mary Herzzing, 25.

Mrs. Mary Ernatinger, 35.

Katherine Green, 25.

The bodies were discovered by Mrs. Kuusisto's nine year old daughter, who summoned neighbors when she was unable to enter. The door was broken down.

The inquest will be held tomorrow.

Mrs. Ernatinger's body was lying in the bathroom doorway with her head in a basin. Resting upon her body was that of Mrs. Hardy. Near the gas stove was the body of Miss Herzzing. While Miss Green was near the center of the kitchen floor. They had evidently been preparing a meal with food materials and crockery lying on the table, when death came suddenly. Mrs. Kuusisto's body was near the living room davenport, which she evidently had tried to reach. Coroner Bullen, after surveying the scene, announced that it was unlikely that gas alone was responsible and declared that a thorough investigation would be made.

QUARREL OVER WOMAN RESULTED IN MURDER

WINCHESTER, Mass., Nov. 8.—(AP)—A quarrel over a woman resulted in death to Vito Saviuzza, Boston motion picture theatre pianist, whose battered body was found in a clump of bushes in Middlesex Falls, the police said today.

The authorities started their investigation along these lines today after Mrs Saviuzza, the victim's wife, identified the body. She told police that Saviuzza left their home in East Boston on Friday, after telling her that he no longer lover her and had found another sweetheart.

Mrs. Saviuzza, the authorities said, does not know the name of her rival but believes she lives about Winchester.

The police, while searching the murder scene, found a woman's mesh bag near an iron bar which is believed to be the slayer's weapon.

The bar is an automobile part which was probably taken from the machine found abandoned a half mile from the place where Saviuzza was clubbed to death. The license plates had been removed, the numbers scraped from the engine and fresh numbers chiselled in their place. The warmth of the radiator indicated to police that it had been parked on the spot about two hours before it was discovered.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS ASAKA ABOARD YACHT MAYFLOWER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—Prince and Princess Asaka of Japan were taken by President and Mrs. Coolidge to Mount Vernon aboard the yacht Mayflower today and there paid homage to the memory of Washington, the prince placing a wreath on his tomb.

The royal couple who are visiting the United States incognito as Count and Countess Asa, were guests of the president at a luncheon aboard the yacht which also was participated in by ambassador and Madame Matsudaira, Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg, and Charles MacVeagh, the new American ambassador to Japan, and Mrs. MacVeagh. The princes' party left tonight for Buffalo. He plans to visit Chicago and other American cities before sailing for home November 24 from San Francisco.

$10,000 FIRE DAMAGE IN SHOP IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Fire described by Deputy Chief Frank B. Coggshall as "peculiar, although he could find no direct evidence of incendiarism, shortly after 4:30 this morning destroyed the main shop of the William Olds Woodworking company, of 26 Olds place with a loss estimated at $10,000. The blaze was the second at the plant in twelve hours, one Saturday afternoon seriously damaging the shop. The first fire believed to have been started by boys who were seen playing with a lighted torch near the building, could not possibly have left sparks which started the second fire, according to fire department officials.

May Repeal or Reduce Automobile Taxes

Plan Will Be Taken Up This Week By the House Ways and Means Committee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—Repeal of the automobile taxes, involving an estimated loss of $150,000,000 revenue next year, which will be among the problems confronting the house ways and means committee when it takes up consideration of excise rates tomorrow, appears to have been made impossible by the slashes it has already approved in the income and other sections of the new revenue bill it is drafting. Only $100,000,000 of the prospective $300,000,000 treasury surplus available for tax reduction is left for the committee to apportion in revision of the existing schedules. If all requests before the committee for repeal of the various excise levies were granted, these changes alone would reduce the government's revenue by more than $300,000,000 annually.

Nevertheless, reduction of the automobile rates appears certain. Secretary Mellon proposed repeal of the taxes on automobile trucks, tires and accessories, but urged retention of the tax on automobile passenger cars. Committee members, however, seem to favor some modification, at least, of the latter tax, and automobile manufacturers have promised to pass on to the consumers any reduction granted.

The committee has before it requests for repeal of taxes which would yield approximately the following amounts of revenue next year:

Automobiles, tires, parts, etc, $150,000,000.

Alcoholic beverages $25,000,000.

Admissions and dues $33,000,000.

Cameras and lenses $700,000.

Photographic films and plates $750,000.

Firearms and shells $3,800,000.

Smokers' articles $40,000.

Coin-operated machines $00,000.

Yachts and motorboats $350,000.

Mah jong sets $3,000.

Art works $600,000.

Jewelry $8,000,000.

Bowling alleys, pool and billiard tax $2,200,000.

Stamp taxes $51,000,000.

Brokers $2,000,000.

In addition cigar manufacturers have asked for a reduction of the levy on their product. The entire tobacco tax yields $365,000,000 revenue annually.

The committee will consider all of these taxes together, apportioning among them the remaining $100,000,000 to be cut from the federal tax burden. Secretary Mellon proposed that some of these levies which yield comparatively small returns, including that of art works, be abolished. At the same time, he proposed that the tax on admissions and dues be retained. The admission tax was revised two years ago to relieve all admissions of fifty cents and less of the levy.

No definite schedule for revision of these rates has been proposed by members of the committee and Chairman Green announced today that they would be considered on the same nonpartisan basis as the revisions decided upon last week, including the important income tax schedule. He sees little hope however, that the remaining points to be taken up in framing the tax reduction bill can be disposed of as quickly as those already decided but he believes the progress made so far assures completion of the measure before Thanksgiving day. In ample time for presentation to the house when congress convenes December 7.

TRIBUTE PAID TO THE LATE DR. STEPHEN HENRY OLIN

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 8—Wesleyan university paid tribute to the late Dr. Stephen Henry Olin, acting president of the university in 1923 and 1924, when a memorial service was held in the board of trustees, presided and eulogies were delivered by Professor Andrew C. Armstrong for the faculty; A. L. Green of Holyoke, Mass., for the trustees, and President James L. McConaughy for the college.

Dr. Downey read resolutions adopted by the board of trustees in memory of Dr. Olin, and said that the new library to be built at Wesleyan would be a fitting tribute to the memory to Dr. Olin and to his father, Dr. Stephen Olin who was the second president of the university.

Professor Armstrong presented resolutions adopted by the faculty in memory of Dr. Olin and said that "it is the more fitting that these resolutions should be recorded in the minutes of the faculty because Dr. Olin was essentially a university man." He declared that Wesleyan had been fortunate in the loyalty of her sons.

"In President Olin, loyalty grew into affection," he continued. "By birth and inheritance, by the residence and training of his earlier years, through his long service as a member of the board of trustees, love for the college was bred or developed in him until it glowed with an intense and steady flame."

NO FURTHER INFLATION OF FRENCH CURRENCY

PARIS, Nov. 8.—(A. P.)—The finance committee of the chamber today definitely rejected any further inflation of the currency, but beyond that decision, made little progress at a long session this afternoon in the preparation of its report to be presented to the chamber of Premier Painleve's financial proposals. In consequence, the debate in the chamber set for tomorrow will probably be postponed in order to give the committee an opportunity to adjust with the premier conflicting points of view on the details of the establishment of a sinking fund.

M. Painleve went a long way toward clearing the atmosphere in the morning when he met the committee and explained in detail his plan for amortization. The indicated willingness to accept broad modifications to meet the objections of the socialists, if the elements of the plan itself were unchanged.

At the afternoon session divergencies again appeared among the members of the committee on attempting to work out the details, and it was decided, after the passage of a resolution declaring against further inflation and reiterating the necessity of a levy on all the forces of production and all forms of capital, to put off further discussions until tomorrow. At that session the premier will again be invited to make a statement of his views.

Plans For Defense Of Colonel Mitchell

His Counsel Has Descided to Fight Back at His Accuser —Nearly a Hundred Witnesses.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Colonel William Mitchell and his legal advisers have decided to resist prosecution before the court martial trying him by fighting back at his accusers and offering evidence to prove the truth of the statements he made in San Antonio, Texas. That the war and navy departments are incompetent, criminally negligent and almost treasonable in their conduct of the national defense.

Plans for Colonel Mitchell's defense, bearing all the earmarks of another onslaught upon the administration's aviation policies, tonight had been worked out along these lines and awaited only the resumption of the trial tomorrow to be launched. Nearly a hundred witnesses and as many or more government documents had been gathered, or were being collected, for use by the chief defense counsel, Representative Frank R. Reid of Illinois.

The prosecution is certain to oppose the defense scheme, as vigorously as possible, however, and a quick showdown between the opposing counsel on the question of admissibility of evidence is likely. Colonel Sherman Moreland, trial judge advocate, has warned Mr. Reid that evidence tending to extend the trial to air service controversies will be opposed by the prosecution unless it is offered in mitigation of sentence. Mr. Reid, on the other hand, has decided that no plea in mitigation will be entered but every effort will be made to show that what Colonel Mitchell has said about the state of the national defense is true and he should not be convicted on charges of conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline for telling the truth.

The court itself will have to decide what evidence it will hear and on its decision hinges as all-important victory or a defeat for Colonel Mitchell. There is no middle ground for the court to take in dealing with the admission of evidence, unless it decides to hear something of the extenuating circumstances that influenced the air officer to denounce the war and navy departments. Such information usually is considered by a court martial only after it arrives at a decision of guilt and is determining how severe to make its sentence.

In any event, the trial is destined to be bitterly fought out on every related issue and, for that reason, will be much longer than was expected when it began almost two weeks ago. The voluminous records will have to be read in court before it can decide what part, if any, will be admitted as evidence. And the numerous witnesses the defense has called will have to be treated in much the same manner.

Another question for the court to decide is that of financing the trial. The bringing to Washington of witnesses from all parts of the country, including transportation from and to their homes as well as their per diem expenses while here, it has been estimated, will cost the government about $75,000. Other items, such as the cost of the stenographic report of the trial, also have to be considered.

AMERICAN AVIATORS END MOROCCAN CAMPAIGN

QUEZZAN, French Morocco, Nov 8—(AP)—Their work in Morocco completed for the time being at least, the American volunteer aviators serving as the Sheriffian squadron will be disbanded tomorrow. Most of them will return direct to France. During their two months on the Ouzzan front they won the highest praise from the French commanders, and one of the last acts of Marshal Petain before he returned to France was to cite them in a laudatory order issued to the Moroccan expeditionary forces.

In the period of its service the squadron carried out 470 war missions, dropped 48 tons of bombs and totalled 633 hours of flight.

With reference to their work the Americans declared that the French were waging in Morocco the most humane colonial war in history; they had never been ordered to bomb an open town, but always directed their attack on fortified positions, where concentrations of Riffians were signalled by reconnaissance airplanes.

FOURTH NATIONAL RADIO CONFERENCE OPENS TODAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—(AP)—Another attempt on a nation wide scale to grapple with the problems of radio communication will get under way here tomorrow when Secretary Hoover calls to order the fourth national radio conference. More than 400 delegates will be on hand, representing every phase of interest in the field, including official spokesmen for the Canadian, Mexican and Cuban governments.

The primary difficulty which the conference will take up arises from over-crowding of the ether by the increase in broadcasting stations. The possible need for limitation of the number of stations, and the demand for a method of selecting stations for operation which serve the listening public most satisfactorily will be topics for consideration.

Mr. Hoover is expected to suggest organization of regional committees to assist the commerce department in dealing with licensing, while the possibility of federal legislation to aid in solving the problems also will be canvassed. The conference is likely to last for several days.

INDIAN TO BE TRIED FOR BURYING HIS BABY ALIVE

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 8—The love of a Ute Indian for his bride, which caused him to bury his seventeen day old baby alive in the grave of its mother, believing it would bring her back to life, will bring Platt Nase, Ute, to face with the white man's law here tomorrow on a federal court trial for murder.

It will be the second instance in recent weeks wherein the government will try an Indian for murder. Recently George Dixon Sujynamie, a Walapai was executed in Arizona for a slaying.

Nase, who has been held in jail here since last February, will invoke the law of the medicine man for his defense. He contends that he buried the child on the advice of his father in law, Mormoh Joe, medicine man of the Utes, who is also held as an accessory.

BLAMES PRESIDENT OF U. S. FOR LAX "DRY" ENFORCEMENT

Statement Made By Ernest H. Cherrington, Secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism—Advises the Public to Hold to Responsibility the Directly Responsible Officials of the Government—Intemperate Address Made at Meeting of the Anti-Saloon League Convention in Chicago—Gov. Pinchot Places Blame on Commissioner Haynes.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(A. P.)—Prohibition enforcement is a "substantial success," but not yet "a complete success," said Ernest H. Cherrington, secretary of the World League Against Alcohol, at a mass meeting of the Anti-Saloon League convention today.

"Federal enforcement," he continued, "is the responsibility of just one man, the president of the United States, as he is the only person (aside from the vice president) in the entire executive and judicial department of the federal government, who is directly elected by the people and therefore responsible to the people.

"The president of the United States is probably the most powerful official in the world," Mr. Cherrington said, the world," Mr. Cherrington said. "Does anyone really believe that if the president were to proceed to bring his full power to bear, that enforcement of the prohibition law could not be transformed in 48 hours?

"When the temperance people of the United States come to the full realization of these facts, and when they arrive at the place where they are determined to hold to responsibility, the directly responsible officials of the government, the eighteenth amendment and the federal law will be adequately enforced.

"There are vast numbers of our people who do not agree with us and who are sincere in their opposition to prohibition. We of the prohibition majority can discharge our obligation to that minority only by seeing that they be given the opportunity to know the truth. If this obligation is discharged, the prohibition majority will be better equipped to apply the same educational methods abroad where as yet liquor advocates constitute the majority.

"India and Africa are rapidly falling a prey to western liquor traffic. American breweries and distilleries are gaining a foothold in the coast cities of China and Malaysia. The influence of the total abstinence religion of the people is waning.

"Let the western liquor traffic once become thoroughly entrenched in the Mongolian nations of the east and a race conflict will be precipitated that will inevitably lead to a universal war that will shake the foundations of this old world.

"Add to this the possibilities of the recently established vodka monopoly by the government of Soviet Russia, and the breaking down of the policy of self-determination in such countries as Iceland, Norway, Finland, Sweden and Austria. The same international liquor interests have already struck a terrific blow at prohibition in Canada.

"The strategic opportunity which America has for leadership in this world-wide crusade grows less possible with every passing hour.

PINCHOT PUTS BLAME ON COMMISSIONER HAYNES

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(A. P.)—Leakage of bootleg alcohol in Philadelphia through granting of permits to law breakers by the commissioner of internal revenue has created Pennsylvania's most perplexing problem, Governor Pinchot said tonight at the Anti-Saloon League convention.

Many cases of permits granted to bootleggers over protest of Pennsylvania's officials were cited by the governor, and blamed upon Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and Commissioner Blair of the internal revenue department. In summing up, he said that 53 of the 81 alcohol permittees in Philadelphia were known lawbreakers but only 15 of the 53 have been put out of business.

"The present era of disrespect for the law, the declared, "can be laid right at the door of the conspicuous political leaders in Washington who set the example. The eighteenth amendment was betrayed in the house of its friends. They sowed the wind and the nation is reaping the whirlwind.

"There is a defeatist movement, like that in France which so nearly overthrew the allies in the world war, under full headway in the United States.

"I warn you that before the winter is over you will hear loud claim that since the strongest possible effort is being made to enforce the law, and since the alleged effort has failed, the time has come for law and order to yield to the criminal if that proposition is not treason, I have no name to call it."

FOUTEEN VESSELS NOW ALONG RUM ROW

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Fourteen fitful galleons of the modern armada are now hovering along Rum Row, the New York World will say tomorrow, with cargoes of liquor for the holiday trade.

Skippers of incoming vessels have told of renewed activities off Long Island and New Jersey coasts where last summer the coast guard reported the region had been cleared of its floating warehouses.

Continually on the move, maintaining safe distances from the coast guard boats, luring them into exhausting their fuel that the rum runners from shore can reach the beleaguered fleet while the patrol boats refuel, the new recruits to the nation's wet fringe are said to be confident of a brisk trade over the holidays.

Among the new arrivals sighted in the suspected lineup are the schooners America, Almud, Osher, Albga, Waita, Azamy, Bland and Flora K.

Four new liquor ships have been reported in the coastal vicinity of Boston. Others have been sighted hovering off the southern coast.

The coast guard has taken up the Christmas challenge. A new 100 foot patrol boat, the first of a dozen, will arrive here Monday or Tuesday from Bay City, Mich., the others are expected to be brought through the Erie canal before ice forms.

VOLSTEAD ACT HAS NOT CHANGED HIS APPETITE

DETROIT, Nov. 8—With a fling at prohibition and genially pessimistic comments on life in general, Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, addressed 1,500 negroes at a negro branch Y. M. C. A. today. Darrow is in the city as council for Ossian H. Sweet, his wife and nine other negroes charged with murder with the shooting to death of Leon Breiner when police say, volleys of shots were fired from the Sweet residence located in a white neighborhood.

Regarding the eighteenth amendment Darrow said: "I used to drink before prohibition—moderately. I still drink. The Volstead act hasn't mourned to have the slightest effect on my appetite."

FIRST HOME IN MEMORY OF FANNIE CROSBY, DEDICATED

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The first home in memory of Fannie Crosby in this city was formally dedicated this afternoon. More than 100 were present at the services conducted by Rev. E. J. Craft and Rev. William H. McDermott. The home has twenty eight rooms, twenty of which are for use as private rooms while the others are given over as living rooms. It has been named the Fannie Crosby home for the aged.

Aged couples who are unable to care for themselves are received in the home, as well as aged women. At the present time there are six aged women and one couple there. The money used to found the home was raised through the efforts of several people interested in Fannie Crosby's wish that a home be founded in her name, while a society recently formed has done a great deal of the campaigning. W. Parker Seeley, commander of the American Legion, heads the board of directors of the institution.

NO ORDINARY MAIL DELIVERIES CHRISTMAS DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—An advance Christmas present for mail carriers and most other postal employes came from Postmaster General New today in the form of an announcement that no deliveries of ordinary mail would be made Christmas day.

From midnight December 24 to midnight December 25, all postal operations will be suspended except the maintenance of special delivery and the "relaying" of mails so that they will be ready when normal delivery is resumed.

"It is realized that this experiment is a great undertaking," said Mr. New "but it is believed it is in line with the sentiments of the public, if this can be done without too great loss of service.

"It is confidently hoped that it will succeed and that our larger force of workers in the field may for the first time have the benefit of a real holiday.

ARRESTS CONTINUED BY FASCIST AUTHORITIES

ROME, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The fascist authorities continue searching houses and making arrests throughout Italy in a cleanup campaign after the discovery of the plot alleged to have been engineered by General Capello, former Deputy Zaniboni and others, to assassinate Mussolini. Whatever evidence they have found to support the theory that this was incidental to a conspiracy of a wider scope, they have thus far not seen fit to divulge it to the public.

In the meantime the fascist press is publishing additional unofficial details designed to widen the circle of conspirators in the abortive plan to destroy the fascist leader. Among the latest arrests is Luigi Pauluzzi, proprietress of a small hostelry in the outskirts of Udine, who is charged with having received a rifle from an unknown purchaser, and with having turned it over later to Zaniboni.

LIGHTER C. Z. CRANDALL GROUNDED ON SAND BAR

MILFORD, Nov. 8. (AP) — The lighter C. Z. Crandall, towing a barge, was grounded on a sand bar about 100 feet off Silver beach some time last night, evidently losing its course through a misjudgment of lights in Milford harbor.

Searching parties failed to locate any persons aboard either of the craft, although one of the residents on the beach claims he saw three men leave the lighter in a row boat about 7 o'clock. Even the ship's cat was taken off. The three men, the resident claims, were half way to shore when they saw the cat on deck. They rowed back and, after taking the cat off, rowed toward Milford harbor.

Both boats are totally submerged when the tide rises and it is expected that no little trouble will be experienced in towing them off the bar. Meanwhile an investigation of the cargo of the boats will be made and the proper authorities notified.

WOULD SEND MUSSOLINI A BULLET-PROOF VEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Aroused by the recent plot against the life of Premier Mussolini of Italy, two Italian admirers of the fascist leader living in New York have offered to send him a bullet-proof vest.

Anthony D'Amico and Rafaelle Landriani, businessmen, are the men anxious to see that Mussolini is adequately protected. A cable message asking him to accept the gift has been disclosed with a request that his secretary send back waist and chest measurements and specify the kind and color of cloth desired.

WILLIMANTIC

A veil of mystery continues to shroud the death of Guiseppe Distefano almost on the eve of his wedding day. Since the finding of the body, Friday morning, in the rear of the Joseph Lariviere home, on Meadow street, with a bullet wound in the throat where a shot had entered and penetrated to the brain, the police have continued an intensive investigation to clarify the case. The element of murder or inducement by mental or physical force to cause the prospective young bridegroom to take his life could not entirely be shaken off. The gun found beside the body was a .22 short calibre automatic rifle. In the magazine were two bullets. Three empty shells were found on the ground. Medical Examiner Louis L. Mason states that there was one hole under the chin. Death had been almost instantaneous. In his opinion the shot could not have been fired by another, owing to the nature of the wound. His finding is "probably self-destruction by bullet wound," which has been turned over to Coroner Arthur G. Bill. The latter will hold an inquest during the early part of the coming week.

Some twenty persons, including eight members of the Guarniere family have been examined, but they could throw no light on the case. Miss Roma Guarniere, whom the dead man was to have married at St. Joseph's, Saturday morning, and for whom he had provided a completely furnished apartment, is suffering severely from mental distraction. She said that Distefano had been the only admirer she had ever had. She noted nothing wrong when he was last seen, one week ago last Friday night when she was tendered a shower. The theory that the man was shot and his body brought to the Lariviere back yard has been well studied. In its favor is the fact that it appears impossible that the man fired three rifle shots in that thickly populated section of the city without their being heard. It also appeared that the shots were fired somewhere about 10 o'clock Tuesday evening, at least the man had been dead about nine hours when found Friday morning. On the other hand the body lay in a pool of blood and it appears improbable that if there had been foul play his body would have been taken to a place considered in the heart of the city.

Taking the matter as suicide, the cause for the act and the disappearance for one week which preceded it, holds considerable of interest. It is understood that the man's fiance visited two local spiritualists or mediums after her lover's disappearance. Both told her that he was being held in a cellar and tortured. This fact and rather hazy clues has led some to the belief in the possibility that someone objected to his marriage and by force or sician was called. At 9 o'clock in the him to take his fatal step.

Distefano's body was removed Saturday to his home of his brother, Sebastina Distefano of 26 Thames street, Norwich from where the funeral will be held this Monday.

James Edward Connell, 38, of New Haven, died at nine o'clock Saturday morning at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Johanna King of 64 Valley street, this city, of uramic convulsions. Connell had come here to spend the week-end with his brothers and sisters, who make their home with their aunt. Friday afternoon shortly before 5 o'clock he was taken with convulsions. A physmorning another convulsion caused his death. Medical Examiner Dr. Louis L. Mason was summoned and after hearing a report of the man's short illness pronounced death due to uramic convulsions. Connell was born in Ireland and came to this city with his parents when he was about seven years of age. He received his education at St. Joseph's Parochial school and after a few years at various lines of work became employed by the railroad. For several years past he was brakeman at the New Haven terminal of the New Haven railroad. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and Veteran Railway Employes' association. Surviving him are two sisters, the Misses Anna and Bridget Connell, two brothers, Patrick and Florence Connell, and their aunt, Mrs. Johanna King, all of this city.

Mrs Clara Gaudette, 35, died at St. Joseph's hospital early Saturday morning. She was born in Lindonville, Vt., April 2, 1890, daughter of David and Adeline (McClure) Gaudette. She is survived by two brothers, Moise and Arthur Gaudette and one daughter, Miss Adeline Gaudette, all of this city.

The funeral services for George N. Pierce were held Saturday morning, from the late home, 26 Monticello street with a requiem high mass at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, Rev. J. J. Papillon, the pastor, was the celebrant. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives. Mrs. J. F. Gaudreau was at the organ, and Mr. Gaudreau led in special singing by the choir and also rendered solos. Burial was in the St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Father Papillon conducted the committal service. The bearers were Michael Denault, Fortune Jolly, Wilfred Gagnon, Edward Goland, Azarie Dertrand and Louis Cote. The Hurseau-Boose Corp., had charge of the arrangements.

Raymond Barry of Mansfield Center reported to the police Sunday morning that about 9:30 o'clock he had backed his truck into a hydrant on Quercus avenue and caused a crack in the base. He arranged for a settlement of the damages.

Joseph and Shaheen Haddad have brought replevin action against Eddie John, proprietor of a pool room on Jackson street. They assert that a quartered oak double cue rack and mirror was secured by the defendant from them on a conditional bill of sale, on which he failed to make the required payments. Friday evening Constable William D. Kelley served an attachment on the rack and mirror removing it from the place of business.

Miss Mildred Johnson was elected president, at a meeting of the class conducted by Mrs. Clarence Barrows, held at the Methodist church parlors recently. Mrs. Albert Spellman and Mrs. Barrows served an excellent supper. Miss Elizabeth Muirhead was elected, vice-president, Miss E. Dawson, secretary and Miss Mary Phillips, treasurer. The Misses Ruth Easterbrooks and Alice Hanson were named a visiting committee.

Citizens who met at the Y. M. C. A. recently voted to observe Armistice day in Willimantic in a manner suitable to the spirit and purpose to the day. Business places and a number of the local industrial plants will be closed for the day and a service will be conducted on Lincoln square as a public demonstration of respect to those who sacrificed their lives that liberty might endure.

The rentals of the Hotel Hooker property were attached Friday afternoon by Constable Joseph Peck, to the amount of $200, on behalf of Paul Lorenzo, day clerk at the hotel, against Frank J. Watson, former proprietor, who left the city some time ago. The case will be heard at the December term of the Windham county superior court. Damages of $250 are claimed. The case is the outgrowth of an alleged loan.

The nomination of officers took place at the last regular meeting of Mary Todd Lincoln Tent No. 15, D. of V., held with President Lucy Lynch in charge. The annual inspection will be held Nov. 20th. An invitation to attend a supper and inspection of Clara Barton Tent No. 7 D. of V. of Norwich on Dec. 1st was read and accepted. Mrs. Arthur W. Swert was awarded the mystery box.

The continued case of George Demling of Chaplin, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, was again continued for two weeks, when called in police court Saturday morning. The case is fast approaching a record for number of continuances having already been granted five continued dates.

A public meeting of all taxpayers will be held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms next Tuesday evening when a special talk on Willimantic's water supply system and its needs will be given by H. W. Taylor, a New York engineer.

At one of the social events of the Willimantic Country club, held recently with Mrs Louis H. Arnold as chairman the women members enjoyed cards and refreshments. Twenty-one tables of whist were in play. The prize winners were: for auction, Mrs. Harry Prentice of Norwich, first; Mrs. H. F. Taylor second; whist, Mrs. John W. Alvord, first and Mrs. Thomas F. Mulhall second; Five Hundred, Mrs. Homer Wood, first and Mrs. H. Hawley Peck second.

GET SWIFT JUDGMENT IN HEBRON JUSTICE COURT

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 8.—Two arrests of local young men have been made, and a third is expected, as the result of a drunken attack on a truck owned and operated by Edwin C. Ackley of 91 South Park street, this city, when the trio tried to get at the driver near the Hebron town hall, where all of the parties had gone to attend a dance Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Ackley drove to the dance hall in a truck, which he uses on an express line between this city and Hartford.

They had just arrived when a local young man, John Shea, apparently crazed with drink invited Mr. Ackley to get out and fight. Mrs. Ackley detained her husband, and then two other young men, Joseph Cotter and Harry Gerard joined in the attack. Gerard was too intoxicated to do much damage. Shea put his fist through the windshield of the truck when he found that the cab doors were locked. Then Cotter put his head through the opening in an endeavor to reach Mr. Ackley. The latter struck Cotter on the jaw and sent him sprawling into the road. In the meantime Shea kicked out the lense in one headlight.

Mr. Ackley is a powerful and aggressive man and could have committed himself with credit in such a fracas but out of respect for his wife he drove away and notified the state police. Officer Harrison J. Hulburt of Stafford Springs answered. He was met at the scene by Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink, who had also been summoned, and the case was turned over to the latter. Gerard and Cotter were placed under arrest on the spot.

The Hebron execution of law is speedy and Sunday forenoon Gerard was fined $1 and costs, amounting to $26.15 for intoxication. Cotter pleaded guilty to intoxication, breach of the peace and using obscene language in the presence of a woman. He was fined $3 on each count, which plus the costs amounted to $27.85. A fourth count of destroying private property was nolled. A warrant has been issued for Shea's arrest.

RECEIVES APPOINTMENT AS REGULAR POSTMASTER

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 8—Frank M. Smith will become acting postmaster at the Willimantic postoffice on Nov 16, according to a notification he received by mail from the postoffice department, Washington, D. C., Saturday forenoon. He succeeds Walter R. King, who was appointed for the four year term to succeed the late John O'Rourke on April 12, 1924. At that time the contest for the position was keen. Upwards of 20 candidates were in the field. These were later boiled down to three eligibles, Walter R. King, Frank M. Smith and William S. Congdon. Postal inspectors recommended Mr. King and he was appointed.

Mr. Smith's appointment is regarded with general approval. He is a native of Poquonock, Hartford county, and was born March 31, 1872, the son of Benajah and Caroline (Hatheway) Smith. When he was six years of age his parents moved to this city He graduated from the old Natchaug grammar school and attended Natchaug high school. During vacation periods he was employed in the old Willimantic Linen company. In 1891 he entered the employ of the late Frank M. Wilson, as clerk in the latter's drug store. In 1900 he was appointed manager and in 1904, after the death of Mr. Wilson, Mr. Smith was reappointed manager and made treasurer. Later he was taken in partnership. The new postoffice head has been active in municipal affairs for many years past. He was alderman of the second ward in the years 1908-10 and a member of the general assembly in the session of 1921. As soon as his bond is filed next week he will assume his new duties. He has tendered his resignation as manager and treasurer of the Wilson Drug Company, recently. For the present Miss Florence Kenyon was at the piano. Luncheon was served.

"SUNNY" JOE ELLIS CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 8.—Joseph Ellis, engineer at the town building, observed his 63rd birthday Sunday "Joe" as he is called by the young and old of the city, made no splurge about his anniversary. He was on the job as usual. When asked if it was so that he was turning over a new year the jovial engineer was sweeping the lobby of police headquarters. He leaned against his brush and acknowledged the event by remarking, "Yes sir, I'm 68 today and never died yet." Thereupon Joe was complimented and in answer he raised his fine tenor voice in one of his favorite ditties.

Joe has been engineer for 15 years He worked during the winter seasons for three years and in 1913 received his appointment. And the popular engineer has a pet. It is the town clock which has tolled the passing of time for Willimantic over a period of many years. For many years previous to his appointment as engineer Joe Ellis was a landscape artist of no mean ability. Among his most prominent achievements in that field are the beautiful terraces at the town building and the postoffice.

ALBION C. RUSSELL HELD ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

DANIELSON, Nov. 8.—Albion C. Russell, formerly engaged in business here as head of an automobile agency, was lodged in Brooklyn jail Saturday afternoon, facing a charge of embezzlement of $1,800 and in default of bonds of $2,000.

Russell, who was missing from Danielson one morning late in the past summer and who has not been seen here since, was arrested in Harpon, Me., by County Investigator W. E. Jackson of Willimantic. In that northern Main town Russell is said to have been working on a farm.

Hare and Chase, Inc., a Philadelphia financing concern, are the complainants against Russell, who started to do business here last spring in a rather elaborately appointed automobile sales station fur Danielson. There was great activity about the place for a time after the formal opening, but thereafter things did not appear to go so well. Rumors that Russell's credit had become impaired were followed one morning by the announcement that he had suddenly disappeared.

Nothing generally was heard of Russell after he went away, though it was known in some circles that a constant search was being made for him. He was finally located by the L. A. W. Acceptance corporation of Worcester, anothing financing concern interested in knowing his whereabouts, the word was passed on to Sheriff Charles E. Ayer and thence to Mr. Jackson, who brought him in Saturday. A Providence concern dealing in used cars is also interested in the return to Connecticut of Mr. Russell.

The charge against Russell is one that will claim the attention of the superior court. He has demurred to the embezzlement charge. In default of bonds, which he was making an effort to procure, Russell was held at the jail at the week end. It is possible that his case will be presented in court during the present fall season.

Don't lock the garage door after the car is stolen. Maybe the thief will repent and bring it back.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Sunday afternoon at the Westfield Congregational church funeral services for Mrs. Kate B Sibley, widow of Sheriff Preston B. Sibley, were conducted by Rev. Roger C. Stimson of the Danielson Methdist Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. John S. Bridgeford, of Providence, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church here 32 years ago and a close personal friend of Frederick S. Sibley of Providence. There were many friends at the service. Miss Amelia Hutchins was organist. There was no singing. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Attorney Harry E. Back, Abner S. Young, Charles A. Tillinghast, Ray W. Pellett, Judge Oscar F. Atwood of Brooklyn and Clark G. Lawton of Brooklyn. There were many beautiful floral pieces. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

There's a bull market on potatoes. If you would believe some of the boys who raised them and have them to sell, spuds are going to be selling at about 90 cents a dozen, or something like that, before the new potatoes come along from the south some time next spring. So be it. Last year potato growers in territory hereabouts took what is known as an awful dicking. Their crop didn't bring enough to pay them for the seed in numbers of cases. They are entitled to a clean-up year and deserving of it. Potatoes may be high but what of it? The farmers are entitled to a few breaks in luck, and they appear to be sitting pretty this year insofar as the potato crop is concerned.

While final figures were not available Sunday, it would appear from the returns received from civic federation's tag day effort on Saturday that the receipts this year will be very close to, if not larger, than the $565 obtained in the tag day effort of 1924.

Mrs. Susan Armington, treasurer of the federation, said Sunday afternoon that Danielson contributed $457 to the fund. Goodyear reported $55. This makes an early total of $512. On Tuesday of this week one of the mills in Danielson will make its lagging effort in behalf of the fund. Another mill in another community of Killingly also is to be heard from. If the two mills referred to do as well this year as they did last year, it appears likely that the $565 tag day total of 1924 will be topped.

The giving to this fund in Danielson Saturday was very general. No other tag day holds the appeal to the general public. About everyone in sight was tagged. These tags represented gifts that may have varied from a penny upward, but all were welcome and happily received. The penny given by a little tot out of a slender store of coins was representative of the same spirit as a $5 bill from one of a great degree of opulence—and all the money goes for the same good cause.

In the town court Saturday morning Edward Spicer of Plainfield was fined $50 and costs of $11.39, of the fine $40 being remitted, on a charge that he had failed to stop his automobile at Dayville after, as alleged the machine had struck Sarah Holdsworth, who was not seriously injured.

There were extenuating circumstances in the case, Spicer adhearing to his contention that he did not know the car hit the woman, but he pleaded guilty, leaving no option for the court other than to impose the fine. The net cost to Spicer was $21.39—$10 of the fine and $11.39 costs.

State officials of the Spanish War Veterans organization came here at the week end for the inspection of William H. Hamilton post, with quarters in the state armory. Department Inspector Connors of Rockville and Past State Commander Laubscher of Rockville were among the visitors, as was District Inspector Lynch of Thompsonville. Burdette post of Hartford and Tyler post of Willimantic were represented among the visitors. A lunch was served and there was a cheerful hour or two of social intercourse and discussion of the good old days of '98.

A broken steering gear caused the accident in which a large closed car driven by A. J. Arrigan went off the highway and through a fence and down an embankment at the foot of Dark Lantern hill Friday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Arrigan and their infant daughter were returning from Providence when the accident occurred. Under all the circumstances, it is considered a very fortunate thing that no one in the car was seriously injured.

It is understood that the past week's inspection of the state police barracks on North Main street by representatives of the state police commission and Superintendent Robert T. Hurley developed the fact that the Danielson barracks meets all the requirements of the state police department as to care of property, keeping of records and all other incidentals with which the inspection was concerned. The inspections are carried out in minute detail, being as rigid as a military inspection and fully as exacting as to requirements.

It is probable that more sections of the new concrete highway between Morin avenue, at the northerly line of the borough, and Elmville will be opened up during the coming week. This road building operation is now well advanced and it is hoped, weather permitting, to make further excellent progress during the present week.

The lowest ebb on any Sunday last spring was noted by observers, particularly officers, on Sunday. This appears to be the between-hay-and-grass season, if such a season can occur on the verge of winter. Inclement weather, too, was held to have had something to do with cutting down the travel over the two trunk line highways through Danielson.

A few recalled the fact, but of the multitude that cavorted and performed and yelped and burned red fire and disported themselves in glee not many recalled that last Saturday night was the seventh anniversary of the "fake" armistice of Nov. 7, 1918. The report that the armistice had been signed proved to be a canard, but that took not one jot of joy away from the remarkable celebration that broke loose here on that memorial Saturday night—to be more accurate, in the early hours of Sunday morning—and continued until after daybreak. It was never equalled before and one may predict that it will be many a long year before anyone here again sees the likes of it. If it may be put down here in just that way. When the real armistice celebration came on the following Nov. 11 there was a holiday, all will recall, but for spontaneity and general abandon in the pure frenzy of happiness and glory, that Saturday night and Sunday morning of seven years ago will ever live in the memories of those who participated in it or witnessed it. It was some party!

Recently the death of Michael Ratchford, 44, resident here during his youthful years, occurred. He had been living in Boston for nearly 20 years and had been successful. His death came unexpectedly. Bernard Ratchford of this town is a brother of the deceased.

This is the last week for those who would obtain for 1926 the automobile registration their cars have carried during the present year. The time limit for reservations is set this year at Nov. 15, which means, in effect next Saturday.

A large class being prepared at St. James' church for confirmation will during the present week receive special religious instructions necessary prior to the administration of the sacrament.

Next Saturday is the date fixed for the Thirteen club hunt to be led by King George Jacques at East Killingly. It will be noted that next Saturday is just the week end that has a 13 date in it.

A demand exists here for tickets for the Brown-Harvard football game to be played at Providence about two weeks hence. Harvard has taken 11,000 tickets for this game, leaving only 14,000 for Brown and its friends.

Mrs. P. B. Sibley, whose funeral took place Sunday, was for years one of the most interested, efficient and constant W. C. T. U. workers in this country. She had been interested in the cause for many years.

Arthur A. Serrett of Central Falls was a visitor with friends here over Sunday.

On Sunday number of mill operatives were expressing the hope that plants in town might close at noon Wednesday, Armistice day, that the workers might have a half holiday and attend demonstrations commemorating the end of hostilities on the battle fields of Europe back in 1918.

PUTNAM

The bridge over the Quinebaug, which is to be dedicated with elaborate ceremonies on Wednesday, Armistice day, will be completed and the bronze memorial tablets will be in place. Because it was believed that it would not be near enough to completion on that date to permit marching men to cross, the parade was routed another way to cross the long bridge at Bridge street. Whether the line will be changed, now that it is known that the new bridge can be used, has not been decided.

In order to take care of any emergencies, as headquarters for deciding questions that may arise and to supply information, the bridge committee has secured the community room of the Putnam Savings bank for that day. Through the courtesy of Manager Henry S. Lyon a telephone has been installed. The number is 860.

At the final meeting of the general committee Friday evening, reports from sub-committees were received and a checkup made of the finished and unfinished work.

John H. Moss, chief marshal, said that the line of march had been altered so as to bring the procession past the reviewing stand on School street, at the end. Instead of the beginning of the parade. Forming on Union square the line will be down Main street to Front, to South Main, to Grove, to Ring, countermarch on Grove, to South Main, to Front, to Main, to Church to Woodstock avenue, to Marshall to Providence, to School and back to the square.

The speakers' stand will be at Bugbee's corner, the center of the town, and a block from the new bridge. At the conclusion of the reading of the names of the twelve men who died in the service, a bugle signal will be sounded and the tablets will be unveiled by children and relatives of the deceased, if possible.

The twelve men who died in the service are: Albert J. Breault, Fred V. Carpenter, Adelard Dumas, Henri P. Favreault, Harry C. Hopkins, Arthur W. Kempf, Norman J. Kennedy, Robert B. Marsh, Anselm Mayotte, Joseph H. Montie, Victor P. Kelland, Damase Veilleux.

The program as definitely decided on, will be as follows: Parade of military and civil organizations at 1.45 o'clock, John Hill Moss, marshal; selection, 192nd regiment band; address of welcome, T. H. deCoudres; invocation, Rev. C. H. Bedard; address, John A. Macdonald, state highway commissioner; address, Edward White state commander American Legion; band selection, 192nd regiment band; address, Governor John H. Trumbull; reading roll of men who died in the service; unveiling of tablets; placing of wreaths on tablets; taps; address Captain John O'Brien; benediction, Rev. N. B. Burton; Star Spangled Banner, 192d Regiment band.

George W. Baker reported that there are 18 Civil War veterans in Putnam and Pomfret, but that only 14 were in a condition of health that would permit them to attend the exercises; that his committee was arranging to transport them to be reviewing sand and when the parade has passed to take them to places near the speakers' stand.

The marshal and his aides number ten in all, and Mr. Moss said that ten horses had been secured. Because of the "passing" of that animal there was some wonderment as to where they had been found but that was satisfied when he explained that they were to be loaned for the occasion by the Howe-Marot school, a number of the girl students as equestriennes, and the horses will be finer looking than are usually seen in a public procession.

The Putnam Legion Post is named after Rev. Fr. Anselm Mayotte, who was a curate at St. Mary's when war was declared. He enlisted and was sent across as a regimental chaplain, nd died there from injuries received from a fall from a horse. Miss Katherine Byrne of the invitation committee said that Fr. Mayotte's father was living in Webster, Mass., and that the committee hoped to have him here on that day.

There will be two airplanes, possibly three, that will be sent over from the Hartford station. They will land on the Larned farm, on the road to Pomfret.

John A. Macdonald, State highway commissioner was here Saturday to look over the bridge work. He is a son of Postmaster Archie Macdonald, a former Putnam resident, and deeply interested in his home town. He said that he believed that there would be an immense crowd here on Wednesday, and that from what he had heard personally, and, from what had come to him from various sources, he thought the affair would be very successful, and of incalculable value to the city. "Putnam has passed through enough adversities in the past year and a half," he said, "to stifle the public spirit and to daunt the courage of the citizens of the average town. Instead of becoming pessimistic and depressed your leading men and women have arranged a public demonstration for next Wednesday that would be worthy of a city ten times its size. It has served to place Putnam on the 'front page' in a different way from what it has appeared in the past, and the people of the state have noticed and appreciated it."

Police Captain William J. Jarvis reports that he will have twenty men in uniform for Armistice day. Twelve will march and eight will be assigned to traffic duty. Superintendent Robert T. Hurley of the state police department has also placed at the captain's disposal ten of the state police.

Fred Bernlow of Thompson has entered Northeastern University at Boston.

The stores of Putnam will close at 11 o'clock on Wednesday, Armistice day. The half holiday will be observed in dedicating the new memorial bridge. The same half holiday will be observed to a greater or less degree in all of the adjoining towns.

Hon. Frank B. Weeks of Middletown, former governor of Connecticut and Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam have been appointed by President Coolidge as the members from Connecticut of the National Advisory Commission to the Sesqui-Centennial Exhibition association in Philadelphia in 1926.

Mrs. Helen Willey of Oak Hill spent the week end at The House in the Pines, Norton, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Morin of Worcester spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Jolly on Woodstock avenue.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Day Kimball hospital it was announced that the first dividend check, $1,000 had been received from the estate of the late Irving Wood of Boston, who created a trust fund in his will to be known as the Mary M. Wood memorial fund, naming the Day Kimball hospital of Putnam and two other hospitals beneficiaries from the trust.

The check covers a period of four months, but no letter of explanation accompanied the letter sent by the trustee, the United States Trust company of Boston, so that its exact purport is unknown.

After setting aside sufficient funds to pay certain annuities, the three hospitals are to receive the income from the remainder during the lives of the annuitants and at the death of the last annuitant will share equally in the whole estate which is estimated at several thousand dollars.

The hospital is much in need of funds at the present time. The number of patients at the hospital is about the average number but most of the patients for a number of weeks past have been ward patients instead of occupants of private rooms. This is not a paying situation for the hospital.

Miss Elizabeth Byrne, who has been the organist at St. Mary's church for the past twenty-five years, has resigned. Miss Byrne was forced to give up the teaching of music some time ago because of the ill health of her mother. However, she continued with her church work, but even this took too much of her time away from home, so to the regret of the pastors and the members of the church, she tendered her resignation.

Mrs. Mary Byrne is critically ill at her home on Seward street, so ill that it is feared she cannot recover. Miss Isabelle Byrne, superintendent of Sloan hospital, New York city, is helping care for her and directing the care of her mother. John B. Byrne, state bank commissioner, is her son. All of her children have attained distinction! Miss Isabelle Byrne is head of one of the great hospitals of New York; Miss Katherine Byrne is the manager of the Byrne company store, a department store that is noted throughout this section; she is also vice chairman of the republican state central committee. Daniel J. Byrne has been for nearly ten years treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank, the executive officer of that institution; Miss Elisabeth Byrne is a talented musician; she has been organist at St. Mary's church for many years but has lately resigned that position as well as given up her work as a music teacher in order to help care for her mother.

At the democratic primary Friday night to nominate an alderman from the third ward Alfred E. Pigeon was re-nominated by a vote of 92 to 46 for A. D. Beaudoin. Edmund Dubois was renominated democratic alderman from the second ward without any opposition.

HALF HOLIDAY FOR SCHOOLS ARMISTICE DAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

KILLINGLY, Nov. 8—School Superintendent William E. Parker made known Sunday evening that the town school committee of Killingly and Brooklyn have voted that next Wednesday, Armistice day, will be a half holiday and that the schools in both towns will close at noon. The intent is, Mrs. Parker says, to have an observance for Armistice day and to provide opportunity for all the pupils who wish to attend the celebration at Putnam.

It may be cowardly to kick a man when he is down, but it's sometimes necessary in order to get him up.

Turkish girls are not permitted to smoke before they are married, and even when they are married it is not customary for them to smoke in the presence of their elders. The new regime in Turkey is expected however, to rapidly break down these restrictions.

GLADI SYLVIA

EASTERN CONN. HOME OF WORLD'S CHAMPION COW

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 8.—William S. (Bill) Brown has gone and done it. He said for years that he would, and he has made good. Down at his Sheparad hill farm between Central Village and Wauregan he has a world's record two year old Holstein-Freisian cow. The world's record consists of turning out more milk—30,000 pounds of it—than was ever turned out before by any cow at such an early age.

Mr. Brown has headed and planned for this achievement for years. In accomplishing it, he sheds lustre on the dairying efforts of Windham county, not to mention eastern Connecticut, the remainder of the state and all New England.

This is the first announcement in print relative to this marvelous cow. What the cow has done will be of nation-wide interest and will claim the attention of dairyment from coast to coast. As a matter of fact, Mr. Brown is already deluged with requests for details about the cow, and has prepared to furnish the information to breeders in many states of the union and to publications dealing with dairy matters.

The following article, tells of the story of the wonder cow and tells it in an interesting way:

"For years, the breeders of this and other countries have been striving to remove the charge of inefficiency which applied only too well to the ordinary cow. They have been successful—but just how successful is realized by few people outside the ranks of the breeders themselves.

"The extent of their success is shown by the records made by the 'super-cows' which they have developed—cows whose milk production far exceeds that of the average cow with her 3,000 pounds of milk per year.

"The newest star in the new group of 'super-cows' is Gladi Sylvia, queen of the Holstein-Fresian breed. She has just broken the world's record by producing 30,960 pounds of milk, containing 925 pounds of butter fat, in her two year old form—the only cow in the world that has ever made such a record at her age.

"Such champions, of course, are not the result of mere chance but are developed by careful selection and breeding. Gladi Sylvia comes of a long line of champions—of cows which have produced over 22 pounds of butter fat and over 600 pounds of milk in seven day periods, over 30,000 pounds of milk, 1,200 pounds of butter, in 365 days.

"This is how the cow is being transformed from an inefficient food producing machine into a marvel of efficiency which would delight even a Henry Ford. By choosing the best of each generation, the desired characteristics are transmitted more and more strongly.

"On the W. S. Brown farm at Central Village, Connecticut, Gladi Sylvia is now preparing to make even more astonishing records. And her productiveness will undoubtedly be transmitted through her son, a young bull whose sire was Hollywood Glen Ales Segis. This young bull has undoubtedly more world championship records in his pedigree than any other youngster alive. As an example, his sire was Judge Segis whose dam was Glen Ales Queen De Kol, the only two-year-old who ever produced 42 pounds of butter in seven days.

WESTERLY

The town of Westerly will transact business for the coming year and perhaps two years with the numerous town officials named at the organization meeting held last Friday evening from 7.30 to 10 o'clock by the new town council members elected at the bi-ennial town meeting held last Tuesday.

First Councilman John D. Nichols was elected president, he being the only member of the old town council having held office as sixth councilman of the Westerly town council for the past four years. At Friday night's meeting the seven councilmen were sworn by Town Clerk Everett E. Whipple, who in turn was sworn to his duties as town clerk by President John Nichols.

There were assembled all the members elected in order, as follows: John D. Nichols, Rogers E. Trainer, Harry H. Coleman, Peter Nardone, Isaac G Smith, A. Clifford Holdsworth and Thomas F. Moore.

The various town officers were elected as follows:

Howard E. Thorp, reelected tax assessor for six years at last Tuesday's meeting, was the first officer elected last Tuesday to qualify, having appeared before Town Clerk Everett E. Whipple on last Thursday to be sworn in, so that a meeting of the tax assessors for the town of Westerly could be held with full membership.

Officials named were: Auditors Harold D. Livingstone and Richard J. Butler; town sergeant, George L. Madison; constables, Russell L. Slocum, James W. Burke; corders of wood, Albert B. Langworthy and Simon P. Nichols; surveyor of lumber, Albert H. Langworthy; packers of fish, James O. Babcock, Charles H. Tyndall and Stephen W. Collins; gaugers of casks, Albert H. Langworthy; auctioneers, Oliver P. Crandall, Russell L. Slocum, Elisha E. Carpenter; sealer of letters, George A. Champlin; measurer of grain, Albert H. Langworthy; surveyors of land Thomas McKenzie, George W. Woodward and Louis J. Rossi; fence viewers, Howard E. Thorp and Walter S. Price; weighers of coal, Mrs. Ruth Krebs, Francis Gent, Charles H. Nichols, J. Edwin Gardner and James Tolly; field drivers, William B. Briggs, Henry B. Morris and H. C. Langworthy; pound keepers, William B. Briggs, Henry C. Lanphear, William J. Gavitt and Selden M. Young; commissioner of wrecks, Stephen W. Collins; harbor masters, Thomas E. Brown and Dr. E. R. Lewis; tree wardens, Everett Burns; committee to care for the burial of deceased soldiers, John F. Datson; sealer of weights and measures, (action deferred).

Police constables without power to serve civil process, (action deferred); police constables without pay and without power to serve civil process, (action deferred); chief of police, (action deferred); sergeant of police, (action deferred); inspector of motor vehicles, (action deferred); judge of probate, Edward M. Sorlie; town solicitor, John Ferguson, Jr.; superintendent of health, Dr. Samuel C. Webster; milk inspector, Dr. Thomas E. Robinson; pound keeper, Howard C. Langworthy; police committee of the town council, Harry H. Coleman, Rogers E. Trainer and Isaac G Smith; electric light committee of the council, A. Clifford Holdsworth, Thomas F. Moore and Peter Nardone.

The bond of the town treasurer was fixed at $25,000 and the bond of the town clerk $3,000. Pay was voted the same.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk it appeas: November 4, Samuel H. Davis to Francis Cronin of East Boston, Mass., lots Nos. 21-25-29-30-31 and 41 revised plan of Misquamicut park. Nov. 6. Maynard Land corporation of Providence to Marie Wicha the northern portion of lot No. 1, Melrose Park Development. Caetano Cassale and wife to Norman Nibblins a certain tract or parcel of land lots Nos 266-267-268 Prospect park annex.

Riley Bowis arrested on Friday in an intoxicated condition by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, who took him into custody on Margin street, was arraigned Saturday afternoon before Acting Judge W. Walter Flynn, Jr., on a charge of being a common drunkard Sentence was suspended on his promise to leave town and stay away.

The second rally meeting of the Westerly district Sunday school association, previously announced to occur, to be held on Monday evening, November 9, at the First Hopkinton Seventh-day Baptist church in Ashaway, will not be held there until Monday evening, Nov. 23. Rev. Alva L. Davis, pastor of the church, is the president of the Westerly district Sunday school association. The first rally meeting of the Westerly association was held in the Baptist church at Carolina on October 19.

Funeral services for Paul Armstrong Smithson, aged 66, who died at his home, 10 Moss street, Pawcatuck, last Thursday morning, were held there Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. Ernest E. Morrill, pastor of the Pawcatuck Congregational church officiated. A large number of relatives, friends and fraternal associates attended The bearers were Harry L. Boles, D. Everett Hoxie, Samuel Girven, George E. Leonard George E. Broughton and Frank L. Friend, all members of Narragansett Commandery No. 37, Knights Templar of Westerly, of which the deceased was a member. Interment was made in Oak Grove cemetery, Fall River, Mass., with automobile cortege.

The annual roll call of the Westerly chapter of the Red Cross will commence Thursday of this week. Decision to this effect was made Friday afternoon at a meeting of the executive committee of the chapter held in the directors' room of the Industrial Trust company.

It was also decided at this meeting to move the chapter office from its present location to the residence of Mrs. John Crandall, 111 High street, sharing space with the Westerly Visiting Nurse association, who made the decision to locate there the latter part of the week.

Chairman James M. Pendleton presided at the meeting Friday. Various reports were made, including one from the Home Service division from October 1 to November 1. The report in detail follows:

Thirteen civilian cases acted on during the month as follows: Employment, 3; neglected children cases, 2; juvenile delinquency cases, 1; allowance paid to families through Red Cross, 2; investigation for out-of-town agencies, 3; examination of neuropsychiatric clinic, 1; soldier cases acted on during the month, 16, as follows: state aid, 5; compensation, 2; guardianship, 1; hospital, 1; insurance, 1; civil war vet, 1; dependency, 3; bonus, 4.

Red Cross worker appointed agent for Travelers' Aid in town. Life saving campaign, certificates and emblems forwarded to successful candidates. Campaign for reinstatement of government life insurance planned for coming month. Sweater wool for 50 sweaters obtained from national headquarters and distribution begun. Collection of magazines and toys needed for children's ward of The Westerly hospital. Scrap books donated by Junior Red Cross of Ashaway school to hospital.

The treasurer, Lewis Stanton, reporting on the financial status of the chapter, showed a balance on hand, as of November 1, of $2,917.82.

A large part of the meeting was devoted to the discussion of plans for the annual roll call, James M. Pendleton was the unanimous choice for chairman; and Mrs. C. Byron Cottrell was again chosen chairman of the women's teams.

A meeting of the team captains and members of teams will be held in the high school building, at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. At that time all necessary instructions regarded the roll call will be given so that bright and early Thursday morning the teams may start their annual canvass throughout the town.

The outlying districts which come under the area of the Westerly chapter will join as enthusiastically as even in the roll call.

The attention of many passersby on the Pawcatuck river bridge, Broad street, on Sunday morning was attracted by the workers, who are putting in new foundation for the Briggs building, corner of Main and Pawcatuck bridge. A coffer dam was being built, base of sand having been built up from the river bottom, beneath the center of the west wall of the block. Inside the rampart planks were driven, while a gasoline pump kept the interior free from water as the planking was driven down. When the coffer dam is made tight a permanent foundation will be placed on the river bottom to support an upright pillar. The building will be jacked up on that side, the old wooden timbers, which have shown signs of twisting will be taken out and in their place will be constructed a cement beam similar to one laready poured under the center of the building. When completed steel girders will be swung between them upon which will be carried the load of the building and floor timbers.

The S. D. S. society of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church held their second meeting of the season in the vestry of the church on Main street on Sunday. Members of the society gathered in the church parlors at 3 o'clock for the purpose of sewing for the new Westerly hospital. Following the work of the afternoon supper was served at 6:30 o'clock, Miss Elizabeth Hiscox being the hostess. The program of the evening was in charge of Miss Rachel Barber. A "Thank-offering" was taken for the support of foreign missionary work. Preceeding the evening's program, the regular business meeting of the society was held, presided over by Miss Ruth V. Davis, president of the society.

A collision occurred in Pawcatuck near the junction of Liberty street and Noyes avenue, Friday afternoon about 3:45 o'clock, when an the Chevrolet touring car bound for Norwich and driven by Mrs. William Corchinsky of Oakdale, Conn., accompanied by two other ladies and three children, and the Gardiner touring car, driven by Mrs. Mary C. Chadburn of 162 Main street, Westerly, out of Noyes avenue came together. The touring car had the left forward mudguard broken and front wheel smashed. The Chadburn auto had its right hand running board smashed and fender bent. Pawcatuck police Patrolman C. Wilson Brown visited the scene to investigate.

While the work of plastering the interior of the two stores and main entrance in the front of the building on Canal street, in process of erection for the Westerly's United theatre, is going on large canvas curtains are spread across the front of the building. Among changes in original layout is the addition of two stairways to the main entrance from the rear balcony of the building. At the rear of the theater building a new door is being cut through the brick wall. Excavation work to give access to the side door escape has so undermined a large elm tree west of the house occupied by Dr John Ruisi that it is in danger of toppling. Workmen have been engaged in cutting out the top branches of the tree in preparation for removing it as the excavation of the adjoining lot progresses. It is understood that fire escapes may be placed on the front of the building, in which case, exit from the balcony, would be through one of the front windows of the second story. If the fire escapes are placed on the north side of the building a door will have to be cut through the side wall to make a fire exit from the rear balcony.

AUTO THIEVES ATTACK MAN THEN STEAL TRUCK

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 8.—About 12.30 Sunday morning, at Birchtold's home, in Richmond, three men appeared where he lives alone and asked for admittance. He admitted the men, one of them being scratched and bruised. They told him that their automobile had been wrecked near his house and asked Birchtold to direct them to the nearest garage. Mr Birchtold took his ford truck from the shed and looked his house to go with them. As Birchtold stepped into his car one of the men hit him over the head with a piece of pipe and caught him as he fell. Birchtold started to rise and he was hit by another man with a bottle, labeled "Gordon Gin." Birchtold, as he had left the house, had put a revolver in his pocket, as he was suspicious of the men and this he pulled on the men. When Birchtold attempted to shoot, the gun, which was rusty, refused to work Birchtold then grabbed up a club and hit one of the men. The other two men had started the truck in the meantime and were driving away and the third man made his escape.

Birchtold endeavored to stop a passing machine but the driver did not slacken speed. He then walked three miles to Usquepaug, where he telephoned to Deputy Sheriff Fred W Bull at Kingston. Sheriff Bull received the message about 2.30 o'clock Sunday morning and immediately went to the Birchtold home. Birchtold was in a dazed condition but Bull found that the machine had gone in the direction of Hope Valley. At Hope Valley the sheriff learned that the machine had gone toward Westerly.

Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell of Westerly was informed of the case and notified the Connecticut police of the auto theft and gave them the number of the machine, which was X160, Rhode Island. In talking with Sheriff Tubbs of New London, Sheriff Mitchell was informed that the New London officer had had a complaint from an East Lyme filling station that a dodge delivery truck had been taken from the filling station there and that a Ford truck had been left in its place. It was found that the Ford truck was the one that belonged to Birchtold and was spotted in places with blood. Sheriff Tubbs called Hartford, Bridgeport and other cities to the west and sent his son to trail the Dodge truck.

State Trooper White found a Ford runabout near a gravel pit near the Birchtold house. This had also been stolen. A revolver and a cap were found by the Rhode Island officer in the Birchtold yard. The Ford roadster belonged to E. J. Buck of 803 Fountain street, Providence, a tobacco salesman, who had reported his machine stolen to the Providence police. The gun found in the yard was not loaded.

Birchtold's description of the men is as follows: One is a man about 27 years old and six feet tall. He had a bad scalp wound, and scratches and cuts on his face. All three of the men are smooth shaven. Another is about 5 feet 7 inches tall, rather thick set and is about 25 years old, and the third man is about 5 feet 3 inches tall and about 23 years old.

No trace of the men had been found up to a late hour Sunday.

MYSTIC

The plan to have a chamber of commerce in Mystic was fulfilled on Thursday evening at the meeting held in the parlors of the Hook and Ladder company. The meeting was called to order by Attorney E. H. Hewitt, chairman of the committee. C. T. Crandall was elected temporary chairman and G. H. Griswold temporary clerk. Mr. Crandall asked for a report of the committee and the chairman presented a code of by-laws which had been drawn up to meet the requirements of a place like this. They were unanimously adopted. The election by ballot for nine directors resulted in the following being selected for the ensuing year. E. H. Hewitt, L. E. Vatet, C. T. Crandall, Peter Flynn, W. L. Maine, C. E. Wheeler, G. H. Foley, R. K. Burrows and R. L. Bloom. A meeting place is to be secured and delegates appointed to the New England conference to be held in Worcester, Nov. 12 and 13. SLOGAN FOR NORWICH

Through the instrumentality of the chamber of commerce an effort to get a new slogan for Norwich is to be made, and it is a contest in which there should be a large and enthusiastic participation. There is no objection, so far as known, to the submission of as many suggested slogans as the mind directs. The more the merrier and the better the chance of getting what is sought—something that characterizes the city and indicates its enterprise, something that attracts attention and creates interest, something that is fresh and to the point.

What is the best slogan for Norwich? Certainly the opinions held by the people in a community of this size ought to be of great assistance in determining the answer. It is a contest into which they should enter with keen interest and eagerness to see that the best is brought out.

Most cities have some kind of a slogan, but it is not enough to simply have a slogan. It should mean something. It should be something that would in itself be an asset to the city. There is an advertising value in most of the slogans. They not only attract attention but they give an idea of the manufactures, the industry, the locality, the progressiveness or desirability of the city.

For the purpose of creating a greater interest in this contest a prize has been offered. Civic pride ought to respond under such circumstances without any such stimulant but whatever will aid in bringing out a widespread sentiment and swelling the suggestions is to be commended.

In an up to date and forward looking community there is a place for a similar slogan. Now is an admirable time for everyone to put his shoulder to the wheel and push for even greater progress in cooperation with those who are striving continually to that end and who figure that no harm and much assistance may come from a new slogan on the banner. Give your help in providing Norwich with a fitting slogan and then do your utmost in keeping it where it can be seen and its influence felt.

END PUBLICITY FEATURE

Because the house ways and means committee has agreed upon certain provisions of the revenue bill which will be proposed to the next session of congress does not mean that it will be adopted without debate or delay. It is to be hoped that the revised bill will be enacted into law by next March, which is of course entirely possible, but however general the approval may be of the committee report there will be those who will insist upon being heard. As to that there can be no objection provided they are brief and have something worthwhile to offer.

It has not taken the committee long to come to the conclusion that the publicity feature concerning income taxes ought to be repealed. That is in accord with opinion from all corners of the country, and even though congress is responsible for such a provision it ought to be eager to hasten its end. The criticisms that have been offered are sufficient to justify such a course without the formality of a debate.

Nothing has been accomplished by this publicity provision except to demonstrate that it would do just what those who opposed it from the beginning maintained that it would. It has pandered to the curiosity seekers. It has catered to those who sought to get the name of persons to interest them in various schemes, but it has not given a correct idea of the wealth of the individual. That in one instance more it has created a wrong impression because a person pays an income tax of large or small amount it does not mean that his income is proportionately large or small. Their respective amounts of taxable income may be indicated, but there's no information furnished on the amount of tax exempt securities held by the income they receive therefrom. It emphasizes the manner, however, in which tax payments are dodged through ownership of securities the income from which is non-taxable.

The ways and means committee believes that the publicity feature should be discarded and that belief cannot be carried out any too soon.

DRIVERS WHO 'CUT IN'

At this season of the year the motor vehicle department puts forth some guides advice concerning automobile driving, especially on the part of those who are going to the big football games. Many thousands are attracted by such events and today a large part of the crowd goes to and from the centers by automobile. This means an increased number in the highways and the likelihood of more accidents unless there is an effort on the part of each one to strictly observe the rules of the road and the rights of others.

It is too often the case on the part of those going to football games that they seem to think that they possess extra privileges, that they must be pardoned if they take big changes in driving and endanger other drivers and in order to make their objective resort to cutting in whenever there is an opportunity.

According to the department's record there were 262 accidents in the state last year caused by "cutting in." There is no telling how many near-accidents there were because of "cutting in" for they go unrecorded, but through the department's new plan of photographing traffic at dangerous points more of these may show up and a greater restraint placed upon this practice, while the invitation by the department for drivers to make complaint of those who are endangering the use of the highway by reckless driving of any kind should likewise prove beneficial in curbing that class of drivers.

Increasing traffic may be handled by speeding up the cars on the main highways, but in the event to such a relief it is not to be expected that there will be the toleration of driving that imperils others. It is by no means only those who are going to football games who practice "cutting in", for there are those who are constantly doing it and are disposed to create serious conditions by such disregard for the safety of position of others. Such drivers deserve and should get slight consideration from the authorities.

STANDING BY THE LAW

An assistant prosecuting attorney in the East Cambridge court is responsible for the declaration that since Judge Flynn has been sitting on the criminal superior court bench in that city the number of appeals has decreased each month, a change which he attributed to the sentences imposed.

This means enforcing the law in a manner that takes into consideration the protection of the public and rates it as more important than bowing to the sickening sentimentality that is put forward in behalf of those who have placed themselves in the criminal class.

Handing out sentences that will show that the law means something has long been needed in many courts, and it is not only the police courts that are apt to be lax in the administering of justice. Frequently it is a case where the lower court will meet its responsibilities concerning law enforcement, without exceeding its rights only to have the higher court through appeal apply a slap on the wrist and knock in the head the well meant effort of the lower court. Such instances are frequent where there is no trial, being done by recommendation of the district attorney or prosecuting agent.

When appeals are handled in a manner which indicate that the upper court is going to apply the law quite as effectively as the lower court there will be a better understanding to the effect that law breaking is a serious matter and not simply a case of paying a license for wrong doing many times repeated and preying upon the public which looks to the police and the court for protection under the law.

THE TACNA-ARICA PLEBISCITE

It is not a desirable task which the plebiscite committee is endeavoring to carry out in adjusting the Tacna-Arica differences between Chile and Peru, and of which General Pershing is at the head.

The trouble there is of long standing and there is a disposition to place all the handicaps possible in the way of the plebiscite, the method decided upon, and accepted by both countries, as the proper way of ending the trouble. Irritations and retaliations have kept the commission trying to pour oil on troubled waters without impressing it with the belief that it was actually making any definite headway.

With the difficulties encountered in paving the way for the expression of the wishes of the people in the disputed district, there is no great assurance that the plebiscite will be respected after it has been held. With each country afraid that its interests will not be carefully safeguarded, or looking upon a decision which favors the other country as prejudicial and wrong, the prospects of ending that old national quarrel are not as promising as it was expected they would be when the countries submitted the matter to arbitration before the president of the United States.

With attacks upon Peruvians by Chileans being reported the situation is indicative of the cat and dog fight which has been going on in that region for a long time. There is reason for maintaining confidence in the ability and impartiality of the plebiscite commission and its determination to do its duty, but it has already encountered such annoyances as to show that its work is by no means an enjoyable one.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Indications are that the Balkan fire has been completely smothered.

In spite of the progress made it is a long time getting to King Tut.

The man on the corner says: It isn't necessary to go to Florida to go broke.

It isn't the victorious team that feels the effect of a hard football scrimmage.

The next big event after the observance of Thanksgiving will be the opening of congress.

Among other things there will be reason this year for giving thanks that there are other fuels than anthracite.

When science makes it possible for man to get along without sleep what an increase there will be in the electric light bill!

Coast guard service hasn't grown any the less thrilling and perilous since the enforcement of prohibition was included in its duties.

Now that the season for tending the heater fire is with us, jewelers can expect increased business from watches dropped on the cellar concrete.

There's no need of complaining about any unseasonable warmth. Such a situation will be promptly attended to by the weatherman and the coal miners.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

An old tennis racket makes a good carpet beater.

Keep honey in the dark, as light causes it to granulate.

A dab of tart jelly is mighty good with the breakfast omelet.

Save the old broomsticks for stakes for heavy-growing plants and vegetables.

A coat of lacquer applied to your brass candlesticks and fixtures will keep them from tarnishing.

Examine the electric cords to your lamps and electrical devices frequently and be sure none is wearing out and apt to cause a fire.

As you put away your canned fruit, keep a record of the materials used and the cost. This helps in planning for the next year.

Have a bit of rubber tubing put on the nozzles of the sink faucets if you wish to avoid breaking and the nicks and chips that are even worse.

If you stir figs or dates cut into small pieces into mush before serving it you have a much more delicious breakfast dish. The mush may be molded with the fruit in it.

To remove fly paper from an article, wet the article with kerosene and let it stand 10 or 15 minutes. Wash in hot water and pure soap.

Milk which has been burned should be poured into a jug and set in cold water. When cold, the burnt taste will have disappeared.

A teaspoon of household ammonia added to one quart of water and poured over your fern once every two weeks will give it a rich green color.

Use a vegetable-brush in cleaning celery. It goes down into the grooves and prevents the dirty-looking celery which is often seen served on the tables of particular housewives.

Smoky fires discolor marble mantelpieces dreadfully. One that has been "smoked" in this way can be cleaned with a solution of chloride of lime and water. Other marble stains generally succumb to common salt.

THE BREAD BOARD

The breadboard is a rather neglected object in most households. It will never become dark or discolored if every few weeks it is scrubbed with silver sand and warm water, well rinsed, and dried in the sun.

A QUICKER BREAKFAST

One housewife cuts the bread for toast the night before and puts it in the toasting rack until morning. It dries out just enough by morning to toast quickly and nicely. Time is gained at this hurried meal.

A DISAGREEABLE DUTY

None of us like to wash the meat grinder, but it really is not much of a job if a piece of dried bread has been run through after the meat has been ground. The bread carries away all sticky pieces of meat and most of the grease.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Some children are taught to lie for a time each day in a darkened room and rest, without the excitement of toys or picture books. Such children are seldom nervous or ill tempered.

The woman who can "lose herself for 40 winks" and rise refreshed to resume her household work has an immense advantage over the woman who says insistently that she "cannot sleep in the daytime." Even if you cannot sleep one can relax, thus resting for a little while the nerves and muscles, the tired feet and back that serve so well all day.

Darkened skins may be bleached by various preparations such as lemon or peroxide creams and lotions, a few drops of tincture of benzoin in the rinsing water and various combinations of bleaching agents. An excellent bleaching pack that may be used once or twice a week is made by mixing three parts of cornmeal with two parts of butter milk (or lemon juice) and enough witch hazel to make a smooth paste. Allow it to dry on the skin then wash off.

RUST SPOTS ON LINEN

Rust spots on table and bed linen can easily be removed by thoroughly moistening them with juice squeezed directly from a fresh-cut lemon. The material should afterward be exposed to bright sunshine. Leave it on for an hour or two and then rinse out the lemon juice. Sometimes two or three applications of the lemon juice may be necessary before the spots will finally disappear.

TO KEEP THE COLOR

We dislike paying a big price for a certain shade of silk stockings and then have them fade in the washing process. Use one tablespoon of borax to a basin of warm water, along with a small amount of pure soap flakes. Wash rapidly and rinse thoroughly in clear warm water and dry in a shady, airy place.

THE GIFT ACCEPTABLE

A gift which would delight any bride is a compote and sherbet glasses of glass tinted a shade of lacquer red and jade green. The bowl and smaller saucer are of red glass, while green glass forms the stems. The effect is charming and different.

EASILY PLUCKED

To remove the feathers from wild ducks dip them in boiling water, then wrap in a thick cloth. The feathers are steamed loose in a few minutes and the "pins" will give little or no trouble.

HEAT THE PLATES

Don't forget to heat the dinner plates before putting them on the table. If they are stone-cold they cool the food immediately, and nothing spoils a meal more than having the food lukewarm.

A BRIGHT TOUCH

Save the remnants from the gingham house dress and put an inch hem of the bright gingham on the bottom of the plain white curtains. It gives a very cheerful appearance to this busy work room.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Except for period costumes, skirts remain very short—from 13 to 14 inches from the floor.

Very attractive suits for the four-year-old boy consist of trousers of velveteen and jumpers of baibriggan.

Gay little wisps of handkerchiefs are made of chiffon stamped with odd modernistic designs in brilliant colors.

The deep rich tone of Japanese coral make an admirable choice for the necklace or bracelets which add to the effect of the costume.

Fur waistcoats are very smart when worn with tailored suits at present. Chinchilla mole and ermine are the furs so used.

To give a brilliant note of color to the fall tailleur, there are most fascinating waistcoats of red flannel with brass buttons and a very mannish air.

An old rose leather writing portfolio is roomy enough to contain, besides the paper and envelopes, a pen, pencil, long box for extra pencils, calendar and stamp case.

A box of six handkerchiefs of exceedingly fine linen will make a most welcome gift, particularly when the handkerchiefs are monogrammed in six different colors.

The little girl of the house will rejoice in the possession of a coat and hat of black material covered with small squares of red. A small collar and cuffs of fur complete the picture.

Very new are underarm bags of a new leather which shows brocaded designs in two tones, the lighter shade appearing in the raised figures while the dark tone forms a background.

GLOVES FOR TIGHT SLEEVES

The extremely tight sleeves in vogue this autumn have made the gloves with flaring cuffs inappropriate. As a result the glovers have developed a hand covering for afternoon wear which has a gauntlet indeed, but one which turns back in the flattest of folds toward the fingers so that it does not bulge over the sleeve.

EFFECTIVE CONTRASTS

Contrast is the feature which gives effect and individuality to many of the evening toilets. For example if an especially gorgeous and beautiful wrap is worn, it has become an accepted habit to wear beneath a rather plain frock of silver tissue, very slightly draped. The contrast brings out admirable points of both garments.

KNITTED HATS

The tam and beret seemingly are giving way to the diminutive hook-stitched cloche for head coverings at autumn sport gatherings. Many college girls are knitting their own skull stitch or other designs. The motifs are of geometric or flower designs.

GIVES WILLOWY EFFECT

Waistlines are noticeably higher in front and lower in the back. This gives a draped effect to a bodice, which on analysis is entirely undraped. It is also supposed to give a "willowy" effect to the carriage of the wearer.

NEW BOOK MARKS

The backs of old leather books form exceedingly convenient book marks when cut in strips and fringed at the ends.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Cloth that has become mildewed can be restored by putting lemon juice on spots and exposing to strong sunshine.

Before washing cotton stockings put a handful of common salt in the washing water. This will set the dye.

To remove tar or grease marks from the most delicate fabrics soak a piece of white rag in eucalyptus oil and rub it on the affected part until the latter is quite clean.

All colors should be washed and rinsed in lukewarm water or warm water—never in hot. If the article is cotton, linen or any heavy mixed fabric, it can be washed in much hotter water than should be used for a silk. Silk materials, silk-and-cotton, or artificial-silk fabrics with a high gloss or glaze are affected by heat both in the washing and in the ironing.

EXTRA PIECE OF MATERIAL

When dyeing a dress or blouse it is a good plan to dye an odd piece of material to match at the same time. It will prove very useful for repairing purposes later on, for it is difficult to match a dyed material. By the way, dyed garments should not be allowed to get completely dry on the line as it is unsatisfactory to sprinkle them before ironing. Neither is it wise to roll them up and lay them aside to keep damp. It is far better to take them down when they are nearly dry and iron at once.

CLEANING PILLOWS

The first step in the process of cleaning pillows is to make a thick suds of warm water and soap flakes in a laundry tub. Drop in a pillow at a time and go over it with a small hand vacuum pump. This forces the suds through both the case and the feathers and cleans the entire pillow. After all of the dust has been removed, rinse the pillow in a tub of clear warm water, using the same hand pump again. Next hang the pillow on a line to dry. Do not be discouraged if it looks peculiar at first, because the feathers mat in bunches and the wet case clings to them. But as the drying takes place, keep shaking it and turn in the sun slowly but surely as the feathers dry, the pillow will plump out again and begin to assume its natural shape.

While one pillow is in the washing process another can be placed in the warm suds to soak. If the feathers are of the best quality that have been stripped from the quills, they will wash better than if the quills are present. But in either case the results will be satisfactory and the pillows will come out fresh and fluffy.

MAKES CANDLE LAST

If you want candles to last try the following plan: Take each candle by the wick and give it a good coating of white varnish. Then put away for a day or two to harden. The varnish prevents the life of the candle.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Three women are members of the Madrid, Spain, council.

Berlin, Germany, is considering the introduction of the policewoman system.

Spain today is said to be the most advanced in feminism of all the Latin countries.

The Women's Board of Missions has endowed a fully-equipped hospital in Foochow, China, in memory of Dr. Kate C. Woodhull.

Miss Nina Bang, the first woman Danish minister, has put a ban upon the singing of the state anthem in her country, claiming it is too warlike to benefit the public good.

Lawford, England, is one of the few cities in that country run entirely by women, the only public position not held by women being vicar and gravedigger.

Girls now are admitted to study agriculture at Los Banos, Philippine islands.

Twenty cents a day is the average received by the 40,000 women and children industrial workers in Porto Rico.

UNPLEASANT ODORS

Pour a little vinegar into the pan in which fish or onions have been fried and bring it to a boil. It will remove every trace of odor.

BRIGHTER LONGER

Brass knockers and doorknobs will stay brighter if rubbed with paraffin after cleaning and then polished with a cloth.

RECIPES

Spanish Rice: Put into a saucepan two tablespoons of butter. When it is very hot, add half a cup of rice which you have washed well and then allowed to dry. Fry the rice until it is brown, stirring it frequently. Then add an onion chopped very fine, two tablespoons of cooked tomato and a little salt and pepper. Cover the mixture with hot water and let it cook until the rice is tender. Add more hot water as needed, but do not stir the mixture after you have added the water.

Salmon Patties: Take 1 can of salmon, pour off the oil, remove all skin and bones and break into flakes. Melt 1 tablespoon of butter in a saucepan and mix smoothly with it 2 tablespoons of flour. Then add slowly 2 cups of milk and season with 1 teaspoon of salt, 1-2 teaspoon of pepper, a little mace and 1 teaspoon of parsley minced very fine. Add flaked salmon and cook 4 minutes, stirring constantly. Put in patty shells and serve.

Stories That Recall Others

Getting Library Books

She was a small girl and had been told about the requirements when taking books from the library. How warped the impression was that she obtained is indicated by the questions she asked her teacher.

She wanted to get library books and her inquiry to the teacher was: "Please, teacher, don't you have to own a store like a furniture store or a barber shop before you can get a card at the library?"

Strange Bantam Brood

While mowing on his farm last summer a farmer by mistake killed a mother quail that had stayed on its nest to the last. Seeing the eggs and remembering a bantam hen that had been sitting on a door knob for a week he placed the nine eggs in her care, and in due time to her intense delight every egg hatched. She raised them all and they are now as large as she is. Though plainly very proud of her young ones she is often puzzled and worried by their habits of taking long level flights over trees and meadows, and their refusal to roost high. Bantam children didn't behave that way when she was young. But seeing no harm in it, she flies her best with them and crouches low in the grass at night in their beloved company. The birds are at all times free to return to "the wild."

From Small Beginnings

Arthur Pue Gorman, a Great Political Figure

A thirteen-year old boy working as a page in the senate of the United States can pick up a great amount of information about human nature as well as about politics, and he can pick up some pretty high ambitions as well. That is what Arthur Pue Gorman picked up when he was a thin little 13-year-old page and the ambitions that he treasured so carefully led him to become in later life at the age of 42, a senator in the very place where he had once run errands for the men of his childhood. In his case close association with politicians did him no harm.

Arthur Gorman was born in Maryland, not far from the City of Washington. He was a very proud boy when he first entered the solemn precincts of the United States Senate, having been given the position of page through the kindly help of some of the friends of his people. He did his work faithfully, and took great delight in listening to what was being said, and in trying to understand it. Although most of the speeches were far too complicated for him to know what they were all about, yet he was able to gather a remarkably great amount of sound information. His work as page made him familiar from childhood with the atmosphere of politics, and with the terms and the methods of political life.

When he became older it was altogether natural that he should try to gain some political office. He made the effort, and having good friends to back him, won by his cheerfulness and by his willingness to work—he gained a place as Collector of Revenue in his native state. At 25 he became a state senator, having first served in the Maryland house of delegates, of which he was for a time speaker. At 42 he was sent to the United States senate, where he served two terms, making a brilliant record as a man of personality and power. He made his name known from one end of the country to the other, and was so well thought of that many suggested him for the presidency. He was still in the senate of the United States when he died at the age of 67.

Without having the opportunity for school and college, he had made the most of his opportunities by private reading and study, and was a well-read man, surpassing in breadth and accuracy of information many who have had the privilege of attending college. Education is always a matter of character and never of school or college.

Speaking of well-preserved women, Lot's wife was probably the best of the assortment.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Richest Meadow Mice

Riches are with trouble fraught.
Nothing truer e'er was taught.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

For a week Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse lived under the strawstack in Farmer Brown's dooryard. It was by very comfortable place for little people like them. Meanwhile they were trying to decide where to spend the winter. They had intended to go direct to Farmer Brown's barn, but while they were staying under the strawstack Danny had made a wonderful discovery. He had gone out exploring one evening and when he came back he was the most excited Meadow Mouse that ever lived.

"Nanny!" he cried, "I know now where we are going to live. I have found a most wonderful place. There is food enough there to last as long as we live. We will never have to hunt for food."

Nanny looked doubtful. "You said the same thing that time we made our home in a cornstock down in Farmer Brown's cornfield. There was corn enough there to last for ever and ever, but you remember it was all carried away."

"I remember," said Danny, "But do you know, Nanny, I believe I have found the very place it was carried to. Never in all your life have you seen so much corn in one place. Come with me."

It was night. Danny led the way over to a pile of old boards just back of Farmer Brown's cornerib. One of these boards had been thrown carelessly on the pile so that one end touched the cornerib. The latter, you know, is a sort of little house on stone posts and made with cracks between the boards for the air to get in. The stone posts are to keep mice from climbing up.

Danny and Nanny scrambled up on the pile of boards. Then Danny led the way along the board that touched the cornerib and right in between two of the boards of the cornerib. "There!" squeaked Danny. "Have you ever seen so much corn in all your life?"

Nanny confessed that she never had. That little house was piled full. In fact, there was so much of it it was hard to get around. Nanny became as excited as Danny. "We'll live right here!" she cried. "All we'll have to do is to eat and sleep. We won't have to hunt for a single mouthful. We'll be the richest Meadow Mice in the world! Yes, sir, we'll be the richest Meadow Mice in the world. I do hope that nobody else will find this. We must look for a place to make our nest."

So Danny and Nanny began to look for a place in which to make their nest. By working hard they finally found a big enough place in amongst the ears of corn. And then they began to look for something to make a nest of. But there was nothing in that cornerib to make a nest of. There wasn't a thing there but ears of corn from which the husks had been stripped.

"Oh, dear," said Nanny. "We'll have to go outside to get something to make our nest of."

"Never mind," said Danny. "There is plenty of grass outside, and as long as we haven't got to work for our food this winter it certainly won't hurt us to do a little work to get a comfortable bed."

So Nanny and Danny made many trips down to the ground and back again with grass, so as to have a nice, comfortable nest. At last it was done. "Now," said Nanny, with a little sigh of pure happiness. "We can eat and sleep and sleep and eat without a thing in all the Great World to worry about. Isn't it wonderful, Danny?"

"Nanny," he cried, "I know now where we are going to live."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ruffed Grouse Investigation.

Mr. Editor: The Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective association which is sponsoring the ruffed grouse investigation in New England has issued a statement to the effect that the disease is one which the flesh of the bird so unfit for food. Birds generally thin. Such birds are specially desired in the investigation and should be shipped at once to Dr. Alfred O. Gross, Brunswick, Maine.

The disease that has been discovered recently is caused by a very small worm found in the intestines. A larger worm is sometimes found in considerable numbers on the flesh of the bird but this appears to be harmless except when present in excessive numbers. It is probable that the disease may be carried by a blood-sucking fly which is sometimes found on the body of live birds. Those flies generally leave the bird as soon as it is fried. If a bird is plump and the flesh of healthy color and condition no harm can result from eating the bird.

The association reports that the New England ruffed grouse investigation is receiving excellent support from sportsmen and others in the New England states and that more than one hundred specimens have been received to date by Dr. Gross of Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Maine, who is in charge of the investigation. As a result of the radio broadcast from WBZ every Wednesday evening at 7:40 p. m. by Thornton W. Burgess, reports of conditions all over New England are being received. These reports are being studied carefully and prove to be of great interest and value in the investigation.

Attention is also being called to the flight of goshawks from the north which has appeared in Maine and recently extended southward into Massachusetts. These birds are the most destructive of all hawks. They are not commonly abundant in New England but about every seven to twelve years appear in unusual numbers and destroy many valuable native birds. The flight of goshawks is generally supposed to be caused by a scarcity of food in the north, perhaps caused by a periodic rabbit plague.

Sportsmen and farmers are urged to learn to recognize the goshawk, to report them when seen to Edward H. Forbush, director, division of ornithology, state house, Boston, and "to assist in checking their depredations on poultry and game.

INDIGESTION!!! UPSET STOMACH GAS, GAS, GAS

Chew a few Pleasant Tablets, Instant Stomach Relief!

Instant relief from sourness, gas or acidity of stomach; from indigestion, flatulence, palpitation, headache or any stomach distress.

The moment you chew a few "Pape's Diapepsin" tablets your stomach feels fine. Correct your digestion for a few cents. Pleasant! Harmless! Any drug store.

Pity the Weak Skinny Children

Nature's greatest health builder and strength giver is Cod Liver Oil—it's full of vitamines of the first class—everyone knows that.

But pity the poor children—how can they take this nasty, nauseating stuff that invariably upsets their small, delicate stomachs?

Most of them can't and now—thank goodness—none of them have to.

For now Cod Liver Oil comes in tasteless sugar coated tablets, that are as easy for the kids to take as candy and they sure do build up the youngsters in double quick time.

So mothers, if any one of your loved ones is frail and peaked or isn't feeling right just ask Lee & Osgood or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 tablets—60 cents.

One sickly, thin child aged 9 gained 12 pounds in seven months and now plays daily with other children.

Splendid for any run down, weak, skinny, nervous man or woman—thousands of boxes are sold daily—but be sure and ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets — the original and genuine. Try them for 30 days and if you aren't delighted with the improvement your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

What every salesman knows

FREQUENT personal contact with his customers is the salesman's best business-builder.

Once the confidence of his trade is won, his problem is mainly how to call on them often enough to care for all their wants and hold their custom. What he really needs is some up-to-date magic carpet which will take him over his territory twice as often without doubling his expense account.

Every salesman knows how valuable these more frequent calls would be.

A good many salesmen, and sales managers too, right here in Connecticut, have learned how easily toll telephone calls will maintain this profitable personal contact.

Sooner or later, every salesman will find it out.

NO MORE PILES

Thousands Blame Dr. Leonhardt, the Physician Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the new treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

This Doctor's treatment is internal. By experimenting for years he discovered the exact cause of piles and then went further and compounded a remedy that would remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt wants every sufferer to benefit by his discovery and so that there will be no doubting of delay, Lee & Osgood and all druggists are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee that it will do he stated or money back.

On that honorable basis every sufferer should secure a package of Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID today.

OBITUARY

Miss Julia Myles Standish

Miss Julia Myles Standish, of this city, daughter of the late John Standish, died at the home of Mrs. S. J. Griggs of Abington Sunday morning. Miss Standish was in her 84th year and was one of the old residents of Norwich. Her father kept a harness and leather store on Main street for many years. The last few years of her life have been spent with Mrs. Griggs, where she has been tenderly cared for. She was one of the oldest members of the United Congregational church. She is survived by one sister Mrs. M. C. Hanks of Newton Center, Mass.

William H. Dennison

After illness of a year William H. Dennison passed away Sunday at the home of his step-daughter, Mrs. Perry Byrnes, 75 Lafayette street. Mr. Dennison was born in Norwich, the son of the late Harriet Wise and Andrew Dennison. From early childhood he made his home with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wise, at their home on Sherman street.

On April 26, 1886, in Harrison, New Jersey, Mr. Dennison was united in marriage with Mrs. Harriet Goodman McGee, daughter of Bernard Goodman, who helped to build the historic Monitor. Mrs. Dennison passed away in this city December 26, 1906.

Mr. Dennison was an expert pistol maker and was employed by the Hopkins and Allen Arms company for 18 years. For a number of years he had charge of the blueing department, but for the past seven years he has been employed by the American Woolen company. Mr. Dennison was a member of the local nest of Owls. He was also a former member of the Blackstone Hose company and the William H. Williams Hose company at the Falls.

Mr. Dennison was a nephew of the late Representative Henry McNally of Norwich Town and Alexander Emmons, the well known portrait painter; he was a cousin of the late Charles E. Allen of Williams street and the late Mrs. William Thompson of Otis street.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Henry Treadway of Groton, and Mrs. Eliza Smith of this city; his step-daughter, Mrs. Perry Byrnes, with whom he made his home for the past seven years, and three grandchildren, Robert D. Byrnes and Raymond Byrnes of Hartford, and Miss Ava Byrnes of this city also survive him.

Mr. Dennison was an extremely good-hearted man and was never known to refuse a request for aid.

Mrs. Louisa Byrnes Boss

Mrs. Louisa Byrnes Boss died Friday at St. John's hospital, Brooklyn, after a lingering illness. She was a sister of the late Frederick A. Byrnes of this city and was born in Norwich and lived during her girlhood on Warren street in the residence now occupied by Mrs. Daniel M. Lester. She attended the public schools and was a member of the class of '52 at the Norwich Free Academy.

The funeral is to held in Brooklyn and burial will be in Yantic cemetery.

Mrs. Hyman Fishkin.

At the age of 56 years, Liba Fishkin, widow of Hyman Fishkin, died at her home, 151 Mt. Pleasant street, Saturday morning. She was a native of Minckz, Russia, and was born June 25, 1869. She came to this country about five years ago and had since made her home in Norwich. Mrs. Fishkin was a member of the Congregation of St. Joseph's synagogue.

Surviving are three sons, Isaac of this city, David of New York and Samuel of Hartford. There are also a brother in Chicago, 10 grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Mrs Hugh Kelleher

Following an illness of three weeks and a half, Ann Buckley, wife of the late Hugh Kelleher, passed peacefully away at 8.30 Sunday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James O. Mahoney of 3 Falls Avenue.

She was born in Macroom, Ireland, 86 years ago last March. Shortly before the Civil war she came to the United States. In January, 1865, she was united in marriage with Hugh Kelleher, in old St. Mary's church. Eight children were born to them, of who mbut two survive, Mrs. James O. Mahoney and Mrs. James Purdon, both of this city. Mrs. Kelleher is survived by two sisters. Miss Hannah Buckley and Mrs. Edward Sullivan of this city, and by one brother, Cornelius Buckley of Branford. Eleven grandchildren also are bereaved by her passing.

Mrs. Kelleher was one of the oldest Catholic residents of Norwich, having made her home in this city for nearly 70 years. he was a fervent Catholic and took a deep interest in the affairs of St. Mary's parish to which she belonged for two score years. She rejoiced in the fact that a few years ago she was one of the old ladies invited by Father Keefe to turn a spade of earth for the new, St. Mary's Memorial church. In recent years she attended St. Patrick's parish, and despite her advanced age, she was able as late as seven weeks ago to attend mass and receive holy communion at St. Patrick's.

Mrs. Kelleher was a loving wife and devoted mother. She was a sympathetic neighbor and with her charitable nature and fund of good humor won for herself a large circle of kind friends. Her passing takes from the community a Christian life of true worth. Her life will remain a memory sacred and dear to all those who are left to mourn her loss.

BROOKS' COMET IS SEEN BY CHICAGO OBSERVATORY

Brooks' comet, which was discovered on September 24 by Albitzky and Shajn, astronomers at the Simeis Observatory, in Russia, has been observed at the Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago. In a statement of Sciences Service, Prof. Edwin B. Frost, director of the observatory, stated:

"The comet was photographed by Prof. George Van Biesbroeck early in the morning of September 28. It was not brighter than the thirteenth magnitude, and it will not become much brighter. This was discovered first by Brooks in 1889, and it has been faint at each of the five returns it has made since then.

Blind Yale Student to Teach

Henry T. Istas, a senior at Yale and that university's only blind student, has won the Edward J. Phelps' memorial scholarship because of his excellent work, and will prepare himself to teach. Istas is 22 years old, and has been blind always. He early attended the school for the blind at Hartford and finished at Watertown. He made excellent marks, became a member of the Delta Sigma Rho fraternity and was in the advisory board of the debating society at Yale.

TWO NORWICH MEN MEET DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT ON LEBANON HILL

Pinned under a Ford roadster that turned over on Crocker Hill in the town of Lebanon Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock, Frank P. Pratt, 47, of 18 North Cliff street, and James E. Keating, 40, of 16 Tanner street, Norwich Town, were almost instantly killed, but a third man who was said to have been with them in the car apparently escaped with minor injuries. He disappeared after the accident without any one learning at the time who he was, although it was said late Sunday night that he was a Norwich Town man, living near Mr. Keating's home, but this could not be verified.

The roadster was a car that Mr. Pratt was in the habit of driving and was registered in the name of M. P. Winward & Son, of 135 Water street, the motor trucking firm for which Mr. Pratt was manager in this district, having filled that position for six or seven years past. There were no eye witnesses of the accident but it was evidently due to skidding on the oily slope of the hill which was soaked with water from the rain. The men were driving towards this city from Lebanon and as they came to the top of the hill, which drops down with a sudden sharp pitch, the wheel marks in the road showed that their machine had started to skid from the right to the left of the road as they were part way down the hill. The left front wheel shot up the steep bank on the left side of the road and the machine turned around at right angles and upset with all four wheels in the air. The rear end lay partly up the bank and the front end was in the highway with the men underneath. Both Pratt and Keating were large and heavy and it was evident that their fatal injuries were received when their heads hit the surface of the highway, both suffering concussion of the brain although there were no external wounds.

Thomas Cassy of Bean Hill found the wrecked machine as he came along and with Christopher Hansen, who lives at the foot of Crocker Hill, Frank Hansen and Earl Hoxie, succeeded in raising the car and getting the men out, placing them on a seat cushion while Hansen telephoned for the Backus hospital ambulance.

The third man from the wreck was in a dazed condition. He was placed on the bank to await the arrival of the ambulance and during the excitement of looking after the other men he disappeared.

It was reported that when the men were first taken from under the car, they were living but unconscious but both were dead when the ambulance arrived. Dr. G. H. Gildersleeve was acting medical examiner in the absence of his father and Deputy Sheriff George Hoxie, who had been summoned, assisted in clearing up the wreck. Both bodies were taken in charge by Undertaker Gager, but that of Mr. Keating was taken to the rooms of Undertaker Hourigan.

A wrecking car brought the roadster to this city. The top was crushed and the steering wheel broken, but it was not much damaged otherwise.

Both Mr. Keating and Mr. Pratt had been life long residents of this city and were well and favorably known. The former was born in Norwich Town, Aug. 2, 1885, was a graduate of the Town street school and of the Norwich Free academy, class of 1901. He had been employed all his life by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company as a shipping clerk and was stationed at the Norwich plant of the United States Finishing Co. He was a member of Sacred Heart church at Norwich Town, belonged to the Brotherhood of Railway clerks, Norwich lodge, No. 430, B. P. O. E. and Division No. 3, A. O. H. He is survived by his widowed mother, Margaret Keating, a brother, John S. Keating of Waterbury, and five sisters, Mrs. John A. Brown, Nora, Winifred, Katherine and Anna, all of Norwich. He was kindly and affectionate in his home relations, a loyal friends and a conscientious employe, of a kindly disposition that won him a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Pratt, who was unmarried, was the son of the late Michael Pratt and Johanna Ryan. His home all his life had ben on North Cliff street and he was a graduate of St. Mary's school. He had been employed in a number of different lines but for a number of years past had been the district manager for the Winward Motor Trucking firm and was esteemed by his employers for his fidelity and attention to the interests of the business. He was a member of St. Mary's Memorial church and of Norwich lodge, No. 430, B. P. O. E. He is survived by his brother, George W. Pratt of this city, and also leaves a nephew. He was of a quiet and companionable disposition his death will be deeply felt by his many friends. A sad feature in connection with his death was that he was to have been a bearer at the funeral of a relation today (Monday) in this city.

WEDDINGS

Peterson-Phillips

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips in Lisbon Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock when their only daughter, Helen Louise, was united in marriage with Philip Raymond Peterson of Westerly, R. I. Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, this city, performed the marriage ceremony, the double ring service being used. The house was beautifully decorated with long-leaved pine and bittersweet berries, hemlock boughs and chrysanthemums. The bridal party entered the parlor to the music of the wedding march from Lohengrin played by Mrs. Bradford.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was charmingly gowned in crepe-back satin, trimmed with chantilly lace. She wore a veil of tulle which hung from a lace cap caught with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. Her only ornament was a two-strand pearl necklace, the gift of the groom. Miss Cordelia Smith of Passaic, N. J., was the maid of honor. Miss Smith was gowned in yellow satin and carried yellow chrysanthemums. George Krauss of Lowell, Mass., was the best man.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Alice Johnson Phillips, attired in pale pink chiffon, Mrs. Ruby Babcock Phillips, in orchid chiffon (sister-in-law of the bride), Miss Mildred Irene Bromley, cousin of the bride, in pale green satin, and Mrs. Helen Peterson O'Neil, a sister of the groom, in pale blue satin. The attendants carried bouquets of yellow, orchid and white chrysanthemums.

The rainbow shades were effectively carried out. The ushers were three brothers of the bride, Lloyd, George and Earle Phillips, and George O'Neil, a brother-in-law of the groom. Little Miss Louise Bradford, niece of the groom, was the flower girl. She wore yellow silk and carried a basket of carnations of pastel shades. The bride's mother wore embroidered canton crepe of harvest shades.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Calvin Bromley sweetly sang "At Dawning" and after the ceremony, "Because." She was accompanied by Mrs. John Bradford, sister of the groom. The bride's gift to the groom was a fountain pen and to her maid of honor and to her attendants she gave silver sautoirs. Her gifts to the pianist and soloist were silver brooches and to the flower girl a Dutch pin. The groom's gift to his bride was a pearl necklace. To the best man he gave a gold dress set and to the ushers leather belts.

The bride received numerous gifts including gold, silver, cut glass, china, linen, mirrors, lamps and electrical appliances. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held and sandwiches, coffee, cake and ice cream were served to about 150 guests.

The bride is a graduate of Plainfield High school, class of 1918, and has been a successful teacher in the Plainfield school since her graduation. She is a member of Rebecca Chapter, Order Eastern Star, Plainfield, of Deborah Avery Putnam chapter, D. A. R. and of Central Rebecca lodge, I. O. O. F. She is a member of the Baptist church in Jewett City. The groom is a member of the Moosup lodge of Masons and of the Moosup lodge of Odd Fellows. He is a member of the Plainfield Congregational church. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson left by automobile on a wedding trip and on their return will reside in a newly furnished home at No. 5 Pleasant street, Westerly. They will be at home to their friends after December 1st. The bride's traveling gown was of black satin trimmed with blue and gold velvet applique and banded with squirrel fur with hat to match. Her coat was of dark blue needlepoint, trimmed with squirrel fur.

Largest Artificial Lake

What will be the largest artificial lake in the world is being built in a remote section of Alabama to assure a constant flow of water for driving three large electric generators, says Popular Science Monthly. These will feed power into the electrical transmission system of the state.

With the exception of those at Niagara Falls, the three 45,000-horsepower water-wheel-driven generators will be the largest in the United States. The artificial lake will have a shore line 700 miles long and will cover 40,000 acres of farm and forest land. Agricultural experts believe that the construction of the huge lake will make a vast section of the country to the south of the lake frost-proof and advantageous for fruit growing.

What a picnic the insurance company must have had collecting premiums from the late Mr. Methuselah!

Public opinion is greatly impressed by the position of the Belgian franc is compared with the French this being considered a direct outcome of the Washington debt agreement.

Desert Flowers Beautiful

The sterile, sandy, stony wastes of the deserts are not entirely devoid of beauty. Nature sees to it that rare beauty at times relieves the monotony. The semi-arid deserts of the American west have many plants which once a year for a short period of time bloom with a beauty that rivals any dream of a Persian garden. One of these flowers is the Rock Rose or fragrant primrose, which blooms after the rainy season and just before the long drought sets in. It is sometimes called the Cinderella of the desert.

DR. BLAZER TO TESTIFY IN HIS OWN DEFENSE TODAY

LITTLETON, Colo., Nov. 8.—(A. P.)—Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer aged country physician, on his own volition will testify tomorrow in his defense in his trial for murder because he killed his 34 year old "child woman" daughter, Hazel.

She was found poisoned in his home February 24, and the death was explained in a letter by Dr. Blazer, saying "I do not want to see her alive to be a burden on my family after my death."

Against the wishes of his counsel, the physician, for whom a defense of insanity is being raised, will take the stand. Chief Defense Counsel Mowry announced him as the first witness offered when th atrial is resumed tomorrow.

His testimony, it was indicated, will relate the lifelong care and devotion which he gave his imbecile daughter, described in statements as the "human husk without a soul." Dr. Blazer also may tell of the effects of the attacks of petit mal, a form of epilepsy, which he is trying to prove resulted in the mental unbalance that led him to slay his daughter.

Dr. Blazer believes that the "child-woman" daughter, according to Attorney Mowry, had a soul.

HOW QUEEN OF ENGLAND RETAINS MAID SERVANTS

LONDON, Nov. 8. (AP)—Queen Mary, famous for her domesticity, has let the cat out of the bag as to how she manages the various palaces with but very few changes of maid servants.

One of the very first things the royal mistress does when a new maid arrives is to start a bank account for her. Friends of the royal household consider the queen as an example for all mistresses where her maid servants are concerned, and there are some 30 or 40 of them.

Judging the queen purely as a woman, her friends aver, she would never be likely to come up against the servant problem as encountered by most persons owing to her thorough understanding of human nature. The queen knows all her maids by their names and takes a personal interest in them, and once the bankbook is in the hands of a maid she is encouraged in every way to make the savings grow as rapidly as possible.

ACADEMY LOSES HARD FOUGHT GAME TO BULKELEY THROUGH BIG PENALTIES

Playing with every break of the game against them the Academy went down in defeat before Bulkeley in what was one of the hardest fought games between these two rivals in a number of years. Both of the Academy touchdowns came in the second period. The first coming after a series of line plunges. When with the ball on Bulkeley's two yard line Pheno Tombari was sent over for the first score of the game. The second touchdown was made after Norm Courbois made a beautiful run of sixty-five yards through a field strewn with Bulkeley players. Courbois failed to kick either goal.

Bulkeley's first score was made by "Pip" Gray in the early minutes of the third quarter when after receiving Collins' long forward he raced sixty yards for a touchdown. Collins scored the second touchdown of the game after his teammates had brought the ball from midfield to the one yard line, assisted by abundant help from the three head officials of the game who took every opportunity to advance the ball as far into Academy territory as was possible. Gray missed the first goal by yards but Marshall was able to send the ball over for the winning point on the second.

The following is the game play by play:

First Quarter

Gray kicked off to Courbois who ran the ball forward ten yards before being downed. C. Brewer on a run around left tackle made three yards. Academy off side, five yards penalty. Tombari punted to Divine who was downed in his tracks, Sullivan on a center rush.

Second Quarter

E. Brewer eight yards through center and E. Brewer one yard through tackle. Tombari took the ball across the Bulkeley's line for the Academy's first touchdown, Courbois missed the goal.

Gray kicked off to Courbois. Tombari went around right end for thirteen yards and first down. The two Brewer brothers made four yards on line plunges. Courbois went around right end for fourteen yards. Tombari threw a pretty forward to E. Brewer for a gain of six yards. Academy penalized twenty yards for pushing. Tombari fumbled and Davis fell on the ball. Collins was unable to gain and Menghe who took the ball on the next play made five yards. Collins again failed to make any gain, Gray kicked and the ball went off side on the N. F. A. thirty five yard line. Tombari made five yards on the first play and on the next Courbois broke away for a sixty yard run and a touchdown that was one of the biggest thrills of the game. He failed to kick the goal. Gray kicked off to Courbois who ran the ball forward fifteen yards before being downed. Tombari on two runs around the right side of the line made eight yards. Academy penalized fifteen yards for clipping. Tombari punted to Divine and on the next play Menghe ran the ball forward five yards. Collins on the next three plays lost six yards. Williams went through the line for two yards, Academy penalized five yards for having the backfield in motion. On the next play on bad pass the Academy lost twelve yards. Williams punted to Sullivan who was downed on his tracks. Collins threw a forward to Sullivan for a gain of four yards Bulkeley penalized fifteen yards for pushing. Gray punted and the ball went off side gained three yards. Collins went off right tackle for two more yards On the next play Collins again carried the ball and this time made a gain of twenty yards and first down. Sullivan failed to gain on an attempted rush through the center of the line. Collins made three yards on a run ——— right tackle. Collins again carried the ball this time around right end for two yards. Gray was brought back from the line and tried to kick a field goal but the ball barely went over the line of scrimmage. N. F. A. ball, first down. Tombari and C. Brewer on two plays around the right side of the line made seven yards. Courbois hit center for two yards and C. Brewer carried the ball over and another first carried the ball over for first down on the next play. Tombari and C. Brewer two end runs made twelve yards and another first down. Radio Ed Brewer on two line rushes made eight yards and Tombari on the following play made first down. Ed Brewer fumbled and Brown of Bulkeley recovered Collins through left tackle for two yards. (Menghe failed to gain on the next play. Collins threw a long forward that Tombari intercepted and ran forward fifteen yards with the ball before being downed. Courbois went around right end for eleven yards. C. Brewer gained one yard on a run around left end. Tombari failed to gain on the next play. Gray broke up and Academy froward. Courbois around left end for four. Bulkeley's ball. Sullivan and Menghe on two line plunges made seven yards and Sullivan again carrying the ball made first down. Bulkeley on the next three plays lost ten yards and on their fourth down Gray kicked to Tombari who ran the ball forward five yards. Tombari and C. Brewer made twwelve yards and first down. Tombari again took the ball for a two yard gain as the quarter ended on the thirty five yard line. Academy penalized five yards for stalling. E. Brewer plunged through center for a gain of two yards as the half ended.

Third Quarter

Tombari kicked off to Donahue who was downed in his tracks. Collins threw a forward to Gray that he raced sixty yards down the field with for a touchdown. Gray missed the goal. Gray kicked off to Tombari. C. Brewer and Tombari on two plunges through the center of the line that netted nine yards. Academy penalized twenty-five yards and Polsky was disqualified on the next play for slugging. Tombari five yards around right end and on the next play Williams punted to Donahue who was downed in his tracks. Collins gained one yard on th efirst play and on the second Sullivan lost five on a fumble that was recovered by a Bulkeley player. On the next two plays Bulkeley gained five yards and on third down Gray punted to the N. F. A. ted yard line where a Bulkeley man fell on it. Williams on a run around aright end made five yards. Williams punted to Gray who fell on it on Bulkeley's twelve yard line. On the following three plays Bulkeley gained two yards. Gray's kick was blocked and Williams fell on it. Courbois and C. Brewer made four yards on the line plunges and Williams on an end run made two more. Williams punted to Divine who was downed in his tracks. Sullivan fumbled and lost ten yards. Collins thre a forward to Gray that gained twenty yards. On the next two plays Bulkeley failed to gain and on the third play Mengle fumbled Collins' pass and Fiddle fell on the ball. On the first three plays C. Brewer and Courbois gained five yards and on last down Williams punted to Mengle. Academy penalized fifteen yards for backing after the signal for a fair catch had been made. The period ended with this play.

On the next four plays Bulkeley lost four yards. The Brewer brothers and Courbois on the next three plays gained six yards. Williams punted to Divine who was downed in his tracks. Collins threw a forward to Marshall that netted four yards and on the next play Collins went around right end for four more yards. Marshall took the ball through the center of the line for first down. Bulkeley on the next five plays brought the ball down to the Academy's one yard line from where Collins went across for the second touchdown for Bulkeley. Marshal kicked the goal. The remainder of the quarter the ball zig-zagged back and forth the center of the field with neither side able to advance far into their opponent's territory.

For the Academy Courbois was the shining star with Tombari, the Brewers, and Bolsky also playing a fine game. Pip Gray and Collins were Bulkeley's best players.

The following are the lineups:

Bulkeley		Academy
Brown	Left End	Sargent
McCue	Left Tackle	Stefans
Donahue	Center	Schwartz
Wilson	Right Guard	Fiddle
Schwartz	Right Tackle	Kramer
Gray	Right End	Marks
Divine	Quarter Back	Courbois
Collins	Left Halfback	C. Brewer
Sullivan	Fullback	E. Brewer
Menghe	Right Halfback	Tombari

Substitutions were: Academy, Connell for Polsky; Murphy for Schwartz; Mounley for Kramer; McCluggage for Marks; Vitliano for C. Brewer. Waters for Sargent; Williams for Tombari, Bulkeley, Rathbone for Lubchansky; Davis for Rathbone.

Officials: Hart brothers. Referee and umpire, Keefe head linesman.

OFFICIALS OF BULKELEY WERE FAR FROM IMPARTIAL

It has never been the policy of the sports editor of The Bulletin to furnish an alibi for the Academy when it lost either in baseball or football but the treatment of the Academy team at the hands of the officials handling the Academy-Bulkeley game at New London Saturday calls for comment.

The Hart boys, umpire and referee, needed only a couple of horses and some six-shooters, to put them in the same category with two other famous brothers that played in the west. They were ably assisted by Mr. Keefe, a graduate of Bulkeley, as head linesman. It was apparently a very difficult job for these three officials to watch more than one team at once and their attention was centered on the Academy team during the entire game. Bulkeley could get away with anything short of murder, but let the Academy team look cross-eyed and there was a penalty. In figuring up the penalties handed out so liberally by the officials the Academy team was set back a total of 295 yards while the few penalties that were grudgingly given to Bulkeley amounted to 40 yards.

The Hart boys may have known the rules of the game but they threw the rule book away on the way to the field and promptly forgot all about it. They made their own rules and those few rules that they did know they twisted grotesquely out of shape so that they were unrecognizable. If Coach Whitney called the attention of the officials to some infraction of the rules he was ordered to the bench. Mr. Keefe was fairly insulting to newspaper men when they asked him questions regarding certain rulings and fine points of the game which they thought he must surely understand.

The Academy drew penalties for clipping, off-side, holding, illegal interference, tackling after a fair catch and many more that only a referee could think of. One of the most unfair penalties was when the Academy was penalized 15 yards for tackling after a fair catch. The Academy had punted and a Bulkeley man signaled for a fair catch. The Academy tacklers held off but when the Bulkeley player started to run with the ball he was tackled. The rule says that the man making a fair catch must not take more than two steps and in this instance he took four or five. At one other time a Bulkeley player made an indistinct signal when the rules say that the signal must be clear.

Between the third and fourth quarters a Bulkeley spectator walked out into the middle of the field and walked the whole length of the field with his arm about the shoulders of a Bulkeley player. The referee and umpire saw it but refused to take any notice of it although the rules call for a penalty of 15 yards of such an offense.

On the other hand Bulkeley was continually off side, but only twice were they penalized. They were penalized twice for holding when it was so open that not a person missed it. In one play the ball was deliberately batted out of Tombari's hands but nothing was said. There were countless other infractions that went unnoticed by the officials. One fan remarked that the most consistent ground gainer for Bulkeley was the referee.

CELTICS OPEN BASKETBALL SEASON WITH VICTORY

The Taftville Celtics resumed their practice on Saturday and showed that they have lost none of their oldtime speed by defeating an All-Star team led by Tommy Coleman, star guard of last year's Army-Navy team, and Tex Borden, who recently arrived home from New York where he played on one of the leading teams in that vicinity, and included many others who started on different teams.

The Celtics have all of last years regulars and have added Pingree who is slated for the center position. The following men will be seen in the Celtics lineup this coming season: Gauthier, Yerrington and Donegan forwards. Pingree, center, Eccleston Phaneuf and Lamothe guards. With this team they think they will take the measures of all the teams in the vicinity.

Any teams wishing games with the Celtics for the coming season which will open on Thanksgiving, kindly get in touch with the manager for they are now scheduling games with any team in Conn. or Rhode Island. For games write Emile Raymond Box 63, Taftville, Conn.

LANE TAKES LEAD IN EASTERN SCORING

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—By scoring a trio of touchdowns against Cornell on Saturday, Lane of Dartmouth went into the lead in the quest for individual scoring honors on the eastern intercollegiate gridiron. Eddie Tryon, Colgate captain, who has held the lead since the opening game of the season, was idle Saturday when Coach Harlow elected to give him a rest for the Syracuse game next Saturday and, as a result Lane passed him.

Lane has amassed 16 touchdowns for a total of 96 points while Tryon's 90 remained constant and he slipped to second place. "Swede" Oberlander, the Dartmouth halfback and running mate of Lane, took third place with 72 points, nosing out Carr of Syracuse. Carr scored the field goal for the Orange Saturday which allowed the Reynold's tribe to tie Ohio Wesleyan. Woerner of Fordham and Borell of Muhlenberg are tied for fifth place with 60 points.

Tulley, Dartmouth end, went into the lead in the race for extra point after touchdown honors when he kicked eight goals following Green touchdowns, bringing his season's total to 58.

YALE COMES THROUGH WITHOUT AN INJURY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—With only one regular on the injured list, the Yale football squad will begin tomorrow a vigorous schedule of preparation for the game with Princeton, in the bowl here next Saturday. The injured man is Guy Richards, regular right guard, whose shoulder injury suffered last week will keep him out of the lineup until the Harvard game.

The Yale coaches returned from Princeton today with reports of the strength shown in the Tiger attack and with plans to bolster up the Yale defense to meet the method of offensive Princeton used so effectively against Harvard.

It was said by the coaches tonight that the game with Maryland Saturday produced the long-sought ice expert, in the person of Jerry Wadsworth whose placement kick from the 45 yard line was Yale's first field goal this season. The game also disclosed, they said that the second team line is decidedly weak, but that the regular blue backfield is a "powerful, versatile and speedy combination which will give her big three rivals plenty of trouble."

NE WHAMPSHIRE HOLD TOP POSITION IN N. E. CONFERENCE

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 8—(A. P.)—In defeating the Connecticut Aggies yesterday, New Hampshire retains its position, along with Massachusetts Aggies, at the top of the heap in the scramble for first honors among the eleven of the New England conference, which includes all New England state colleges with the exception of Vermont.

Only three conference eleven saw action yesterday, Massachusetts Aggies and Rhode Island being idle. New Hampshire defeated Connecticut Aggies 17-3 at Manchester, N. H., in one of the most important and hotly contested conference games of the year, while the University of Maine eleven downed Bowdoin 28-14 at Orono, Me., thereby winning the championship of the Maine state series. Due to an early season cancellation by Stevens Tech, the Massachusetts Aggies had no game yesterday. Rhode Island was idle as they played Bates last Thursday, losing 15-0.

New Hampshire demonstrated its championship qualities in its game with Connecticut by coming from behind in the fourth quarter to score 17 points, and avert what looked like the dashing of its hopes for a conference championship.

AGGIE'S LOSE TO GRANITE STATERS IN HARD BATTLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 7—The Connecticut Aggies were defeated 17-3 here this afternoon by New Hampshire, but not until Coach Dole's fighting team had thrown a genuine scare into the undefeated Granite Staters by leading up to the last period.

A dropkick by Moreland in the second period gave the Aggies a three point lead, which was held until the start of the fourth period when Capt. O'Connor booted one between the uprights of tie the score for his team. An Aggie fumble on the Connecticut fifteen yard stripe paved the way for the first New Hampshire touchdown, and the second came after Davis of New Hampshire ran back a punt to the Aggie seven yard stripe, following which the ball was carried over on line plunges.

Although defeated, the Aggies staged a great fight throughout the sixty minutes of gruelling play, and following the contest Coach Dole stated that his team had played their best game of the season. The work of Connecticut's line was outstanding, turning back the onslaught of New Hampshire's heavy backs whenever they threatened to score.

HARTFORD BLUES WIN CLOSE GAME FROM JEFFS

HARTFORD, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—The Hartford Blues, formerly George Mulligan's Waterbury Blues, state professional football champions, defeated the Rorchester Jeffs here this afternoon on a sea of mud and, in a driving rain storm, 8 to 6. It was the second win of the season for the state champions over the heavy national leaguers.

Harry Struhldreher, All-American quarterback with Notre Dame last year, quarterback of the Blues was taken from the field in the first half, suffering from a slight brain concussion received from a hard tackle on the opening play of the game. He was taken to a local hospital but was later released and left for Villa Nova college where he is head coach of the "main liners."

RICKARD UNABLE TO SECURE TITLE BOUTS FOR HIS NEW GARDEN ARENA

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—A modern colosseum, the $5,000,000 realization of a world famous boxing promoter's dream, is soon to open its doors to a sport-hungry metropolis and its rustic arena to a temperamental army of professional ring gladiators whose modest wealth and independence have placed them almost beyond the pale of availability.

It is perhaps a tribute to the personality of Tex Richard that the new Madison Square Garden will be even more liberal than the old in the variety of its sport programs. For the man who 15 years ago began to feed pugilistic avidity for fame and fortune with veritable scoops full of golden fuel at last admits that the financial appetite of ring champions has grown beyond his own generosity and his ability to cultivate the seed of great promotion harvests in the new structure.

Rickard had once harbored the hope that a bigger and better garden would enable him to bring indoors many important championship battles which otherwise would require the use of large outdoor arenas. But confronting Rickard tonight was the jarring fact that only one outstanding title match had ripened for presentation in the new garden. The defending titleholder in this struggle will be Paul Berlenback, a former wrestler rushed into the breach a year ago and pushed desperately forward to the throne from which Mike McTigue was tottering. He will face Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn.

No understanding battles in the other divisions beckon eagerly to the veteran promoter. Although Jess Willard and the heavyweight champions who preceded him could be lured indoors to defend the crown, Jack Dempsey has fixed as his price a prohibitive indoor figure of $1,000,000, and Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons says he will pay Jack that amount next year for fighting Harry Wills in the middle West, despite the intimation last week by Bob Boy Benton that the props would be pulled from under the Michigan City.

Wills, who has turned his back upon Rickard's inducements to fight Gene Tunney or George Godfrey, seems apparently content to confine his winter activities to mild training and the warmer of the Wills domicile.

For have not the financial backers of Fitzsimmons admitted a payment of $50,000 more soon to be poured into the mobile negro. The bars thus appear to be up on the only big heavyweight matches in sight and Rickard in desperation has been talking about bringing back Carpentier and Firpo.

Coming down to the middleweight division, the garden chieftin finds the 158-pound ranks so thinned by the active campaigning of Harry Greb that the immediate future offers him nothing. The Pittsburgh wind mill maimed his best prospect last summer when he nearly knocked out Mickey Walker, although Rickard expressed willingness to promote a return fight until Greb, caught in the high finance undertow, demanded what Tex described as an impossible figure.

As for Walker, the welterweight king appears obsessed with a desire to fight Greb again and turns a deaf ear to the tempting offers for a return joust with Dave Shade, who almost wrested the title from him during the outdoor season and Walker can afford to be independent after adding a $160,000 nurse from the Shade battle to his bulging bank account.

The lightweight division, once a hotbed of fierce competition, has declined in spite of the efforts of the New York boxing board, whose elimination tourney last spring produced as a successor to Benny Leonard's throne a doubtful division leader in Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo, N. Y., no men to fill the shoes of such formidable contenders of yesteryear as Ritchie Mitchell, Charley White, Johnny Dundee, Joe Welling, Pal Moran, Willie Jackson and Lew Tendler, ghosts that constantly haunted Leonard's steps, are in sight.

The featherweight field offers a title struggle in which Louis (Kid) Kaplan will defend his crown next month against Babe Herman, but the edge of the bout has been dulled by the latter's failures to win recently against Joey Celimars and Honey Boy Finnegan, the latter of whom received a decision over the Californian a few nights ago in Boston.

The inactivity of Charley (Phil) Rosenberg among the bantams, a division which has not produced a great champion in years, and the ineligibility here of Fidel Labarba, New flyweight champion, add final strokes to the tumbling of a golden pugilistic castle upon the head of its builder

INTEREST CONTINUES TO GROW IN "Y" GAMES

Some keen competition and close scores are developing an increasing interest in the "Olympic Games" now in progress in the local Y gym, and in addition to the team sport, over a hundred Y'ers are competing strenuously for the trophy cup which is to go to the all-round athletic champion or the individual who scores the most points in the contest. At present W. Mulkins is leading with 289 points closely followed by Fred Handy, Jas. Falcone and George Lambert who have 288, and Robert Burke, D. Angelopolis and George Ranger 286.

MINNESOTA ONLY UNDEFEATED TEAM IN WESTERN CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Saturday's football results, one of them an unexpected defeat of the leaders, put a crimp in the championship standing of three of the teams which heretofore have led the Western Conference title race. Michigan, Iowa and Chicago were beaten under almost unprecedented weather conditions, a blizzard at Iowa and heavy rainstorms at the Chicago and Michigan games.

Minnesota, the only undefeated team of the conference and with only one conference tie on its record, is technically the Big Ten leader tonight. It has yet to play Iowa and Michigan.

The ten mstanding, including points in all games conference and no-conference:

Team	W	L	T	Pts.	O.P.
Minnesota	3	0	1	142	56
Michigan	3	1	0	182	3
Iowa	2	1	0	121	22
Northwestern	2	1	0	58	47
Chicago	2	1	1	90	33
Wisconsin	2	1	1	90	33

WINDHAM SCORES ANOTHER VICTORY OVER MANCHESTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 8—In one of the fastest and best played high school football games to be played this season Windham High School's eleven, undefeated since 1922 issued victorious over the Manchester High school Saturday afternoon by a score of 7 to 0. The game was played on Manchester's home field before a large audience. The first half ended scoreless and both teams returned to the field with a determination to capture the laurels for the day. During the third period Manchester attempted a forward pass. It was intercepted by Tommy Meikle, Windham's ace quarter-back who carried the pigskin to Silktown's 20 yard line. A series of billy-goat bunts into Manchester's line brought the ball over for the only touchdown of the tournament.

DARTMOUTH'S VICTORY OVER CORNELL PUTS TEAM IN LEADING POSITION

NEW WYORK, Nov. 8—The Dartmouth football juggernaught tonight had swept over Cornell as its seventh consecutive victim of the season and was pointing its nose for the mythical eastern championship with an impressive scoring total of 307 points—an average of almost 44 points a game.

Far from its devastating path, a great Yale team, which gave another amazing display of power in the fourth period of a game against Maryland yesterday, still remained a formidable though silent challenger for the title. But the trail of figures left in the wake of the avalanche from the hills of Hanover—evidence of another victorious parade which found Dartmouth the only major team of the Atlantic seaboard unbeaten and untied after a strenuous campaign—left much weight to the position of the big green machine.

There was even indication tonight that Dartmouth might not limit its championship aspirations to the east. The New Hampshire machine, whose overwhelming victory at 42-13 over a hitherto unbeaten Cornell stood forth as the most stunning surprise of the week end, tomorrow begins preparations for an initial invasion of the middle west to face Chicago. The latter team went down to defeat yesterday before Illinois, but unexpected reverses suffered by conference favorites—Michigan and Iowa—will make the result of the game important for purposes of comparison.

Dartmouth smothered the Ithacans under a hail of forward passes, and the fate of the Dobie machine was shared by a Harvard team which went down to its worst defeat since 1919 at the hands of Princeton. The Crimson defense was likewise bewildered by a storm of aerials, with Jake Slagle playing a major role behind the Tiger line which Swede Oberlander filled for Dartmouth.

A Harvard defeat had been expected, but this was a rout which once more brought home for 59,000 spectators in Palmer stadium the fact that "his three" strength cannot be measured until the teams display their full assortment of series plays. The failure of the Tiger to stop Colgate after a tie with the Navy had given but little indication of the real power of Roper's offensive, and instead of easy victory, the strong Yale eleven now looks upon the battle with this fungle threat Saturday as a severe test as well as a contest which will rank in importance with the Dartmouth-Chicago game in determining the eastern championship.

Five elevens fell with the riddled Cornell team from the list of unbeaten eastern aggregations. Holy Cross, toppled unexpectedly by a Fordham team which earned a place through its 17-0 triumph as one of the best outfits of the year, headed the list, the others were Washington & Jefferson, beaten by a blocked kick after outplaying Pittsburgh in the first three periods, Springfield, which lost to Amherst, Dickinson, upset by Gettysburgh and Boston College, stampeded by West Virginia.

Syracuse, tied by Ohio Wesleyan at 3 to 3, was the last undefeated team in the east to be scored upon. The Orange goal line had not previously been tarnished. Colgate shares with Syracuse a record of no defeats and one tie, and these two elevens meet in one of next Saturday's major struggles.

Fordham's unexpectedly easy victory over the conquerors of Harvard was not of the only surprise here. While the maroon backs were ripping gaps in New England visitors' line at the Polo grounds, Columbia, rated earlier in the year as one of the east's best teams, was held to a 6-6 tie by New York University.

Yale, unleashing a powerful second half offensive against Maryland with its regular team after trailing, 14-10, when the rest period arrived, came through as easily as had been forecast, so did Pennsylvania against Haverford, Navy against West Maryland, Georgtown against Lehigh, and Lafayette against Rutgers. Army was extended to show more by Davis-Elkins than the cadets had bargained for, but Penn State, a good defensive team, created no stir by holding Notre Dame to one of the few scoreless ties of this year.

TACKLES OWN PLAYER IN MUDDY MIX-UP

CHICAGO, Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Mud nearly made an unwilling "straiter" of Tim Lowry, Northwestern football captain, hero of the game with Michigan here Saturday.

Lowry in the first few minutes of play, tackled old downed one of his own team who had grabbed a Michigan fumble and was racing for a touchdown. So much dirt covered the Northwestern player's jersey that Lowry was unable to see the purple color.

Later, Lowry had a chance to redeem himself by the strategy of ordering the safety that probably prevented a Michigan victory, after Northwestern had dropkicked a field goal.

EASTERN CONN. BOYS STAR IN AGGIE VICTORY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn. Nov. 7—The Connecticut Aggie Freshman team defeated the Rhode Island eleven here this afternoon in one of the hardest fought games of the season, 14 to 2.

Dixon, Connecticut's fast backfield man, scored two touchdowns in the first quarter, and the Aggies scored a safety in the third quarter. Rhode Island scored a safety from Connecticut in the last quarter for its only score of the game.

Freshman from the eastern part of the state starred through out the game. Hewitt and Usher started at ends and their play was of high order. Gilman, the little guard, played a slashing game at the center of the line. McNamara and Allard got into the game also for a short time.

DRAKE IN DANGEROUS TEAM IN MISSOURI

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 8—(A. P.)—Engineering the biggest upset of the season by defeating Nebraska, the Drake Bulldogs have established themselves as the most dangerous of Missouri Valley conference elevens and threaten Missouri's leadership of the valley.

The victory was Drake's fifth, and only one more conference game remains on its schedule, that with Iowa State two weeks hence. A defeat for Missouri now would place Drake at the head of the valley standings.

SWEDISH MATCH TRUST WILL INVADE ORIENT

Sweden's match trust, supported by American capitol and by a number of American factories is about to invade the Oriental market, hitherto dominated by the Japanese match trust. The Swedish trust has just procured a state monopoly of matches in Poland. It is to pay the Polish government a fixed sum every year and a percentage of the profits, and is to receive in addition a loan of $5,000,000 at 7 per cent. The trust receives the right to build match factories for export trade and a concession of the recently discovered Polish potash beds. The potash will be used partly in the making of matches and partly for export. Matches exported will go chiefly to Asia and Oceania. The Swedish-American trust proposes to build factories in India and gradually to absorb the Hindu market. Its activities are spreading in China, where the Japanese match producers have hitherto been supreme, and it has just bought three factories in Japan.

DELAWARE PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS ARE ACTIVE

Thirty parent-teacher associations in Delaware report a 100 per cent enrollment; that is, every tax-paying family in these communities is represented in the membership. In 292 school districts of the state 201 associations have been organized. Of the rural districts, 81 per cent have local associations. White associations to the number of 117, and 45 colored associations have rounded out four years of continuous activity.

These associations have assisted materially in making school health work a success. In beautifying school grounds, promoting musical education, adding to school libraries, providing school lunches, and in encouraging community interest and cooperation in the work of the schools.—School Life.

Saving Money

Once a story was widely circulated on how the United States government saved money by cutting out the blue stripes on mail bags. No one knew just why they were there except that they always had been. The suggestion contained in the story was taken up by some business firm and was actively advanced by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which issued a booklet containing communications from industrial and commercial concerns telling how they cut the "blue stripes" in their lines. One manufacturer saved $500 by re-grinding and mixing of 4 year's accumulation of inks of various colors and quantities for use in printing office forms. Another concern added one-ton truck to its lacker tonnage truck fleet and saved $6,000 a year by using the new addition for small city jobs. Still another company found it could save $10,000 a year by selling its automobile trucks and contracting for hauling. Another concern found that by giving fountain pens to employes it could save in ink alone ten times the annual investment in fountain pens.

Huntin's Distress Code

A sportsman and big-game hunter, J. Allen Barrett, of Lykens, Pa., has just copyrighted a unique idea for a national code of distress signals for persons who may be lost, injured or in need of assistance while traveling or hunting in sparsely settled regions.

Revolver shots should be used for the signals, but the victim should shout, call or whistle them. The chief requisite would be to have the code widely understood. The code follows:

To signify "lost," two shots quick, wait, one shot; "injured," three shots quick, wait, one shot; "sick," four shots quick, wait, one shot; "help," two shots quick, wait, two shots. Rescuers answer, using the same number of shots, but in reverse order—the shot, wait, two shots quick.

Urges New Czech Debt Payment To United States

M. Pospospil, chairman of the Czecho-Slovak Commission now in Washington, D. C., who has urged a new payment of debts to United States. The little nation will pay 300 millions as a debt total. It will pay $2,000,000 a year for 18 years, with interest at 3% for first 10 years and 3½% thereafter. He has asked for this type of payment as Czecho Slovakia has a lot of internal and external obligations to meet as yet.

157 ITALIAN PAPERS PUBLISHED IN U. S.

One hundred and fifty-seven daily and periodical publications in the Italian language flourish in the United States of America out of 289 in the world outside of Italy, according to statistics published by the Italian department of emigration. In the United States there are nine Italian newspapers, of which three in New York city have a total circulation of 240,000. Italian dailies are published in Philadelphia, San Francisco, Chicago, Boston and Providence. In South America there are 16 Italian daily newspapers, some of which have circulations as high as 20,000. The oldest Italian newspaper outside of Italy is Messagero, Ersilano of Alexandria now nearly 50 years old. Tunis has an Italian daily and various Italian periodicals.

RAPID EXTENSION OF SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION IN KANSAS

Consolidated schools are increasing steadily in Kansas. From 13 in 1920 they have grown to 173 in 1925, serving an area of 4,196 square miles. Enrollment increased in these schools increased from 14,289 in 1920 to 25,-805 for the school year just closed; teachers increased from 590 to 1,269, and busses for the transportation of pupils from 280 to 445. Busses operated by the 173 consolidated schools travel in the aggregate 9,183 miles a day, or an average of about 30 miles for each bus. The average expenditure per school for transportation is $223 per month, or $3.99 per child transported. The average school tax in consolidated school districts is 9.98 mills, against 10.4 mills in cities of the first class, and 14.35 in cities of the second class.

NEW LONDON AUTHORITIES WATCH FOR THREE WEST KINGSTON THUGS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—State and county officers throughout Connecticut are engaged today in an endeavor to apprehend three men, who beat up a man in West Kingston, R. I., this forenoon and after leaving him unconscious in the highway, stole an automobile and came to this city going then to East Lyme, where they abandoned the machine and stole a commercial truck and continued their flight to get out of the state.

The assault was not known about by the local police when the machine conveying the fugitives reached New London and for that reason a watch was not maintained for the automobile and its occupants. When the car reached East Lyme the commercial truck, which is owned by Ruby Parker was observed in the way and it was then that the fugitives abandoned the Rhode Island car and continued their flight in the truck. The abandoned automobile was clear with blood, presumably from the fight that occurred in West Kingston.

The state police throughout the state have been requested to be on the lookout for the fugitives.

Herbert Chessereaux, a sailor, attached to the U. S. S. Tampa, United States Coast Guard sectional base, at the state pier, was this morning arraigned with breach of the peace. He was discharged this afternoon when other charges provided bail of $200 for Chessereaux's appearance in the police court Monday morning.

Chessereaux had been drinking and about noon went to the Canton restaurant, corner of State and Bank streets. After being in the place a short time Chessereaux stood at an open window and observing Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman John Courtney standing on the sidewalk, Chessereaux hurled two table knives at the officers. The knives which were thrown with great force, did not hit either officer, but bounded off the sidewalk and into the street. Officers Cavanaugh and Courtney went to the restaurant and took Chessereaux into custody.

Miss Elsa Bachert of Connecticut avenue, is in New York, having been summoned to that city Saturday because of the serious illness of her uncle Max Bachert.

John Beckman has sold to Edward and Cora Dickinson a house and lot on Vauxhall street.

Ambrose Cassara has sold two parcels of land on the easterly side of Ocean avenue to J. Nicholas Sanz, of West Main. The land, which was acquired Saturday, adjoins other property of Mr. Sanz.

An automobile owned and operated by Walter E. Allen, 130 Hempstead street and a machine owned and driven by Byron C. Vine, 86 Colt street, were in collision Saturday afternoon on Williams street, near Mohegan avenue. Both automobiles were badly damaged.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary B. Woodworth, widow of Nathan A. Woodworth, was held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her residence at Quaker Hill, Waterford, and was attended by a large concourse of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. Frederick Lee, pastor of the Second Congregational church of this city. Relatives acted as bearers. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Miss May G. Brown, 52, wife of Walter Brown of Uncasville, died at Lawa hospital this city, Saturday morning, where she had been under treatment but a short time. Besides her husband, she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Merritt Tooker of Uncasville.

Mrs. Paul Seeley and infant daughter of Groton; Mrs. Ambrose L. Ostby and infant daughter, 43 Granite street; James Betts, 23 Pleasant St.; Lester Lawrence Twiss, Meridian St., Groton, and Mrs. Antone Baldi, Sayles hill, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were dismissed Saturday.

Frank Bemis Jackman, yeoman second class, stationed at the local section base of the United States Coast Guard state pier, will be before Judge Ambler Dolbeare in the police court Monday morning charged with the embezzlement of $310 from Morris Bernstein, proprietor of a Bank street pressing and cleaning establishment, for whom the aforesaid acted as agent at the section base. Jackman's sister, a resident of Massachusetts, arrived in New London this afternoon and she is understood to have conferred with Bernstein relative to her brother's alleged defalcations. At any rate Miss Jackman later went to the state pier and tendered Lieut. Derry the sum which she authorized the officer to deliver to Bernstein conditional upon the charge against Jackman being withdrawn in the police court Monday morning. Jackman is a prisoner in the police station, having been turned over to the civil authorities Saturday afternoon, after having been under military arrest at the base for several days.

James Taylor, 42 Potter street, employed as a laborer, was arrested on Saturday afternoon by Patrolmen George Labour and William Riordan charged by his wife with breach of the peace. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning. Taylor went to his home about 4.30 o'clock and had been drinking. He at once engaged in such a serious altercation with Mrs. Taylor that the latter obtained his arrest.

Joseph McFee, 71 Blackhall street, was taken into custody Saturday afternoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with breach of the peace by James Banning, of the same address. He was liberated later when Mrs. Lizzie Lazarow qualified on McFee's bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning. McFee, who resides in a tenement over that occupied by Banning, went to the Blackhall street house and a short time later engaged in a quarrel with Banning.

Automobile thieves were busy in New London Saturday night and this forenoon, for two machines were stolen, but one of them was recovered during today. John J. Donovan, of Montville, operates a Chevrolet coupe to New London Saturday night and parked the car, which is owned by John Hutto, also of Montville, on Meridian street, while Donovan attended a playhouse. When Donovan returned to where he had left the automobile he found that it had been stolen.

Donovan reported the theft to the police and this afternoon the car was found damaged alongside the highway in Montville within a short distance of the Hutto home. It is believed that an acquaintance of Hutto recognized the car parked there and drove it away, only to abandon it a short distance from the home of the owner.

The other car stolen is that of Tony Perry of Waterford. Perry operated the machine, a new Ford, to this city this forenoon and parked it on Tilley street. While he absented himself, the thief entered the machine and drove away. Perry did not discover the theft of the car until some time later, when he reported his loss to the police.

Hugh McPartland of Ocean avenue, veteran journeyman plumber was operated upon Saturday at Lawrence hospital. His condition is reported today as comfortable. Mr. McPartland suffered an operation recently. The wound did not heal satisfactorily, which necessitated the second operation Saturday.

Councilor Streeter's report on the water supply of the city is still in committee, but a report upon it may come to the council Monday evening. Councilor Streeter is anxious that the city shall be in a position to be forearmed against any shortage and for that reason he has advocated the acquisition of Miller's pond. Unfortunately that body of water has before been declared of little or no use to the city, and it has been reported that the water was not of a quality that would warrant the city buying the property. Councilor Streeter denies the statement made when the city sought to buy some years ago and challenges the accuracy of the statements made to the council by committee. The matter was brought to the city council a week ago and then was referred to committee, which committee is made up of the entire membership of the council, so when the matter is reported out, as it is likely to be Monday, there may be some heated talk about it. Under the new-fangled council proceedings, a matter is referred to one member as a committee and then when the Committee meets, he is composed of all the members of the council.

Four drunks were before the police court Saturday. One of them escaped on a suspended sentense because his case was not of the aggravated sort and he has employment now that he would not have if he was held in jail. The others were fined $5 each and settled. They are strangers here, but they tackled bad rum and a quantity of it. A breach of the peace case that has hung fire a couple of months was nolled. Paul Parcheasky was complained against by his wife, but since then the couple appear to have adjusted their differences and to be abiding in peace in their home.

John Chio is to make a visit to Greece the coming week, leaving New York on Thursday next. He has not been in his native country in many years and will see a new world when he gets there. He has been fairly successful in the new world and will bring only glad tidings to his mother country. He has many relatives there who will give him a cordial welcome. They will find a changed young man when they see him, one who has adapted himself to America and who has not resided here without observing all that was transpiring in the commercial and financial world and whose observations have been to his advantage.

The granite sidewalk in front of the Bacon building on State street is dangerous now, because it has worn smooth and when wet and with substance upon it that comes from the street, tracked on by the feet of pedestrians, it is so slippery that many falls and near-falls have occurred upon it. The granite could be roughened a little by the use of drill and hammer and thus be made safe. Some attention from the city authorities would effect a great improvement.

The city is to have a couple of snow plows in a few days in anticipation of what may come in the way of weather during the months of winter.

Patrolman George McCaskey is confined to his home, Maple avenue suffering from a boil on his foot.

A resident in the vicinity of Walbagh street, Saturday night, observed a blaze on the trestle spanning that street and believing that the trestle was afire communicated his belief to fire headquarters. A still alarm caused Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman and the Ockford Hose company to respond. When the firemen reached the structure they determined that the blaze was a lighted fuse, which had been placed there by the flagman of a train.

Armistice day will undoubtedly pass without being observed in New London, next Wednesday marks the anniversary of the ending of the world war and to date the city fathers have not taken any action whatsoever towards observing the occasion, but there is a possibility that some recognition of the eventful day will be formulated at the regular meeting of the city council to take place Monday night. Governor Trumbull has issued a proclamation calling for a complete cessation of business for two minutes beginning at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning and it is believed that the council will, through Mayor William C. Fox, take cognizance of the proclamation and request New Londoners to suspend activity for two minutes next Wednesday.

Lieutenant Commander H. A. Flanagan, submarine base, has requested the New London police in the future to call the base ambulance for any sailor who might sustain injury or be found ill instead of causing the victim to be sent to Lawrence Memorial Associated or Home Memorial hospitals as has been the case in the past. It is the desire of the navy department to have their personnel treated at the base hospital.

ERNEST R. PERRELLI HURT— HAS NORWICH RELATIVE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9.—Ernest R. Perrelli, about 35, of 29 Truman street, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering from what it is believed will be fatal injuries. Perrelli was run down Saturday evening by an automobile owned and driven by Carl H. Briggs, 848 Main street. At the Lawrence hospital this afternoon it was stated that Perrelli, who is unconscious from a fractured skull, was in a critical condition. Briggs was not arrested, but he was detained at the police station, when he reported the accident, until such time as Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman could interrogate the driver. But little is known of Perrelli at his rooming house, except that he has a cousin, L. Quintilliani in Norwich.

Perrelli was walking along Truman street and at the corner of Bank street attempted to cross the latter street. As he stepped to the highway he did not observe the approaching automobile, and so sudden was Perrelli's appearance in the path of the automobile that Briggs was unable to materially reduce the speed of the machine. Perrelli was struck, his head striking the pavement with such force, as to render him unconscious from the fracture. Briggs had the man transferred to the hospital and then went to the police station and made his report of the accident.

The police have notified the Norwich authorities of the probable fatality and have requested the Norwich police to acquaint Quintilliani of his cousins injuries and condition.

Breed Theater

In Pretty Ladies, the Metro-Goldwyn production now being shown at the Breed theater, Director Monta Bell proves his claim as the peer of any artist of his profession.

Bell has chosen a colorful and human story by Adela Rogers St. Johns and has filmed it in a manner that cannot help exciting the admiration of any audience.

It is a story of a Follies star who had everything except a lover—and her efforts to find a husband. How she got him, lost him and brought him home again, makes the story rich in human interest.

Zasu Pitts is featured and Tom Moore is the erring lover and husband. The remainder of the cast is an assortment of the best names of stage and screen.

There are Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel, Lilyan Tashman, Bernard Randall, George K. Arthur, Paul Ellis, Roy D'Arcy, Helena D'Algy, Lucille LeSueur, Gwendolyn Lee and Dorothy Seastrom.

And—as a final surprise—Bell includes the charming Ann Pennington, star of Ziegfeld Follies, in his galaxy of stars.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

Charles Darnton, for many years dramatic editor of the New York Evening World, wrote the titles for The Iron Horse, the William Fox picture which opens a three run at the Breed theater soon. The production is described as a romantic picture of the east and west in the days of the first, transcontinental railroad. In writing the titles, Mr. Darnton found a wealth of material to draw upon in the romance of the story as well as in historical records of the stirring days of the early west. The Iron Horse was directed by John Ford. George O'Brien, J. Farrell MacDonald and Madge Bellamy have the leading roles in the cast of 30, with 4,000 extras, including a regiment of soldiers, three tribes of Indians and 1,000 Chinese. The New York engagement of The Iron Horse during the past made theatrical history at the Lyric theater.

JEWETT CITY

The American Red Cross roll call for membership in the Jewett City chapter starts November 16th in Griswold, Voluntown and Lisbon. It had been planned to start the 12th but circumstances have arisen which prevent. The drive in Jewett City, Pachaug and Lisbon will be made by men in teams of two, to whom sections will be assigned, to be covered before Thanksgiving. The drive will open on the 16th with a supper for the workers given by the committee, in the Baptist church vestry, the use of which has been granted for this purpose. None of the money given for membership dues or any other Red Cross money, will be used for this supper. Red Cross Sunday was observed in every church in the chapters jurisdiction by mention from the desk, and distribution of Red Cross work information. An exhibit has been arranged in one of the Jewett City Trust Co. windows, which shows one branch of work done by members of this chapter. In the center is a realistic scene of a room in a government hospital. This is surrounded by sweaters which have been knitted, a part of the quota of seventeen assigned the chapter, and which are to be sent to disabled veterans in the New Haven hospital. Recently, another branch of the chapter's work was seen in one of Finn Bros.' windows—Christmas bags, which have now been shipped to headquarters to be sent to service men away from home. The chapter also stands back of the sum of five hundred dollars towards the support of a district nurse, if the money is needed.

The annual Christmas fair under the auspices of the Congregational Ladies' society, Mrs. E. A. Faust president, was held in the church vestry Friday evening. Seven candy tables in charge of Miss M. A. Burdick, Mrs. Frank Wilcox and Bessie Thompson. The domestic table was in charge of Mrs. S. R. Waters, Mrs. Walter Marshall and Mrs. Walter Richardson. Mrs. Abraham Zegeer, Mrs. G. Keene Gray and Mrs. Norman Parkhurst were at the fancy table. Also slices of pudding made by the pastor found a ready sale. A most novel feature was the grab hand organ, which was propelled about the room and played by Carlotta and Tony her husband, Margretta and Piccola, the children, Mrs. C. D. Wolf. Christine Marshall, Mrs Fred Whalley and Josephine Gibson were dressed for the parts and they made a great hit, especially with the children. A baked bean, meat loaf and potato salad supper was served by Mrs. P. E. Robinson, Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, Mrs. Herbert Gibson, Mrs. E. L. French and Mrs. E. A. Faust; Mrs. E. H. Hiscox was head waiter and the waitresses were Mrs. H. T. Jeffers, Mrs. J. T. Steward, Misses Sadie, Ethel and Bessie Thompson, Gladys and Marion Jeffers, Ethel Fisk, Irene Steward and Bernice Wolf. Earl Robinson was ticket receiver.

Edward A. Faust, Jr., of Yale university and Harold Faust and Carl Orchi of the University of New Hampshire spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Faust.

Miss Beatrice Read was appointed as delegate from the Congregational Sunday-school to attend the state convention in Bridgeport.

The conference of churches is to meet in Plainfield on Thursday instead of Tuesday, as was first planned.

Master Robert Johnston has returned to Hartford after a visit at his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tracy.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Gordon Willis, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gill, Mrs. Harrison, Ada Harrison, Mrs. A. P. Anderson, and John Morgan were received into membership of the Congregational church Sunday morning.

William Montague of Boston spent Sunday with his son, Joseph Montague. He came to purchase the Richard Howard property in Hopeville for his son and his wife to make their home.

COLUMBIA

The following officers were elected to serve Columbia Grange for the coming year, at the meeting held on Wednesday evening: Master, Howard Squier; overseer, Lawrence Hutchins; lecturer, Mrs. Lillian Rice; steward, Richard Dimon; assistant steward, Stanley Field; chaplain, Mrs. Cora Hutchins; treasurer, William Wolff; secretary, Mrs. Alice Hunt; Ceres, Miss Margaret Hutchins; Pomona, Miss Lila Seeley; Flora, Miss Harie Field; lady assistant steward, Miss Marion Clough.

It was voted to empower the lecturer to appoint a committee to assist her in her duties and that the grange make a present of $5 each to the lecturer and the secretary as a slight token of appreciation of their services. It was also voted to accept the invitation of Echo Grange of Mansfield to visit them on Nov. 24th and furnish programme.

Harvey Collins has been spending several days in New York Mrs. Howard Stanley of Andover is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hutchins of Chestnut Hill.

The town schools were closed on Friday for visiting day. The teachers went to Hebron, where a meeting was held.

Those people who have wired their homes and had their meters installed were agreeably surprised on Thursday afternoon when the power was turned on. During the evening it was easy to tell from the outside those having the service, as the houses were lit up like a Christmas tree in celebration of the arrival of a long wanted convenience.

Mrs. Jasper Buell gave a shower on Thursday evening at her home in the West St. district in honor of Miss Helen Brown, who is to be married to Percy Carver. Twenty-two friends were present. Miss Brown received many beautiful gifts. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Mary Harver and Miss Frances Harvey of Windsor were in town on Thursday, calling on friends.

WESTMINSTER

For two years the superintendent of Westminster church school has offered, on certain conditions of attendance and deportment solid gold pins with white enameled letterins. Three first year emblems were presented at morning worship Sunday.

The communion of the Lord's supper was also observed in connection with the service.

Westminster was represented at the State Association of Congregational churches by the pastor the delegates being unable to go.

Frank S. Linnell, Mrs. Moses A. Linnell and Mr. Frank Linnell, son of the latter, were in town this week with the representative of a fire insurance co. which has satisfactorily adjusted and paid the insurance on Mr. Linnell's buildings and furnishings, destroyed by fire Oct. 14th.

A wreath was lately placed on the grave of O. O. Palmer by members of the camp bearing his name.

Buell Union, Canterbury W. C. T. U., has the next regular meeting with Mrs. Clinton Frink, Wed. Nov. 11 at 2 P. M. Although this is Armistice day it is not expected to affect the attendance.

Several local younger woods men worked day and night several days to deliver a large order by midnight of Oct. 31st.

Miss Bonita Dusenberri formerly of Westminster, now employed in New York, is spending a vacation with her many friends in this region and making Lawton Inn her headquarters.

A good number attended the Hallowe'en frolic at the new parsonage last Thursday evening, some coming in costume. The parlor was gayly decorated and various stunts with fortunes told in several ways by Miss Dusenberri filled the program, some new features being introduced.

Some mask-head chocolate frosted cookies sent by Mrs. Charles Barstow, were especially enjoyed with doughtnuts, cake, cookies, etc.

Another very nice time in the Hallowe'en lines is reported held at the Kaylor home, Raymond district, with guests from several places and abundance of fun and good cheer.

Denmark's Orchard Island

Falster is one of the Danish islands in the Baltic, which is known as "the orchard of Denmark." It is flat, well watered and richly wooded. Its chief products are hemp, corn, sugar beets, hops, cattle, honey and wax. Its capital is Nykjobing, and the population is 37,000.

Child's Harmless Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

When a child is constipated, has stomach-ache, feverish breath, coated tongue, sour stomach, or diarrhea, a teaspoonful of genuine "California Fig Syrup" promptly moves the poisons, gases, bile, souring food and waste right out of the little bowels. No matter what ails your little one, Baby loves this delicious taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has full directions for infants and children plainly printed on bottle. Always say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Tuesday, Nov. 17, 1925, at 1 o'clock, P. M. sharp (rain or shine). By order of the owner we will sell at public sale on the above date the ice harvesting plant now owned and operated by Mr. Frank A. Evans and located at the southern extremity of the Main St. in the Village and Town of Plainfield, Conn., which is on the state highway leading from New London, Conn., to Worcester, Mass. The property to be sold represents an original investment of $10,000 and consists of 9 acres of land, 5 acres of which is flowed by a never failing ice pond, 2 nearly new, up-to-date ice houses built with the best of available material, size 60x40 ft., and 20 feet high, equipped with endless chain planer and new 10 horse power electric motor. (Private electric line.) The retail end of the business commands a yearly supply of approximately 2,800 tons of ice all sold to the best of customers and the route starts across the highway from the house (No competition.)
Terms: $500 in cash immediately after the sale at which time further conditions will be given. This is a high class proposition. The location is ideal, and is being sold solely on account of ill health. Don't over look it! Immediately after the above sale the following property will be sold: 1 first class Hudson Super Six sedan like new, 3 ice wagons, 1 team wagon, 1 pair of good mules, pair of harnesses, ice plows, saws, pike poles, chisels, etc.
Sale rain or shine.
FRANK A. EVANS.

POETRY

EARTH'S RESTING-TIME

"While the Earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease. "Genesis, 8:22.

The earth hath borne the burden once again;
The tree, its fruit; the field, its golden grain;
The flow'rs have shed their fragrance, sweet and rare,
And charged us with their beauty everywhere.

The harvesters are reaping far and wide;
And rich the fruitage seen on every side;
The birds are flocking to a sunnier clime,
As comes to us, once more, Earth's resting-time.

The prudent squirrel stores his nuts with speed,
Lest he should fail to fill the winter's need;
The wood-buck burrows deep, right busily,
That he may sleep in calm tranquility.

All Nature gently whispers, "Summer's gone!"
But Autumn comes, with glory all her own;
The changing trees are gorgeous in their dress;
They crown the year with matchless loveliness.

And now the leaves are dropping softly down;
And now the fields are looking bare and brown;
Fair summer days! with half regret we part:
But greet thee, Autumn, with a gladsome heart.

"Earth's resting-time!" Ah! yes; 'tis but a rest:
Sweetly doth Nature sleep within Earth's breast;
And from the frost and snow of winter's sway,
God's hand will bring Earth's resurrection day.

—By JENNIE WILSON-HOWELL

IN THE BEGINNING

When sunshine met the wave,
Then love was born;
Then Venus rose to save
A world forlorn.

For the light a thousand wings
Of joy unfurled.
And bound with golden rings
The key world.

And color flamed the earth,
With glad desire,
Till life sprang to the birth,
Fire answering fire.

And so the world awoke,
And all was done,
When bound with golden rings
Under the sun.

—HARRIET MONROE.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Jessica—I can't marry you, but I'll be a sister to you.
Jack—Be a halfsister. It's cheaper.
She—Have you spoken to father yet?
He—Yes I—er—said "Good evening" when I passed him in the hall.—Tit-Bits.

You don't love me any more. I used to be all the world to you once!
Yes—but I have got better in geography since!—Stockholm Casper.

It's dangerous to make love to another man's wife; but it's more dangerous to make love to his widow.—University of Toronto Goblin.

And how is your golf game, Bostwick?
Increasing bad, Newvilcher; I'm going from bunk to bunker.—University of Chicago Phoenix.

Jones—A crook tried to sell me a share of fake oil stock for $50 yesterday.
Smith—And you were too wise for him, eh?
John you betcha; I made him give me two shares for my $50.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Black—Why did you trade that car you bragged on so for a new one?
Annishade—Oh, the Smith's got a new one and my wife developed a knock.—Judge.

Two lads went to the manager's office to demand a raise.
They were duly admitted, but both omitted to remove their hats.
The manager glanced up, frowning, and asked: "Well, my lads, and where are your caps?"

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

REVIEW OF STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—With the stock market last week breaking records for breadth and volume of trading, it was fairly evident that a year of unusual business prosperity was being celebrated.

Extra and increased dividends, together with reports of larger industrial and railroad earnings continued to make their appearance, all attesting to the improved financial condition to the large corporations. The prospect of even larger distributions was seen in reports that federal investigations of large surpluses might influence their fortunate possessors to pass than on to stockholders, particularly in view of the proposed surtax reductions promised at the next session of congress.

The actual progress of trade during the week was obscured to some extent by the spectacular activities in the stock market, although several important gains were recorded. The most significant development in the steel industry was the stabilization of prices at a higher level, which, with steadily expanding orders, gave promise of larger earnings for the final quarter of the year. With shipments and incoming orders in October exceeding all previous months this year, production in some districts were advanced to 84 per cent of capacity, with the company announcing plans to expand to ninety per cent. this week. The importance of these developments was recognized in the enormous demand for the steel shares, nearly all of which followed the rise in U. S. Steel to the highest price on record.

Seldom have the motor companies enjoyed such a satisfactory autumn. While the peak of the automobile buying, popularly supposed to come in the spring months, the situation this year has been altered by the restored purchasing power of the agricultural districts, which have celebrated another harvest in good crops by the purchase of new cars and trucks.

Production schedules of several companies for the rest of the year have been advanced to the highest rates in their history. The public's reaction to the improvement in this industry was been expressed in a rise of a billion dollars in the market value of seven leading motor companies whose securities are listed on the New York stock exchange.

Prospective legislation in the forthcoming session of congress, particularly the scheduled reduction in the maximum surtax, is expected to stimulate the flow of capital into industry, because of the moderate levies funds which have hitherto been tied up in tax-exempt securities are almost certain to find their way back to corporation stocks and bonds, and to return once more to productive purposes.

An examination of the week's progress was decidedly encouraging. After the favorable dividends in October, Dun's Review, a new month has opened with a further acceleration of business activity. The forward movement has been steadily gaining momentum, as reports and statistics have demonstrated, and the sustained and healthy advance has strengthened sentiment throughout the country. Expectations of a record holiday trade for which preparations are now being made, are practically general, while the fourth quarter's results in various lines of manufacture, promise to be entirely satisfactory.

Continued car loadings have continued to measure out a vast flow of commodities from producing to consuming channels. Freight traffic for the week ended October 24 amounted to 1,131,459 cars, within 3,000 cars of the record number loaded the last week in August.

TAFTVILLE

A whist party was given Thursday evening by Ponomah council, No. 34, Knights of Columbus at the council rooms on Providence street. There was a large attendance. The ladies prizes were awarded as follows, first, Miss Louise White; second, Mrs. Wilmot J. Malone; consolation, Mrs. John Daley. The gentlemens' prizes went as follows, first, David O'Brien; second, Edward Phalen and consolation, Thomas Phalen.

Among the local members of Nemaud Grotto, Norwich, who attended the grotto ceremonials at New Britain Saturday evening were Charles T. Webster, Alfred Linderson, George N. Beardow, George H. Young, George W. Weller, George W. Weller, Jr., William Hassler, Arthur E. Atkins, Edmund Hindle, John Meyer and Leonard Prentice.

The funerals of Peter Pisarko and Samuel Pakutney, victims of last Wednesday's double tragedy, were held Saturday afternoon from their late homes on School street at 1:30, followed by prayers at the Russian Orthodox Church of St. Nicholas at 2 o'clock. The attendance at the funeral was very large, many coming from out of town. There were many flowers. At the church the bell tolled as the two caskets were taken into the building and placed side by side near the central ikon, while the congregation stood silent with lighted candles in their hands. The prayers of the eastern Orthodox church for the dead were intoned by the rector, Rev. Father Klepetowsky, wearing vestments of black and silver, and the responses were sung by a trio selected from the church choir. The bearers for Mr. Pisarko were Peter Owdy, John Dissanah, Walter Osenenka and Peter Sunonoski and John Belabuschka. Mike Nunadrowski, Frank Baback and George Dlugis acted as bearers for Mr. Pekutney. Burial was in St. Nicholas cemetery at East Great Plain, where Father Klepetowsky read the committal. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker George G. Crank.

The regular monthly meeting of Council Gagnon, No. 208, Union Street Baptiste d'amerique was held Thursday evening with President Joseph C. Marsen in the chair. There was a large attendance and reports of the general convention of the order held at Holyoke, Mass., last month were given by the delegates, Frank Matbieu, Joseph O. Tellier and Joseph C. Marsen. Their report covered the convention fully, including the description of the fine float that district No. 8 had in the parade. It was also reported that, Garde St. Jeanne d'arc of the local council attended the convention and gave an exhibition of drilling and degree work along the line of march of the parade and also at Springdale park. Five hundered delegates were at the convention and about 4,500 visitors. Elise Vezina, well known to local people was again elected grand secretary of the union over his opponent Adolph Robert by a 3 to 1 vote. The convention also fixed the salary of the grand president at $500, that of the secretary, $[illegible] and that of the treasurer, $[illegible]. President Marsen next called attention to the fact that at the December meeting of the council there would be the election of officers for [illegible] and stated he would like to have a large attendance at that meeting.

RHEUMATISM

PASTOR'S ARMISTICE DAY MESSAGE CALLS FOR REAL FIGHT FOR PEACE

Let us dedicate ourselves again to the holy purpose we announced in 1917, to make the world safe for democracy. Let us again put up a real fight for peace. This was the Armistice Day message given Sunday night by Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., at the Central Baptist church. Members of Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion and of Bourigan Post, No. 598, Veterans of Foreign Wars, were numbered in the congregation, being present upon special invitation of Rev. Dr. Pitt. The service opened at 7:30 o'clock with Rev. Dr. Pitt leading. After the usual prayer and song service, the pastor announced that Mrs. Nathan A. Gilman, president of the Bozrah section of the National Council of Jewish Women, would speak briefly on the subject of the world court.

Spoke on World Court

Mrs. Gilman was introduced to the congregation by Max Hanover. She spoke in part as follows:

Friends, guests, and all here assembled, I am delighted to meet you all and very happy to meet with you on this common ground,—dedicated today to the greatest cause on earth, peace.

As a representative of the National Council of Jewish Women, an organization which stands for many high ideals, has a membership of some 52,000 women, having sections all over the United States and Europe, I will say its motto is Faith and Humanity, it functions in eighteen fields of activity. I will just name a few—religion, education, social welfare, civic and communal, peace and arbitration. The committee on peace and arbitration was always more or less active, but when the world court campaign was launched, this committee came to the fore its influence is indeed far reaching, as from coast to coast the gospel is preached in moulding public opinion in favor of the world court. Particularly among our youth the seed must be planted, which will bear in the coming generation, a love for peace and good will to man.

Our representatives have appeared before senate committees, our resolutions sent to President Coolidge to Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the senate and foreign relations committee. In the conference on the cause and cure of war which met at Washington one January, the Council of Jewish Women joined with eight other national women's organizations to discuss the peace question.

When I look back, not quite three years ago, I responded to an appeal for volunteers to enlist their services to the world court movement, those who were willing to work hard were eligible. Having many duties and above all raising a family of seven, God bless them, this would have justified my claiming exemption. But, here, a nation wide movement had started, backed by every civic organization in the country, with its sole aim to abolish war, and to set up a permanent court of international justice, whereby all nations can bring disputes for adjustment. A world court which shall settle our differences without bloodshed, so that the flower of our manhood will no longer have to be sent off to butcher each other in order to settle a dispute. What a noble idea, how it fairly burned itself into my whole soul. This terrible picture came to my mind,—the poor mothers whose beloved sons were torn from them, the widows, the orphans, ten million soldiers killed, the select of our manhood, 13 million dead civilians, 20 million wounded, nine million war orphans, five million war widows, destruction and the horrible aftermath of war. The horror is almost beyond human imagination.

If it needs time and hard persistent work to bring about some measures to prevent the repetition of such horrors and destruction, who is not willing to give it? I challenge them!

I decided to do my bit, I enlisted in the drive for peace, dedicated every spare moment of my life to wage peace. So, in July 27-28, 1923 the first peace campaign, Law Not War, was launched. I can still remember myself making the first pilgrimage to Norwich and surrounding towns; how I felt like a lone sheep. All I had with me then, was this great ideal, and the courage of my convictions and determination to back it up. While the work was pioneer in every respect, I was not discouraged as I knew that it was the planting of a seed which must flourish. Peace posters, letters, personal interviews with editors, committees, and organizations bring this campaign before the public. Here I must pause, to pay my respects to the ministers and the editors for their cooperation. Who knows what it means to bring a new idea to people and try to convince them?

The world court campaign which followed very shortly, entailed a tremendous amount of work. This time we petitioned the president and senators and again we had the co-operation of the press and the pulpit. Circular letters were sent to organizations, personal interviews and meetings were held. Posters and literature were distributed, peace buttons were sold to help finance the work. The petitions with many hundreds of signatures, accompanied by a letter were sent to the president and senators, which were acknowledged. This intensive program was carried out in every state of the union. Now, you can see what united effort will do. This world court campaign proved the most effective stimulant for government action. And the world court would have been passed at our last session of congress, if it had not been for a few hard boiled, irreconcilable senators.

Bear this fact in mind, that with the modern inventions and devices for warfare, civilization cannot survive another conflict. Another war will surely mean the wiping out of our civilization.

You are familiar with the early history of our country then you must concede that the world court is truly an American ideal conceived in love of peace by our forefathers, the builders of this glorious republic. That the world court is the only practical and feasible thing today and is therefore considered the first step in the direction to preserve world peace. As America has led the world in every struggle it is fit and becoming that it should lead the world in this great moral crusade to help abolish war.

The world court question was never as favorable as it looks today. Let us put our shoulders to the wheel and unite in one supreme effort to cause a witness world to our children. And as Victor Hugo once said, "That there is nothing on earth so powerful as an idea whose time has come."

This is really the psycological moment for the world court. Our beloved president is for it. Let us back him up.

The senate will consider the world court question at its session Dec. 17th. Be sure to write to your senators that you favor America's entrance into the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge world court and just as soon as they find that the people are in earnest, they will have to put it across.

I want to tell you right here, that it is up to the people, and if they want the world court they can have it.

It is the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge proposal that now has the support of more than two-thirds of the members of the senate regardless of party. It is the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge proposal that has the president's support as the "most practical" pronosal before the country. It is the Harding-Hughes Coolidge proposal that received the endorsement of both party platforms in 1924. It is the Harding-Hughes-Cbolidge proposal that has been approved overwhelmingly by the peace forces of the nation, as the amazing list of organizations that have endorsed it indicates. It is the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge proposal, and no other, that can pass the senate this winter, and should therefore have the support of every lover of peace who hopes ultimately to outlaw war.

It is my fervent and earnest prayer that the next Armistice Day will see this great moral victory won.

Armistice Day Message

Following Mrs. Gilman's talk, Rev. Dr. Pitt gave his Armistice day message to the congregation. He spoke as follows:

We are on the eve of another Armistice Day and it is fitting that we stop and think. It is good for us to recall that first Armistice day seven years ago, when the world had its first day of rejoicing in more than four years. It is good for us to recall Armistice day of 1921 when the unknown soldier was laid to rest at Arlington cemetery, when President Harding spoke that message that was heard the country over as far away as San Francisco. That day was a solemn, a holy day, when men were called upon to pray.

It is good for us once a year to keep in mind vividly the Great War, and the sacrifices of the war, that we may resolve that when we get the chance we will hit that monster war, hard. it is good for us to recall the spirit of our soldiers. That spirit at its best is seen in a letter like the following. This was from one of our Baptist boys just before he "went west." He was writing what turned out to be his farewell letter to his mother who was a Connecticut girl, Mrs. Andrew MacLeish of Chicago. This in part was what he wrote:

"If I find it necessary to make the supreme sacrifice, always remember this—I am so firmly convinced that the ideals I am going to fight for are right and splendid ideals that I am happy to be able to give so much for them. I could not, I do not, consider myself a man, if I saw these ideals defeated when it lies in my power to defend them. So I have no fears! I have no regrets; I have only to thank God for such a wonderful opportunity to serve him and the world. No, if I must make the supreme sacrifice, I will do it gladly and I will do it bonorably and bravely, as you son should and like that I lay down will be my preparation for the grander, finer life that I shall take up. I shall live. You must not grieve. I shall be supremely happy—so must you—not that I have "gone west" but that I have bought such a wonderful life at so small a price and paid for it so gladly."

Now what was the ideal for which Kenneth MacLeish and fifty thousand other American boys laid down their lives? We all recall the slogans of those war days, "to make the world safe for democracy," "a war to end war," "the fight for peace."

It is good for us to recall those challenging slogans, those high ideals, the noble motives which carried our soldiers to battle and to death. It is good for us to recall those challenging ideals that we may see how far below them we have fallen in the years since the war.

During the seven years since the first Armistice day we have seen the United States represented at the court of St. James in England by a man who told the British that we entered the war to save our skin; we have seen the high ideals of the war made the football of partisan politics; we have seen the attempt to change Armistice day from a day sacred to our soldier dead to a day (defense day) devoted to the preparation for future wars (thank God we had a president who refused to countenance any such change); we have seen congress, notwithstanding the pleadings of the president and secretary of state alienate a friendly nation by its "disregard of international amenities and needless affront of the Japanese government;" we have seen this great nation stand aloof from an association of nations for the interests of world peace notwithstanding the efforts of two presidents and one secretary of state to have the United States become a member of the world court. The one redeeming feature of these seven years was the conference called by President Harding for the reduction of armament. The influence of that conference shows what might have been if the United States had played well her part throughout the seven years.

In calling that conference on disarmament President Harding kept faith with our soldier dead and rightly represented the peace sentiment of the living. In the other counts just mentioned, I hold, that those responsible neither kept faith with the dead nor rightly represented the living.

In proof of this statement let me remind you of the peace sentiment among our citizens of the Jewish race impressively illustrated on this platform tonight. Let me submit now, evidence of the same spirit among the Christians. There will not be time to mention all so I shall select the two or three largest Protestant groups by way of illustration. The Baptists in convention assembled in Milwaukee May 1924 passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, We deplore the recent action of congress which makes an unjust as well as ungracious discrimination against the people of a friendly nation, and while recognising that a careful limitation of our immigration is necessary, we are in accord with the president in his protest to congress against the manner in which the measure was enacted; therefore

Resolved, That we are confident that in its disregard of international amenities and needless affront of the Japanese government, the present law does not represent the sentiment of the Christian people of America.

There is but one Protestant group in the United States larger numerically than the Baptists and that is the Methodists. In even stronger terms they have expressed their disapproval of the way in which the peace sentiment has been ignored by our senate and the eager desire of the Methodist Episcopal church to work for peace and outlaw war.

"Millions of our fellow men have died heroically in "a war to end war." What they undertook must be finished by methods of peace. War is not inevitable. It is the supreme enemy of mankind. Its futility is beyond question. Its continuance is the suicide of civilization. We are determined to outlaw the whole war system.

The patriotism of the Methodist Episcopal church has never been challenged. Neither our motives nor our loyalty must be impugned when we insist on the fulfilment of pledges made to the dead and assert our Christian ideals fo rthe living. Governments which ignore the Christian conscience of men in time of peach, cannot justly claim the lives of men in time of war. Secret diplomacy and political partisanship must not draw men into the delemma of deciding between support of country and loyalty to Christ.

We set ourselves to create organization for peace. Gratefu tuo our government for leadership in the movement toward reduction of armaments and the promotion of tribunals for internation arbitration, we insist upon a still more decided and agressive policy in these directions. We urge the President of the United States to summon another conference of the nations for the more drestic reduction of armaments. We likewise urge upon the senate the immedine entrance of the United States into the permanent court of international justice. The participation of the United States in a league of nations will receive our active aid. We call upon all our people to support for public office men pledged to secure these ends. The ballot and other direct processes of democracy must now be employed in securing a warless world."

The very latest of these resoultions by a great church group was passed by the Congregationalists assembled in convention in Washington last month: Resolved, That the Church of Christ as an institution should not be used as an instrument or agency in the support of war.

Resolved, That we favor a permanent association of the nations for world peace and good-will, the outlawry of war and the settling of all differences between nations by conference, arbitration or by an internation court.

In addition to these denominational groups and to the Federal Council of Churches the American Federation of Labor, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the American Bar Association, the American Legion, the General Federation of Women's clubs, and the National League of Women Voters have all officially urged American membership in the court on the Harding-Hughes Coolidge recommendations.

It is difficult to believe that with all this sentiment in favor of the United States taking her place at the council table of the world that a little group of senators could prevent the matter of the court from coming before the senate for nearly two years but that is what they have done.

Machinery for Peace

When one thinks of the attitude of the senate he is apt to grow discouraged bout the permanent peace of the world. Let us not close, however, without reminding ourselves of the signs of the dawn of a better day throughout the earth. In 1914 Earl Grey tried to stop or at least postpone the war. When he discovered that this was impossible he cried out: "We have everywhere machinery for quick war; nowhere any machinery for quick peace." A few days ago, however, we discovered that we now have some machinery for quick peace. For a time it seemed as if Greece and Bulgaria were starting another conflagration in Europe if not in all the world. Then the league of nations stepped in and called for a cessation of hostilities within 24 hours. What Earl Grey or no one else could do in 1914 the league of nations did in 1925. Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the sons of God.

Something, however, more encouraging than that occurred last month at the Locarno conference. There was accomplished what even the most sanguine felt could not be brought about for many years. There we saw the French and the Germans meeting in friendly fashion. Out of that conference came several treaties. The most important of these is the Rhineland compact which binds France and Germany not to fight again, but to arbitrate or mediate their differences and England and Italy agree to aid either party which is the victim of aggression by the other.

In the cable from Locarno we learned that after the signing of the treaties "the French minister of foreign affairs, Aristide Briand, and the Chancellor of Germany, Hans Luther, walked to the window and stood arm in arm solemnly looking out over the peaceful waters of Lake Maggoire."

So impressed was Mr. Chamberlain of England with what he saw and heard that he broke down as he said:

"I hardly dare add anything to the declaration by Herr Stresemann save the reply which that declaration has drawn from the representative of France. But I wish to associate myself, in the name of my government and my country, with the hopes and wishes expressed at this table. For me also what we have done today is not the end, it is the beginning."

In our country also there are many signs of a better day. I have already spoken of the peace sentiment in favor of some machinery to prevent future wars. President Coolidge in his address to the American Legion summed it up thus: "Our people have had all the war, all the taxation and all the military service that they want." They are conscious that no put us in jeopardy. It is our purpose in put us in jeopardy. It is our purpose in our intercourse with foreign powers to rely not on the strength of our fleets and our armies but on the justice of our cause."

If you ever grow discouraged when you look toward the senate chamber in Washington turn your gaze northward toward Canada and recall the more than 100 years of peace between these two great peoples. Think of 4,000 miles of boundry line without fort or gun or soldier and the Great lakes without an armed cruiser. All this was accomplished during the last 100 years. What may we not expect during the next 100 years?

Let us then take courage on the eve of another Armatice day. Let us dedicate ourselves again to the holy purpose we announced in 1917 to make the world safe for democracy. Let us again put up a real fight for peace. Remeber that the Lord God omnipotent reigneth and he is the God of peace.

PATHOS AND CHALLENGE OF ARMISTICE DAY

At the morning service at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, the pastor, Rev. A. N. Foster, spoke upon The Pathos and the Challenge of Armistice Day, using the text, Luke XIX-42, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong to thy peace! But now are they hid from thine eyes."

In part he said: As Jesus gazed on the fair city of Jerusalem in the distance, he forecast the meaning of the conspiracy which was to crucify him and to spread desolation and woe through the later history. How different such tribulation from the peace which would have followed the adoption of his teachings of good will. Yet, so intent were certain leaders of Jerusalem on violence that they could not see the advantage of peace; the meaning of the advantage of peace was also withheld from the vision of the people. If the policy of conspiracy and violence had not intervened and if the teaching of Jesus had won increasing recognition how different would have been the course of history! If men would only try fully and fairly the gospel of peace and good will without the ready resort to threat and violence, war!

As the Armistice anniversary draws near, memory vividly recalls the lights and shadows of the last decade and the harrowing disappointments stand out with pronounced prominence. Humanity had made such wonderful progress and society seemed to command such vast and marvelous resources, the principle of arbitration was so generally recognised and commended, it seemed impossible that the twentieth century should revert to armed warfare in disputes as earlier centuries had done for over a thousand years. And yet the most terrible of wars suddenly developed as in our very midst and it was accompanied by horrors unknown even to primitive savages. It could not be confined to the remote location of its origin but it involved, like a seething maelstrom, practically all the nations of the world. The war was the logial result of nationalism with its ultimate selfishness: imperialism with its colonial policies; militarism with its brutalities and the alliances of the strong against the weak and the balance of power policies adjusted by rivalry and jealousy.

The treaty of peace—now nearly seven years since—included drastic penalties for the conquered and also a witness for the vision of the future; an attempt to prevent a recurrence of such a terrible calamity as a modern war. Such could be developed only through international agreement and could be only partially successful if the allies failed in accord. Unfortunately at the critical hour of reconstruction America withdrew from her allies and despite resources and location has been most uncertain in her international policies since then. In the wake of such uncertainty and mistrust, as the aftermath of the war, America has suffered the most extensive and dangerous crime wave known among the nations and also witnessed an orgy of extravagance open only to people having much of money and much of this world's goods.

There is pathos in the words of Lieutenant John McCrea, "To you from failing hands we throw the torch. Be yours to lift it high!

"If ye break faith with us who die we shall not sleep; the popples blow in Flanders Field."

There is also challenge in the same words. Pathos for the costly sacrifice of humanity. Challenge that we may see the meaning of the peace to which the world war is entitled. World peace must be had on the wise adjustment of state sovereignty and general federation. The very recent stopping of war between Greece and Bulgaria—long one of the danger spots of the world—by the pronouncement from Geneva is a most valuable illustration of the principle at work. Ten days ago, men said, it can't be done and when it is done, they cynically ask us to it with the powerful nations! Slowly the principle of working peace commcis attention and commands respect and we are a little nearer realizing the "Parliament of man and the Federation of the World." The boys who died at Belleau Wood fought for such federated peace among the nations and blessed are those disciples of humanity who are satisfied with nothing less than such peace.

HELD RELIGIOUS SERVICE AT NORWICH JAIL

At 9:15 Sunday morning representatives of the Y. M. C. A. conducted a religious service at the local jail in the corridor in front of the cells.

Gospel hymns were sung, E. A. Prentice read the first Psalm and solos in a pleasing manner. General secretary Edwin Hill gave the address taking for the texts, "Come now and let us reason together," "God so loved the world," etc. and "Whosoever will may come."

The speaker said in part: We do not come here posing as better men than you are, except that we have tried to let Christ into our lives and evidently you have not yet done so. The greatest problem you have is not how you can get out of jail; not how can you get something to eat, not how to secure clothes to wear; these are incidental things. The great problem of your life is howe to get sin out of your heart and mind. We are admonished to reason together; how can this greatest problem be solved; but in one way, that is to confess your sins to Almighty God and swing open your heart to the Christ, and when you make genuine confession, you immediately meet God's love, for "God so loved that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoever accepts him will be saved". God gave his very best, his son and Jesus was willing to be given. I can understand how one can love another who loves him, but I never can understand how one can love his avowed enemies, and yet God does that very thing, for "we all have sinned" and come short of his glory" and yet he loves us. Jesus hung on the cross, bleeding, suffering, dying for you, and yet us to this time evidently this sacrifice has made no difference to you. You may say there is no hope now, for you are very far away from God, but this is not so, for there is hope as God loves you still. I do not care what crime brought you here, "though your sins be as scarlet" God will save you and change your life if only you will let him do so. There is one door that can be opened from the inside, and that is the door of your heart; Christ will never force an entrance, you must open that door if it is to be opened at all. It is a matter of the will; the question is will you open the door? No matter who you are or what your sin has been, you can never get outside of the "whosoever", for you will recall that God's word says, "Whosoever will come". You do not need to wait until you serve your term in this place or some other before you become a changed man; you can become such this very day, even alone in your cell, you can make your peace with God. Men, let Jesus Christ come into your life before you sleep tonight."

The invitation was given and between fifteen and twenty asked to be remembered in prayer that they might become saved by Christ.

In Charge of Reading Room

During Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Irving L. Hamilton had charge of the reading room of the Otis Library. Because of the storm, there was an unusually large number of visitors, the total being 103.

PIONEER SECRETARY IS SPEAKER AT Y. M. C. A.

Even though the heavy rain prevented many from attending, a good group assembled at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon to listen to what can justly be termed an unusual address by Levi P. Rowland of Detroit, eighty-eight years old. Mr. Rowland is remarkably active and intensely interesting; he was the first general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in America, being secretary at Boston for some seventeen years, after which he was secretary under John Wanamaker in the Philadelphia Y; he was also for some years state secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He told of his long and varied experiences in the work of the association and told especially of his pleasure and joy in personal evangelism through the long years of his service for young men and boys, and these experiences held the closest attention of his audience. Emphasis was placed on the great need of personal workers for Jesus Christ, and this method, said the speaker is most successful in changing the lives of the unsaved; he cited many instances where just an earnest word or a sincere quiet prayer had been used of God in the conversion of souls, many of whom had in turn gone out to win others. Mr. Rowland told of the many calls he had had in recent years to speak in the interests of the Y. M. C. A. and many cases where large amounts of money was to be secured for new "Y" buildings he had been drafted to speak and enthuse the workers. He made a plea for out and out, clean cut lives on the part of those who professed to be Christians, and urged men to keep after the unsaved, in tactful wise ways until they win them to Christ, and not to be daunted the first or the second time, but to continue until the desired result was accomplished.

Hugh Kinder officiated at the piano and Secretary Hill was in charge of the service. Herbert B. Cary offered prayer. The meeting was certainly an impressive one.

Memorializing Members

MITCHELL COURTMARTIAL TO PROCEED WITH EVIDENCE

Court Decided, After Discussion in Secret Session, to Proceed in Accordance With the Plans of the Defense—Opens the Way For Introduction of Evidence on Many Features of the General Aircraft Controversy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—Another bombardment of the administration's aviation policies, accompanied by the spewering of bars to admit testimony intended to justify Colonel William Mitchell's previous published attacks, marked today the opening of his defense before the general court martial trying him on charges specifying conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

From the time the court met until it recessed tonight, the defense had its own way, being over-ruled just once and then on a minor objection. It thrust a 22,000 word statement into the record without opposition, supported the air officer's San Antonio declaration that the war and navy departments were incompetent, criminally negligent and almost treasonable in their conduct of the national defense, and put the first of its witnesses on the stand. The latter were permitted to testify on air service controversy issues.

Repeated objections raised by the prosecution as to the admissability of the witnesses' testimony were rejected by the court, it was only when Representative Frank R. Reid, chief civilian defense counsel, asked Major Charles Spaatz for his opinion of army general staff officers, that the prosecutions' objection was sustained.

The opening statement of the defense, comprising 74 closely typewritten pages, was, in effect a detailed analysis of Colonel Mitchell's San Antonio statements on which the charges against him were based. Every charge he made at that time against the war and navy departments was repeated, amplified and defended on the ground that it was true and could be proved.

As soon as Mr. Reid concluded his opening statement, he sought to show that Colonel Mitchell's charge that officers and agents of the war and navy departments had given congress "incomplete, misleading or false information about aeronautics," was true.

He selected Brigadier General Hugh Drum, one of the assistant chiefs of staff, as his target, and called Major General Amos A. Fries as the first witness to deny the staff officer's statement that it would require about 1,000 bombing planes to carry sufficient bombs to operate effectively against an area the size of the District of Columbia. General Fries said 800 planes carrying 1,000 pounds of gas each would be able effectively to gas an area of that size.

Captain Robert Oldys and Major Carl Spatz of the air service, the other two witnesses called today by the defense, testified in support of their former chief's criticisms of war department control of aviation. Captain Oldys said recommendations sent the department by the air service had not been carried out in many instances. His statement was reiterated by Major Spatz, who went at length into the question of condition of army aviation equipment, planes and personnel, declaring there was a serious shortage in officers and men as well as in machines.

Colonel Mitchell's denunciation of the navy department for its handling of the dirigible Shenandoah and for the PN-9 No. 1 failure, Mr. Reid told the court, was deserved. The PN-9 No. 1 was still missing in the Pacific when the San Antonio statement was issued. These incidents Mr. Reid said, caused the air officer to feel that it was his "overwhelming duty" to make his statements.

"We will prove," Mr. Reid asserted, "that his opinion was not only well founded, but that his statements were true, as a matter of fact."

Numerous alleged aviation deficiencies, some of which were testified to by Major Spatz, were cited by Mr. Reid who said he would prove by evidence, among other things, that:

"All the De Havilland planes now in use have wings that were made in war time, seven or more years ago.

"A total of 1,520 planes is used by the war department in computing the strength of the United States in aircraft, of which 406 are standard and well suited for their purposes, minus 44 awaiting salvage. Two hundred and thirty seven of these were built in war time, seven or more years ago, leaving 162. Thirteen hundred and sixty eight planes are substitutes or obsolete. Twenty two per cent. of army air service planes are fit for service and 50 per cent. of these were made in war time, leaving eleven per cent fit for service, or 200.

"Martin bombers are not fit for war operations.

"Martin bombers are much more likely to crash in a forced landing.

"The De Havilland and "PN" planes in the army air service were built during the war.

"The planes that crashed in the 1924 air races, killing Lieutenant Pierce and Captain Skeel, had been in storage from one to two years and had deteriorated in storage.

"Throughout the whole United States there have never been sufficient pilots in the pursuit group to carry on tactical training.

"The number of officers in the tactical units has never been anywhere up to even peace time requirements.

"The development of tactical aviation has been restarted by the war department by putting air service officers on work not connected with training.

"The pursuit planes in foreign possessions, supposed to be available for use against an enemy, are obsolete compared with the units in the United States.

"There has been no practice whatever in the past two years with 1,100 pound bombs suitable for war purposes.

"There has been no assembling of an air force for tactical exercises in two years and only one assembling since the war in 1921, under Colonel Mitchell.

"In case of war men would have to go to school to learn gunnery.

"The war department refuses to approve recommendations by the army air service for gunnery practice.

"There has been little or no training by observation squadrons in seven years, some men not having flown a plane since the war.

"There are 25 officers short with the tactical units in Hawaii.

"There are 45 officers short with the tactical units in the Philippine Islands.

"There are 54 officers short with the tactical units in Panama.

"There are 30 bombing planes short in the army air service.

"There are 267 planes required for observation work in the army air service and the only planes available for this work are rebuilt planes, seven or more years old.

"There are 83 planes required for the present attack squadrons in the army air service and there is not one single attack plane available, rebuilt observation planes seven or more years old being used for attack purposes."

COMMITTEE WORK ON TAX REDUCTION BILL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(A. P.)—Substantial reductions in the automobile taxes and repeal of many of the miscellaneous levies were tentatively agreed upon today by the house ways and means committee in its preparation of a tax reduction bill.

With only $100,000,000 of the prospective $300,000,000 treasury surplus left to apportion in reductions among these taxes, the committee struck a snag in attempting to comply with the numerous appeals for relief, and after an all-day discussion put over until tomorrow final decision.

None of the tentative changes in rates agreed upon today was announced by Chairman Green pending final disposition of all the rates in the group, but a reduction in the levy on automobile passenger cars from five to three per cent., and repeal of the taxes on automobile trucks, tires and accessories were understood to have been approved.

Tentative repeal of the following taxes were reported: cameras and lenses, photographic films and plates, jewelry, firearms, (except pistols), and shells; art works, yachts and motor boats, and some of the occupational taxes such as those applying on cotton and grain exchange brokers.

Reduction in the levies on alcohol and cigars also were favored in the temporary program. The former would be cut in half. From $2.20 a proof gallon to $1.10. The taxes on admissions and dues were not taken up.

Changes thus approved would account for more than the $100,000,000 available for tax reductions in the excise group, if the $200,000,000 sum set by the treasury and tentatively accepted by the committee is to be rigidly observed On this point, however, considerable difference of opinion has developed, and Chairman Green declared that he did not think the government would face a deficit next year if the total reduction should amount to $250,000,000. Other committee members expressed the opinion that a reduction close to this figure finally would be decided upon.

There have been some indications of a move within the committee to bring up again the income rate schedules revised last week, but no definite sign of a break in the ranks which worked out these agreements on a non-partisan basis, has appeared.

Upon the conclusion of revision of the excise schedules tomorrow, Chairman Green plans to adjourn the committee for a few days to permit subcommittees to work out definite provisions of the income surtax and estate schedules. He has found no reason to change his view that the bill will be completed before the end of the month.

STILL WORKING ON THE C. L. CLARK MURDER MYSTERY

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 9.—(A. P.)—Mrs. Nelson Kent, mother-in-law of William J. Clark, who was murdered with a stone mason's hammer as he entered the garage at his home in Hillside early last Tuesday morning, was this afternoon subjected to four hours of questioning by Union county authorities.

When finally dismissed, Prosecutor David announced that "nothing could be said," concerning the case at the present time. He declined to intimate the nature or result of the questioning.

Mrs. Kent was accompanied to the prosecutor's office by her husband, Nelson Kent, and by her daughter, Mrs. Priscilla Clark, widow of the murdered man.

Mrs. Kent was sitting in the Clark automobile with her daughter when Clark staggered from the garage on Tuesday, with the side of his head battered in by blows from the hammer. He died a few hours later, unable to tell who struck him.

Aside from the questioning of Mrs. Kent the outstanding development of the case today was an arrangement made by the attorney of Joseph Cowen, the man who is being held charged with Clark's murder, by which the hearing on a writ of habeas corpus brought for him will be held on Thursday instead of Wednesday, as originally dated. The change was made, Mr. McGeehan, Cowen's attorney said, because Wednesday was a legal holiday.

CHARGED WITH STEALING GOODS FROM ARMY BASE

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Sergeant Albert Harris, the eighth man to be arrested in the past week charged with stealing goods from the army base in South Boston, was arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner Jenney, charged with the theft of three bales of stockings, valued at $646 He pleaded not guilty and was committed to jail pending a hearing.

Several thousand dollars' worth of field equipment, clothing and other stores have been stolen within the last few months, army base officials said.

NINE BANDITS IN NEWARK GOT GOLD AND PLATINUM

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 9—(A. P.)—Gold and platinum valued at from $25,000 to $30,000 was reported stolen from the William H. Taylor Jewelry factory tonight, by nine men, who forced girl employes to sit on the floor until they had made their escape.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

North Atlantic Conference

PARIS, Nov. 9—The North Atlantic conference, composed of representatives of the trans-Atlantic Steamship Lines, opened here today, and will be held a close secret until the minute can be voted by the lines, perhaps a fortnight hence.

Duel Between Journalists

GRASSE, Alpes-Martimes Department, France, Nov. 9—A pistol duel took place today between two journalists. They were Charles Basset, former prefect of the Mavenne Department and editor-inchief of Proxress Republicain, and Ernest Cresp, political director of La Voix du Peuple. Shots were exchanged twice without effect, after which the adversaries effected a reconciliation on the field of honor. The duel was the outgrowth of a political controversy in the press.

TRIAL OF RHINELANDER MARRIAGE ANNULMENT CASE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Before a jury of married men, none of whom has children, the suit of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, against his wife, Mrs. Alice Beatrice Jones Rhinelander, for annulment of their marriage on the ground that she failed before their marriage to inform him of her alleged negro blood, opened today before Judge Morchauser.

Husband and wife did not glance at each other as the trial opened. Young Rhinelander, scion of an old New York family, appeared in the courtroom only after the jurymen had been selected, and as he entered he did not look towards his wife. Mrs. Rhinelander, daughter of a New Rochelle taxicab driver, sat between her parents wearing a tight-fitting coat and smiling as she fingered a bright satin scarf which hung from her neck.

Summing up the plaintiff's case, former Supreme Court Justice Mills, of counsel for Rhinelander, began by saying that in view of the birth records of Mrs. Rhinelander's parentage, "there is no doubt that our allegation that she is of colored blood is true, and I challenge any proof of the contrary."

He asserted that young Rhinelander is suffering and has suffered from a physical infirmity which affects his speech and mind, "He is practically tongue tied," he stated, "and there are times when he can hardly get the words out."

Because of these speech difficulties, Mr. Mills continued, women of Mr. Rhinelander's "own kind" never smiled upon him. Counsel for Rhinelander said he would show that prior to their marriage in October, 1924, the two registered as man and wife in a New York hotel on different occasions, living together there at one time for five days and at another for a week.

Mr. Mills read letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Rhinelander before the marriage in which references were made to the times the couple spent together in the New York hotel.

Young Rhinelander did not object to giving up his high social position in marrying Miss Jones, Mr. Mills asserted, but he could not forgive the fact that she was of negro blood. When Mr. Mills summary of the case concluded the trial was adjourned until tomorrow.

DISCORD IN DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE

HARTFORD, Nov. 9.—(A. P.)—Thomas J. Spellacy declared tonight that he would recommend that the meeting of the democratic state central committee to be held in New Haven, Thursday be thrown open to the public. Chairman Edward M. Yeomans is to resign from that position on the committee at the meeting and a successor is to be elected. In the effort of anti-organization democrats to prevent the election of Mayor David E. FitsGerald, of New Haven as chairman, considerable of the party's "dirty linen" is to be washed, according to present indications, and a lively meeting is anticipated.

There were rumors today that National Committeeman Homer S. Cummings might be expected to resign as such at Thursday's meeting, in which event, it is thought, Mr. Spellacy might be elected to succeed him. Mr. Spellacy said tonight that he did not know anything about Mr. Cummings' intentions with prospect to resigning and that he would accept the place as his successor, in the event that he did resign, only if it were agreeable to the party generally.

The resignation of Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees of Greenwich as a member of the state central committee from the twenty-seventh district, the resignation of Miss Adele D. Murray, of Berlin as a member from the fifth district and the death of Charles J. Dillon, in the third district have created vacancies that will be filled at the meeting. Mr. Dillon's son, James C. E. Dillon, is mentioned to succeed his father as state central committeeman.

SIX JURORS SELECTED FOR THE MACRI MURDER TRIAL

LITCHFIELD, Conn. Nov. 9. (AP)—Although the largest number of veniremen examined in one day so far in the second Olympia Macri trial for killing John Ragnano were interrogated today, only one juror was selected.

Twenty-three veniremen, five more than the 18 questioned last Thursday the most examined in one day last week, occupied the witness stand today. Fifteen were excused by the court, four were excused by the defense upon peremptory challenges and three challenged by the state.

The juror accepted today is Edward A. Anderson, 46, Woodbury, farmer. He is married and has three boys. Anderson was the 71st venireman called and the thirteenth examined today.

His selection corresponds to that of Irving A. Andrew, of Orange, at the first trial in New Haven last spring when the jury deadlocked, 11 standing for acquittal against Andrew, who stood for conviction. Andrew was the sixth selected. The retrial opened here in Litchfield county superior court last Tuesday.

PURCHASES OF ADDITIONS TO TUNXIS STATE FOREST

HARTFORD Nov. 9—(A. P.)—New purchases totalling 1,000 acres have been made in East and West Hartland as additions to the Tunxis state forest by the commission on wild life and forestry. Representative Elliot B. Bronson, special agent for the commission, announced today. He has also secured 436 acres for the People's forest in Barkhamsted making the total area now 1,170 acres. With the new additions, the present area of the Tunxis forest is 2,000 acres. All purchases at the people's forest were with funds raised by popular subscription through the Connecticut Forestry association.

To Woo Newspaper Men on Water Wagon

That to Be One of the Next Great Aims of the Prohibition Movement — Politicians, Too.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9—(A. P.)—The next great aims of the prohibition movement, said Representative W. D. Upshaw of Georgia, in an address to the Anti-Saloon League convention today, should be to get the newspaper men and the politicians of the country on the water wagon. He was followed by Representative Yates of Illinois and Cooper of Ohio, and Senator William McKinley for Illinois, in another series of counsels from public officials to dry workers.

"I am opposed to a campaign for law enforcement," said Representative Upshaw, "but we need a campaign for law observance. And we should first institute a campaign of moral suasion on a large and influential section of the Metropolitan press, to get all the editors and correspondents on the water wagon.

"Many of these newspaper men went overseas to uphold the constitution and the flag and during the war would have organized a posse to handle a German spy who was distributing seditious literature.

"But they will unblushingly defend and befriend a bootlegger who is a conscienceless enemy of the same constitution and flag.

"The second great step is to put all politicians on the water wagon. The personnel of congress is overwhelmingly dry, both in practice and in precept.

"But I am in favor of vigorous policy from the White House down that will break every bottle in official America and send unpatriotic and dangerous politicians to the scrap heap."

THREE MEN CHARGED WITH CONSPIRING TO MURDER

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—Three men were arrested today charged with conspiring to murder Leo Weiner of the firm of Fleier Brothers & Weiner. One of the men arrested was Nathan Fleier, said by others to have been the instigator of the conspiracy. The alleged conspiracy was uncovered accidently when police picked up two young men loitering outside the Seventh avenue building where the Fleier and Weiner firm was located. Search of these men revealed that they each carried a loaded revolver and questioning elicited the information that they had been hired by Fleier to murder Weiner. They said at the time they were arrested they were waiting for Weiner to come out of the building so that they could carry out their plan. Acting on this information police sought out Fleier and arrested him.

The two alleged gunmen were Albert Wagner, 19, and William Levine 20.

Police said the gunmen told them Nathan Fleier who is 20 years old, was dismissed from his employment by Weiner last Friday. That evening he approached them in a poolroom owned by "Kidd" dropped before he was killed by rival gunmen and now operated by the latter's brother, and arranged with them to kill Leo Weiner.

CAPTAIN ANTON HEINEN RELEASED IN $2,000 BAIL

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Nov. 9—Captain Anton Heinen of Lakehurst naval station was released in $2,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter today after his car struck and killed Thomas Chamberlain 75, a trolley motorman. He waived examination until December 22.

Chamberlain stepped from his car to turna switch light and ran into the path of Heinen's sedan in which Heinen and Mrs. Heinen were proceeding toward Camden. Heinen surrendered at once and awaited the action of the coroner.

"DUTCH" ANDERSON WAS CARRYING STOLEN WATCH

MUSKEGON, Mich., Nov. 9—The late George (Dutch) Anderson, killed here a week ago Saturday by Detective Charles Hammond, was connected with the $10,000 Littlefield jewelry store robbery at Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 19, 1924.

A gold watch which Anderson carried, was identified today as part of the plunder taken by two masked men, now believed to have been Anderson and Charles (One Arm) Wolfe.

ATTACKS MADE UPON ITALIANS IN JUGOSLAVIA

VIENNA, Nov. 9. (AP)—Anti-Italian demonstrations occurred in many parts of Jugoslavia yesterday, the result of indignation aroused by reports that Fascists last Friday attacked the Jugoslav consulate and the officers of the Slovenian newspaper Edinost at Trieste. In the course of these demonstrations Italian flags were burned and attacks made on Italian consulates and private Italian citizens.

GOV. PINCHOT SEEKS CONFERENCE WITH LEADERS OF COAL MINERS AND OPERATORS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 9—Governor Pinchot tonight sent letters to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Major W. W. Inglis, chairman of the anthracite operators wage committee, asking that they meet him separately this week, to discuss the suspension of anthracite coal miners. The governor would make no comment on the proposed conferences other than to say they had to do with the anthracite situation and he declined to discuss the content of the letters.

The governor said he may see Mr. Lewis in Philadelphia, Wednesday and if not then soon thereafter in Harrisburg. The conference with Major Inglis is scheduled for Harrisburg on Thursday.

There will be the second conferences for the governor with the two leaders of the miners and operators since the suspension started September 1. The first conferences were held in Milford where the governor saw Major Inglis, September 12, and Mr. Lewis September 14. At these meetings both the miners and operators sides of the controversy were laid before him. None of the conferees would discuss the results of the meetings, agreeing that what transpired was to be held confidential.

Two weeks ago the Rev. John J. Curran, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, Wilkesbarre, held a brief conference here with the governor on the situation. In several statements since then Father Curran has expressed belief that the suspension would end soon. Father Curran has been active in the adjustments of differences in the hard coal region on several previous occasions.

Saturday there was made public a letter in New York from Governor Pinchot in reply to a telegram from Major William P. Deegan, foreman of the Bronx grand jury, which is investigating the fuel situation and in which the governor expressed belief that an early settlement of the anthracite suspension would be reached.

The governor has been keeping in touch with the situation through Joseph J. Walsh, secretary of mines.

Constable Shot by An Escaped Convict

George E. Dow Probably Fatally Wounded on the Main Street of Ashland, N. H.

ASHLAND, N. H., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Constable George E. Dow was shot, probably fatally, on the main street here today by Frank George, Alias Fellows, who escaped three weeks ago from the penitentiary at Nashville, Tenn., where he was serving a sentence for robbery.

George, whose father lives in Lancaster, north of here, arrived here several days ago, it was learned, apparently making his way home. Constable Dow learned that he was in town from a doctor to whom George had gone to fill a prescription.

Dow met George in the center of the town here this afternoon and placed him under arrest as a suspicious person. As the officer spoke George drew a revolver and fired before the officer could draw his own weapon. The bullet shattered Dow's hand and lodged in his stomach.

George fled down the street and Dow chased him for several hundred yards before he collapsed. From across the street, Herman Carr, a hunter, fired five shots at George, none of which took effect.

Dow was rushed to the Plymouth Memorial hospital; where doctors began preparations to remove the bullets although they held little hope for his recovery. The fire alarm was sounded here and a posse of armed townsmen was formed to hunt down the fugitive.

George was safely across the fields and into the woods outside the town before the posse gave chase. The men beat through the woods until darkness made further pursuit impossible. Word of the shooting was flashed to city and state police together with George's description. The town selectmen called an emergency meeting to offer a reward of $300 for George's capture, at the same time requesting New England radio stations to broadcast the escaped convict's description.

FRENCH FINANCIERS MAY RESORT TO LOTTERY LOAN

Deadlock Exists Between Premier Painleve and His Majority in the Chamber of Deputies on His Measures For Financial Restoration—Leon Blum, Socialist Leader, Is to Endeavor to Enforce Today a Decisive Vote in the Chamber of Deputies.

PARIS, Nov. 9—(A. P.)—The deadlock between Premier Painleve and his majority in the chamber of deputies on his measures for financial restoration has created a situation closely resembling a cabinet crisis. The issue tonight seems squarely defined between inflation, with a sinking fund commission, and forced refunding of short-term bonds, with a capitol levy as an accompaniment.

Leon Blum, socialist leader, announced that he would tomorrow morning force a decisive vote before the delegations of the different groups of the majority. The finance committee partially forestalled this move today by a vote on counter-proposals presented by Vincent Auriol, socialists, which resulted in a tie, 15 to 15, this being considered a socialist defeat.

The different parties of the chamber discussed the situation this afternoon, while M. Painleve confered with the regents of the Bank of France. All agreed that an early solution must be found, but the opposing conceptions are still far apart. The premier maintains his stand against changes in the principle of his plan while willing to discuss modifications in detail.

The proposed lottery loan is steadily gaining favor, and is supported by such financial authorities as former Premier Francois Marshal and Deputy Georges Bonnefous, many conservative and moderate papers and some radical organs. They advocate a loan with a small rate of interest and daily drawings of prizes. Their reply to accusations of immorality through daily drawings is that it is more immoral to take capital outright than to ask for voluntary subscriptions which would give subscribers a guarantee that they would get back the better part of their investments agyway and a chance to get it all back, or more.

DR. BLAZER TESTIFIED HE DID NOT SLAY HIS DAUGHTER

LITTLETON, Col., Nov. 9—(By the Associated Press)—For fourr long grueelling hours today an old, weather father occupied the witness stand and defended himself against the charge of slaying his 24-year-old daughter, Hazel Blazer, the first born and a helpless cripple and imbecile almost from birth.

When court opened Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer was sworn as a witness and for the major portion of the court day continued his testimony before a crowd.

"I believe in immortality, I believe my daughter had a soul and I did not slay her," the elderly country doctor declared on direct examination by H. W. Spangler, of his staff of defense counsel.

In the fact of cross examination by Prosecuting Attorney Joel E. Stone, Dr. Blazer maintained his composure, although often admitting that he "didn't remember" when confronted with apparently conflicting statements made by himself during the coroner's inquest several months ago and in direct examination today.

Blazer's pleading that his "spells" rendered him unaccountable for his acts, found support in the testimony of Dr. Daniel E. Phillips, professor of psychology at the University of Denver. In response to a series of hypothetical questions, Dr. Phillips declared that he did not believe that Dr. Blazer on the day of the crime was able to "distinguish between right and wrong." Dr. Cyrus H. Pershing, Denver alienist, made a similar answer.

WILL DEFER LEGISLATION ON PERMANENT POSTAL RATES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(A. P.)—Recommendations to congress on permanent postal rate legislation to replace the existing temporary statute will be deferred at least until next February by the joint congressional postal commission.

The commission was instructed at the last session to report early next month, but since the post office department reported today that it could furnish no accurate estimates on the operation of the temporary rates until after the close of the present quarter, the members decided that their recommendations would have to await the information.

Postmaster General New told the commission that, from the best information obtainable from 50 of the largest post offices, the department's guess would be that the temporary rates would increase annual revenues about $32,000,000. This represents slightly less than half of he amount by which congress has increased the postal payroll.

Only one recommendation for a change in the temporary rates was submitted, Mr. New proposing a return to the former rate of one per cent for each two ounces on transient second class mail matter—newspapers and periodicals remailed by individuals—regardless of distance. The rate was increased in the temporary law in some cases more than 400 per cent. and has resulted, Mr. New said, in decreasing revenues from this source.

PACHAUG MAN BEATEN AND ROBBED IN PLAINFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 9—Robert James of Pachaug, owner of a saw mill, was attacked by three men while walking on Main street, late tonight, and was robbed of the $172 he had on his person.

There were no street lights burning at the time and Mr. James was unable to identify any of his assailants, but was positive that three men attacked him and threw him to the ground, holding him in a helpless position while one of them went through his pockets and stole his money.

The state police were notified of the work of the holdup men and a search is being made as it is believed that they are still somewhere in the vicinity of the village.

NEW ENGLAND ADVERTISING AND PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 9 (AP)—One hundred members of the New England Hotel association in the annual meeting here today launched an advertising and publicity campaign to "sell New England," which was first brought forward by F. A. Cantwell of Bridgeport, Conn., president of the association, in a meeting Oct. 24 in Manchester, N. H. It is said that the expenditure of $3,000,000 in this campaign is being considered. F. C. Hall of Boston, presided at the meeting. Many of the members were here on their way to New York to attend he annual hotel men's exposition.

LEGAL ACTION OVER POEMS OF NATHALIA CRANE

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(A. P.)—Nathalia Crane, Brooklyn's eleven year old child poetess, author of "The Janitor's Boy" and "Lava Land," was become the legal center of a legal action by the surrogate's court concerning her financial interests in her work.

Clarence P. Crane, her father, today was called upon by Surrogate Wingate to make an accounting of his guardianship. The action followed as a result of a statement made last Saturday by Crane that Nathalia's estate is not more than $500. The Brooklyn Eagle today said that "The Janitor's Boy", has sold more than 60,000 copies and "Lava Land" more than 10,000 and that the total income on them is estimated at $100,000. The surrogate's court has threatened to appoint a legal guardian to protect the child's financial niterests unless a proper accounting is made by Mr. Crane.

Crane announced tonight that he has obtained counsel and will present any necessary accounting. He added that the largest sale of the books has been made since July, a period for which royalty statements have not yet been made.

Published reports that there was some skepticism as to the authorship of the poems led Crane to assert that the poems were entirely the child's own creations.

"Nathalia wrote every single line of those poems," he said, "the only help she ever had was from an old soldier, who told her stories. But the poetry is entirely hers."

GOVERNMENT'S CROP REPORT SENDS COTTON PRICES DOWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 9. (AP)—Cotton prices broke from $5 to $6 a bale today following announcement of another increase in the government's crop estimate, but subsequently recovered a part of their losses on covering and trade buying, closing $3 to $4.50 a bale below last week's final quotations.

Because of recent unfavorable weather in the cotton belt, a reduction in the government's estimate had been generally expected by the trade. The upward revision of 160,000 bales over the forecast of Oct. 18 therefore took the market by surprise, and a flood of selling orders was loosed by local operators as well as southern and European interests. The decline was checked only when traders decided that a reported deterioration in grade partly offset the increase in yield.

$7,500 VERDICT AGAINST MADAME OLGA PEROVA

NEW YORK, Nov. 9. (AP)—A verdict of $7,500 was returned today in favor of William S. Roberts by the jury which heard his suit for damages against Madame Olga Perova, Russian actress, based on charges she plagiarized from his play "The Red Wig" in her production of "The White Peacock."

WILLIMANTIC

A volunteer committee which has been arranging for an appropriate program for Armistice day, had plans practically completed Monday, for exercises to be held on Lincoln square Wednesday morning at 10:45 o'clock. The significance of the day will further be recognized by the closing of the stores and larger industrial plants in accordance with a vote of the Willimantic Mercantile association. The post office hours will be from 7 to 11 a. m., and the city carrier will make but one trip in the forenoon. The three banks will be open from 9 to 11 a. m. All of the public and parochial schools of the city and town will hold special sessions according to the present plan and some will observe the day with patriotic programs. Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton will deliver an address before the student body of Windham High school in the forenoon.

In the belief that a military display was not essential to the program, the committee has planned a simple, dignified service, held on the open square to give the entire population an opportunity to pay its respect to those who staked their all that democracy might survive.

The program will be introduced by national airs played by the B. P. O. E. Band and St. Joseph's Boy Scout band under the direction of Charles M. C. Wheeler. At 10:45 the assembly will sing "My Country 'Tis of Thee." Revs F. C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church will then read the proclamation. Captain Dr. W. P. E. Keating will read the roll call of the boys from Willimantic who paid the supreme sacrifice. Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, pastor of the First Congregational church will offer prayer which will be followed by "Taps." A silent tribute with bowed heads to the heroic dead by the people will conclude the ceremony.

John C. Frazier, commercial service representative of the company in Bridgeport, has been appointed manager of the Willimantic exchange, it was announced Monday by the Southern New England Telephone company. Mr. Frazier succeeds to J. L. Weatherhead, who resigned to enter the hardware business in this city.

Manager Frazier took up his new duties Monday. He has been in the telephone business for nearly twenty years. In May, 1907 he was engaged as special inspector in New Haven, being connected with the plant department. In this work he traveled about the state and held various positions, including that of inside wireman. He was stationed in Meriden, remaining in that city from October 1909 until March 31, 1924 when he was transferred to Bridgeport as commercial service representative. While in Meriden, prior to the war, Mr. Frazier held the positions of repairman, testboard contract agent and salesman. He was granted a furlough for enlistment in the Signal Reserve corps in October 1917 and in June, 1919 he returned to Meriden as a salesman and collector.

Mr. Frazier's wide experience in all phases of telephone work have well equipped him for the position of exchange manager. His former connections as a mechanician and commercial representative are valuable assets to his success in his new field. Mr. Frazier is a man of engaging personality and all who know him are confident that he will be a worthy successor to the popular Mr. Weatherhead. Harry Chalmers of New London will succeed Mr. Frazier in Bridgeport as commercial service representative.

At ceremonies to be carried out this Tuesday afternoon and evening at the First Congregational church, Rev. Arthus S. Wheelock, who has been affiliated with the church for about one year, will be formally installed as pastor. The church council will convene at 4 o'clock and conduct an examination of the candidate, who will present a statement of faith and Christian experience. This meeting is public but the right to speak or vote will be withheld to duly appointed delegates from the Windham County association of Congregational churches and ministers. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock by a committee headed by Mrs. Raymond A. Parker. At 7:30 the formal installation service will take place preceded by a half hour organ recital by Archibald Sessions. During the service Robert Gordon will render baritone solos. Rev. Ashley Day Leavitt of Brookline, Mass., former pastor of the church, will preach the sermon of installation. Participating in the services will be Rev. Albert H. Wheelock, father of the candidate, Rev. Boynton Merrill, and Rev. William S. Beard. Rev. Mr. Wheelock has received a letter from Rev. Harry S. McCready, whom he succeeds and who is now in Oakland, Calif., in which he extends his felicitations for accomplishing the big task of remodelling the church and endorsement in his success as a candidate.

A local young man who had in mind a series of fake holdups which have been staged about the city of late suffered a charge of attitude when a tall man, who had ordered that he hand over his valuables on the dark Connecticut road last Saturday night, suddenly struck him a terrific blow in the face. The local man had had motor trouble and was just getting the car started to return to this city after turning it around, when the mysterious figure approached the machine from out of the darkness. "Tie up all you have in your handkerchief and hand it over quick," boomed the bandit. The motorist was taken up with the idea that someone was playing a practical joke on him such as had been done to friends of his of late. He stepped out of the machine to investigate when a blow in the eye staggered him. Reaching back into the car he grabbed the starting crank and with a series of hard knocks on his assailant's head he succeeded in driving him off. The man was apparently badly dazed and bleeding he he staggered to the side of the road. The police were notified but after a two hour search failed to locate the intruder.

Mrs. Hattie B. Woodward died suddenly at her home in Columbia Sunday morning about ten o'clock. Medical Examiner Dr William L. Higgins of South Coventry viewed the remains. The deceased was born in Yarmouth, Me., August 19, 1875, a daughter of Leonard Soule. She leaves her husband, Madison Woodward of Columbia; four sons, Herbert M. of Whitneyville, Harold A. of Athens, Ga., and Donald E. and Jasper S. of Columbia; one daughter, Mrs. Evelyn E. Richards of Perry, N. Y.; two sisters, Mrs. Henry Dingwell of Chelsea, Mass., and Mrs. Eben Johnson of Freeport, Me.

Mrs. Alice J. Ladd, wife of Everett Ladd, died at her home on Windham road, Sunday, from pneumonia. She was born July 25, 1886, a daughter of Charles and Adeline (Jordan) Chappell. Besides her husband she is survived by two sons, Herbert O. and Willard E. Ladd and one daughter, Miss Florence M. Ladd, all of this city.

An automobile driven by Joseph N. Clark of Columbia, with Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch of Columbia and Miss Frances Wilcox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wells S. Wilcox, of 1488 West Main street, as passengers, was somewhat damaged and narrowly missed pitching down an embankment a recent evening, when the party encountered a large deer about a mile below Columbia Green. The animal was apparently blinded and bewildered by the headlights and instead of retreating leaped on the front of the car smashing the headlights and bending the pumper. The car was thrown in darkness and only the quick action of the driver prevented the machine from ploughing through a fence and down an embankment. The deer is believed to have been injured but no trace of it has been found.

Members of the board of assessors now have the majority of property lists of tax payers in the town of Windham on the grand list of 1925 in their possession. They now face a busy ten or eleven weeks during which they will arrange and compile lists in alphabetical order by volumes. The number of the lists increased each year, largely due to divisions of property from time to time and changes in ownership. The assessors are to have their work completed by January 21.

The funeral of Mrs. Clara Gaudette Potvin was held Monday morning from the home of her brother, Moise Gaudette, of Chestnut street, with a high mass of requiem at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. J. J. Papillon was the celebrant. The attendance of relatives and friends was large. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery where a committal service was read. The bearers were: William Simmons, Pierre Lavallee, George H. Millard and Peter Legace. Arrangements were in charge of the Hurteau-Boese Corp.

Word was received here Monday of the death of Rev. Louis M. Flocken at the Deaconness hospital in Boston, Sunday. The deceased was pastor of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal church for six years, 1907-13. He was transferred from here to the First church and Epworth League chapel at Pawtucket, R. I., but had been without a pastorate for the past five years due to ill health. For the past two years he had been residing at 136 Altmare street, Springfield, Mass. Surviving him is a widow and two sons, Robert and Louis and one granchild.

Funeral services for William, infant son of Daniel and Angeline (Phillips) Marcleau, who died at their home on Windham road last Saturday evening, were held at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. Killourey Brothers had charge of the arrangements.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson has not as yet fixed a date for an inquest on the death of Guiseppe Distefano, who died from a bullet found and was found on a lawn on Meadow street, Friday morning. In a letter received Monday by Chief of Police Allan McArthur from the state motor vehicle department, attention is called to the fact that comparatively few in this vicinity have applied for their 1926 automobile markers. Information is given that there will be no extension of time for this purpose as in years past. The reservation period for numbers held in 1925 ends November 15 instead of December 1st as in recent years.

The big, roomy town of Mansfield with its miles and miles of hard riding country roads offers quite a job for the tax collector, for it is his duty to get out and go after the taxpayer, a somewhat more difficult task than that of sitting in a nicely heated office and taking them as they come. Collector Henry E. Knowlton of Mansfield Four Corners will radiate to no less than fifteen places in the town during his collecting job.

Dr. Hugh Campbell of Norwich will hold a free chest clinic this (Tuesday) morning, at 10 o'clock, at the Visiting Nurse association rooms.

For good cooks: a tip about flavor

FLAVOR greatly aids food's healthful qualities. There is half-hidden flavor in every food you eat. Nothing brings it out in full, delightful strength, as does fine mustard.

Here is a new, mild-blended mustard for delicate-flavored foods. Just the thing for summer dishes: salads, entrees, vegetables, sandwiches. Put a dash of it with every food to add delicious zest. At all grocers. 15c.

Mistakes Are Valuable

Much is to be said in favor of mistakes. The men who are always having city parks and suburban boulevards, skyscrapers and babies named for them made their mistakes, and knew it.

There are those who are always right; who never have made a mistake and never shall. With them all progress has stopped. Between the north and south ear there is a vast area where new ideas have ceased to sprout.

It doesn't make much difference whether your age is 17, 70 or 170, you will grow and develop as long as you are willing to profit by your mistakes. Look your mistakes straight in the eye, shake hands with them and then bid them good-by forever. A bad habit is nothing but a mistake that has acquired a permanent address.

The average man of success today will say, "I owe my success to hard work." But he is holding out one of his choicest secrets. What he should say is, "I'm a success because I knew how to clean up $100 worth of wisdom on every little $2 mistake I ever made."

Mistakes seldom bite the first time. —Harry Daniel in Thrift Magazine

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Business will be generally suspended in Danielson at noon on Wednesday—Armistice day. A majority of stores will close at the noon hour. Some manufacturing concerns also will suspend operations all day or part of the day. The Paco Manufacturing company's two mills here will be closed all day. The Jacobs Manufacturing company will close about 11 a. m. for the day. At the Quinebaug mills operations will be continued, but operatives will be given a holiday as they may request it. Similar arrangements will be in force at other manufacturing plants in town.

Warden Walter Anderson said Monday morning that he will be appreciative if Danielson makes a big showing of the national colors on Armistice day. He also has suggested that all the whistles and bells on manufacturing plants and in churches join in saluting the seventh anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, this at 11 o'clock tomorrow forenoon.

While Danielson has not planned any stated observance of the day, it can mark the anniversary of a great event by displaying flags and saluting the hour that marked the end of the fighting in the World war.

There will be a general exodus from Danielson to Putnam tomorrow. Putnam will stage the greatest of eastern Connecticut's observance of Armistice day and crowds will be attracted there from many towns and cities. Danielson will be represented in the big parade by the Service battery, Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion and by a local delegation of Putnam lodge of Elks.

Reports covering the past year's activities will be presented next Saturday at a meeting of the Windham County Agricultural society at Unitarian hall in Brooklyn. This meeting is the most important of the year, as officers are to be elected and other important business transacted. Life members of the society are privileged to participate in this meeting. The society held a very successful and profitable fair in September, so the reports will be of pleasing interest to the members.

One never can tell how much trouble a few drinks may lead to or eventually concern. Fred Pechie, resident in Dayville, will vouch for this. In the town court Monday morning he was fined $5 for intoxication, but lack of that rather prosaic ending is something of a story.

Pechie, with his slant on proved potentiality about as destructive as a tornado. One stagger that he made resulted in two automobile accidents, a cut chin for one person, a cut over the eye for another and a general shaking up and a scare for some others.

Pechie was walking along an embankment near Attawaugan Sunday night as Elbert Deforge of Moosup came along in his car. The road was wet and slippery and driving difficult at the time. As the Deforge car approached Pechie staggered out into the highway and Deforge in swerving his car to avoid hitting the man struck another machine, headed toward Putnam, that was being operated by Mrs. Henry Bellerive of that city. The crash between the Deforge and Bellerive machines did not do either car any good and over and above that Arthur Bellerive, riding with Mrs. Bellerive, sustained a cut on the chin. Pechie didn't figure in the casualty list. For him it was first down and seven yards to gain, or something like that.

Some time elapsed after this accident before a wrecker was sent down from Putnam to get the Bellerive car. The wrecker had just hooked onto the Bellerive car and was preparing to haul it away when along came Everett Pellett of Danielson in his machine and crashed into the wreck and the tow car. Mr. Pellett sustained a cut over the right eye and near the temple out of the smash, and his car will need some doctoring up to restore it to what would be considered good order.

Thus one stagger on the part of Mr. Pechie set things at sevens and sixes up in the vicinity of Attawaugan. As a result he found himself in the custody of State Officer Rice and received a fine in court Monday morning.

Late Monday afternoon a check-up ascertained that business will be practically 100 per cent. suspended here Wednesday at noon in observance of Armistice day. The closing agreements reached Monday includes even the drug stores, which are to be closed from noon until 6 p. m. Wednesday afternoon will bring the most complete suspension of business in Danielson in year.

There was a pretty wedding at St. Joseph's church in Dayville Monday morning at 9 o'clock when Miss Grace E. Kenary, daughter of John Kenary, was united in marriage with Frederick L. Welch of Milbury, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Neill, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, were the attending couple. Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial mass. The music during the service was by Mrs. William Young of Millbury, a sister of the groom. The bride's gown was of taupe brocaded velvet trimmed with gold lace and her hat to match with gold lace trimming. Her bouquet was of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. O'Neill wore a gown of blonde crepe satin with hat and shoes to match and her bouquet was of Killarney roses.

After the mass there was a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill, only relatives attending. During the day Mr. and Mrs. Welch left for a wedding trip by motor car that will take them to New York and other cities. They are to make their home in Worcester.

The bride, for years of Putnam, where her family was long resident, received many beautiful gifts. Recently the bride has been making her home with her father and Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill in Dayville.

Monday morning the funeral of Charles Grimes, Sr., was held from his home in Pomfret with funeral services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 10 o'clock. The officers of the solemn high mass of requiem were Rev. Ignatius Kost, pastor of St. Joseph's; Rev. Ludovic Paradis of Voluntown and Rev. James McCarthy, M. S., of Danielson. Burial was in St. James' cemetery, Danielson. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

In the town court Monday morning Oza Bonin of Southbridge paid dearly for the sheer recklessness he indulged in while driving his car during the rain and under dangerous conditions late Sunday afternoon. Bonin was fined $200 and costs for driving while under the influence of an intoxicant. He was apprehended by a state police officer, who had observed the reckless manner in which he was passing other machines and was found to be intoxicated. Other men were with him in the car at the time of the arrest, which was made north of here.

At St. James' church at 7:30 Monday morning Miss Flora A. Duhamel was united in marriage with Joseph LaFrance of Springfield and Danielson, Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial high mass, attended by numbers of relatives and friends. The attendants of the bridal couple were Alexis Duhamel, father of the bride, and Napoleon LaFrance, Springfield, father of the groom.

The bride's gown was of blue charmeuse trimmed with grey georgette and velvet. She wore a silver hat and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses.

After the church service there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Duhamel, 7 Cottage street.

The bride received many beautiful gifts. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. LaFrance are to make their home in Springfield.

Julius Rainville, who has been foreman in charge of outside work for the Crystal Water company, has resigned.

Miss Mary Shinners of North Main street has returned from a visit of a few days with relatives in Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. William Day of Harrisville, R. I., have come to Killingly Center to make their home.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill was continuing on Monday his investigation relative to the death of Guiseppe Distefano, whose body was found Friday morning in the rear of a house on Meadow street in Willimantic. Distefano was to have been married last Saturday.

Now comes a Boston weather prophet telling that the winter is to be brief and mild. Such contradictions about what the winter is going to be. The Cloud Digger avers it's going to be severe.

Members of the Auxiliary of Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion, will go to North Grosvenordale Tuesday evening to visit with the members of the auxiliary of Oscar J. Swanson post.

John A. Howe of Worcester was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Monday.

The Ladies' Benovelent society of the Congregational church has an all day meeting scheduled for Thursday.

With the Armistice night dance at Wildwood park the pavilion there will be closed for the season.

Hunters here have been seeking specimens of partridge afflicted with a disease that has been killing them by hundreds this season throughout the New England states.

Bus service was substituted for trolley service Monday between Central Village and Moosup.

PUTNAM

This year's annual meeting of the Windham County Farmers' association is to be held here Wednesday, coincident with the Armistice day observance. The date was selected as one on which the great majority of members of the association would be interested in coming to a meeting. The occasion will afford them an opportunity not only to hear all the interesting things that the association meeting will provide, but also to attend the Armistice day celebration and hear addresses by Gov. John H. Trumbull and other prominent men who will speak.

The following is the program that has been arranged for the meeting.

Morning

10.30—Meeting called to order; hall in the same building as Odd Fellows hall, Pomfret street, Putnam, Conn.; report of the president.

10.40—Report of the secretary-treasurer.

10.50—Report of the county agent.

11.20—Election of officers.

11.50—C. E. Jewett, "The Production of Grade 'A' Milk in Windham County." Supplemtary remarks by J. R. Stromberg, Abington.

Afternoon

12.05—Charles F. Brenn, "Past and Future Accomplishments in Poultry Work."

12.15—B. W. Ellis, director of state extension service, "Looking Ahead in Extension Work."

12.30—Bring a basket lunch. Coffee will be served free.

The annual meeting program will be brought to a close in time to observe Putnam's Armistic day parade and dedication of memorial bridge.

1.15—Armistice day parade; eight to ten military companies, several fraternal organizations and six to eight bands.

Principal addresses following the parade: T. H. deCoudres, address of welcome; Governor Trumbull, John A. Macdonald, state highway commissioner; state officer of the American Legion; John H. O'Brien, Worcester, Mass.

The annual committee is composed of Alexander Maitland, Thompson; J. Z. Labelle, Killingly; A. A. Sweet, Putnam; Frank L. Davis, county agent of Putnam cooperating.

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers' association will be held in the auditorium of the high school Tuesday evening, Nov. 10 at 8 o'clock. A business meeting is called for 7.45 and all members are urged to be present at this meeting as there are matters of importance to be discussed. After the program refreshments will be served by the hostesses, Mrs. Charles Franklin, Mrs. Leon T. Wilson and Mrs. J. Richard Carpenter.

Mrs. Frank Thorburn and little daughters, Barbara and Deborah, have returned to East Providence, after spending several months with Mrs. Thorburn's mother, Mrs. Carrie Cascoigne, while waiting for their new home to be completed.

Cargill Council, K. of C., held its regular monthly meeting at its rooms on Union street Sunday afternoon. The chief business was the discussion and completion of their plans for the Armistice day parade. The Putnam members will be out in full force and invitations have been sent and accepted by the lodges in Webster, Mass., Grosvenordale, Willimantic, Danielson and Jewett City. The North Grosvenordale band will lead the organization with Joseph Dumas of Dudley as bandmaster. The K. of C. rooms will be open all day for visiting knights and cooperate with the citizens' committee in every way to help make the celebration a success.

A miscellaneous shower was given recently for Miss Marion Bowen, at her home on South Main street. This is the second one given to Miss Bowen since the announcement of her approaching marriage to Henry Hawkins. A buffet lunch was served by Mrs. Stella Bowen, mother of Miss Bowen. The guests were: Mrs. Herbert Reynolds and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Babbitt of Thompson, Mrs. A. T. Davis, Miss Hazel Davis, Henry Davis, Donald Gibson, Willard Larrow, Mrs. Ralph Gibson, Mrs. H. E. Hawkins, Mrs. Walter Hawkins, Miss Alta Hawkins and Henry Hawkins of East Putnam, Katherine Holbrook of Abington and Mrs. Harry Gifford, Miss Beatrice Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Smith, Jr., Miss Elisabeth Smith, Mrs. George Pratt and Miss Ruth Pratt of Putnam.

The chapel and parlors of the Second Congregational church will be open on Armistice day for a rest room for ladies and children of the city and surrounding towns who come to attend the exercises of the day. There will be someone at the church to take charge.

Thomas P. Ryan, city clerk, left this morning for Pittsfield, Mass., in response to a telegram notifying him of the death of his mother, Mrs. Bridget Ryan. She is 84 years of age and has been in impaired health for some time but her death came very suddenly. He husband died many years ago and she has made her home with her son, William Ryan. Walter T. Killam had his fine Airdale dog stolen from his gasoline station recently. The dog was lying on a shelf outside the building. Mr. Killam had been working hard during the day and had been called up to serve customers twice, so was sleeping soundly. About midnight he was disturbed by voices outside but hardly knew if he was not dreaming. He heard men talking and putting water in the radiator of an automobile and then speak of the fine dog. Recovering fully and suspecting mischief he seized his gun and ran to the door but the automobile was just going out of sight and so far away that he could not get its number.

WHEELOCK BOY FIRST TO CROSS MEMORIAL BRIDGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 8.—Silas M. Wheelock, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Silas M. Wheelock, was the first person to cross the new Memorial bridge in a vehicle, the latte being owned, driven and, for the most part, built by him.

The propelling power was a pony of diminutive size and the vehicle was a four wheel cart which the boy had made or rather assembled, as the wheels were of varying size, the chassis was one that he had found in a storage room, the remnants of what had once been a pony cart of a vintage before the automobile, and the body may have been part of a heavy packing case.

At the western end of the bridge is the plant of the Putnam Woolen company, of which Silas M. Wheelock is agent, just as was his father before him. The Wheelock home is on Church street just a block away from the bridge. It was natural for the boy to take an interest in the structure that was being built so close to him and he followed every detail of its construction. He is on intimate terms with the workmen and is the right hand man of the foreman in charge. Often the two have placed the red lanterns in their places as warning signals after all the workers had left for the night.

The foreman promised Silas that he would be the first person to drive over the bridge. Although there were enough ridges and depressions in the bridge roadway to make it resemble a French battlefield Silas was there with his pony cart when the foreman gave the word and "Cracker," that's the pony started across. The depressions that almost hid the vehicle from sight didn't bother the youthful driver. It was his mission to be the first one to drive across the new structure. He accomplished it successfully, as he has a way of doing things he sets out to do—and having made the journey while everybody looked on and applauded, he turned and drove back across the bridge, then parked his car and started to school.

"A Well-Balanced Diet Built Around Meats"

Nothing developed on the trip to cause me to revise my idea about foods; which is that a well-balanced diet built around meats yields the best health results.

On the way north we had fresh domestic meat from the supply taken aboard when we sailed. After we reached the North we relied upon the wild life of the region, using seal, walrus, caribou, muskox, Arctic hare, and many kinds of wild ducks.

Every day we had fresh meat with plenty of fat at at least one meal and usually oftener when supplies were plentiful, and every one came through the four months in excellent condition; in fact, most of the members of the party gained weight.

While we often hear it claimed that eating too much meat is unfavorable to health, it is a fact that such ailments as gout, hardening of the arteries, and other disorders attributed to an excess of meat eating are quite unknown to the Eskimos who eat nothing but meat.

In my own experience I have never known anyone to attempt to live in the Arctic on a vegetarian diet. On the other hand, every Arctic explorer nowadays relies upon the native fresh meats as a sure preventive of scurvy, a much dreaded nutritional disorder which was prevalent in earlier Arctic experience times before we learned a lesson in diet from the Eskimo.

The above message from Donald B. MacMillan, the famous Arctic explorer, is of vital interest to every housewife. The MacMillan expedition carried Swift's Premium Hams and Bacon and other Swift branded products.

Say "No"

if asked to "try" a substitute for Quaker. That is, if you want real Quaker flavor . . . . that famous Scotch flavor . . . in breakfast oats

THERE is only ONE way to get the true Scotch flavor in oats which distinguishes Quaker flavor . . . and that is by getting the Quaker brand.

Oats was originally a Scotch dish. It must have true Scotch flavor to be at its best.

Remember this, for your own sake, when tempted to "try" some ordinary brand.

That flavor is milled in. Nobody as yet has successfully imitated it. Grown-ups and children who ordinarily don't take to oats, respond to this unique flavor. And flavor, as you know, is the all-important point in food.

Milled under exclusive Quaker methods applied to the finest, plumpest grains. Quick Quaker is the world's fastest cooked breakfast dish.

Takes 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast.

Due to Quaker milling methods, it supplies, too, the "roughage" you need to make laxatives seldom necessary.

Look for the picture of the Quaker on the label. See that it is there before you buy breakfast oats.

NORWICH, A GOOD PLACE TO LIVE

The men and women of Norwich are not the only ones who appreciate the advantages which are offered by Norwich as a place of residence. Neither do they alone understand the attractiveness of the community from other angles. The boys and girls are alert in this particular, and the essay contest which has been opened by the local chamber of commerce for the purpose of getting expressions from the school children on "Reasons why Norwich is an attractive city in which to live" should call forth a generous response from all schools.

Many a boy or girl has advanced many valuable ideas. Certainly they know why they like Norwich, what advantages and attractions appeal to them and they also know what they have heard others point out as worthy of serious consideration.

The children of today are the citizens of tomorrow. It is not too soon for those in school to develop civic pride, to stand loyally by their home town or to praise its good points. It is in fact a part of their training in good citizenship that they should do some active thinking along this very line and present their ideas for such good as the general participation may accomplish.

Norwich is going to be interested in seeing what its citizens of tomorrow think today about the city where they are getting their early training and where many of them are going to be taxpayers and heads of families and what attractions it has now and what it holds out for the future.

Let there be an enthusiastic participation in this undertaking, a movement which should result in giving much enlightenment to an untold number of others who know little or nothing about Norwich, but who may become deeply interested to the ultimate advantage of the entire city.

At all times the loyal citizens and the loyal citizens to be should be striving for the betterment and development of the community. There is a chance to voice present day sentiment and spread good words through the essay contest which has been opened for the school children of Norwich.

TESTING ABROAD

The test of the pudding lies in the eating. With our immigration laws the test lies in the application. For a long time it was urged that those desiring to come to this country should have their qualifications examined before leaving from the other side of the ocean. It is not long since such a provision was placed in the immigration laws with the result that it is being tried out in England and Ireland. Early reports were satisfactory, in spite of some opposition to the method raised on this side of the water. Now the reports for August and September have been made public and are equally pleasing.

When it is shown that 12,528 sought to leave England and Ireland for this country during those months and 852 of them were found to be unable to meet the requirements established by this country, it cannot fail to be evident that much hardship was saved those people by having that fact determined before they left for this side of the Atlantic instead of waiting until they had reached ports in this country and then be obliged to go back to Europe. It was a saving in money, time and physical condition. Illiteracy, poor physical condition and liability to be sent back under the contract labor law were the chief reasons for refusing to pass the 852 persons, and certainly it was possible to determine those things just as efficiently in England and Ireland as it would have been at Ellis Island.

Thus there appears to be good and sufficient reason for believing that the plan of applying the tests abroad is working satisfactorily, and so well that its extension to other countries is justified. If for any good reason the test before embarking was working to the detriment and disadvantage of the would be emigrant it could be expected that it would bring a howl of disapproval from the friends of the rejected, but nothing of the kind has come. For all concerned the idea has its good points and they are being brought out in such a manner as to make a good impression.

PANAMA CANAL TRAFFIC

It wasn't so long ago that the Panama canal was opened that interest has been lost in the use that is made of it, or the business that is done via the water way during the course of a year. Though not calculated to be a money maker, it has been found to fill a long felt want and the tonnage that is transported over this short cut is large and shows a steady normal growth.

The business for the fiscal year ending June 30 did not reach the level of the previous year due to a falling off in the amount of oil transported to the eastern ports from the Californian field. It was this trade that made the 1924 fiscal year a banner one, the largest in the history of the canal, and to create a quandary as to how soon it would be before additional canal requirements would be necessary.

That oil business came suddenly and it has experienced a similar falling off. Whether it will return in as large volume, and when, is quite uncertain, but the canal report for the last fiscal year shows that business in other lines has been gaining, or a situation which shows that the dependable traffic is increasing from year to year.

For the big year in 1924 there were net returns from the tolls of more than $16,300,000. For 1925 the income reached a total of more than $13,400,000 but how satisfactory that is in comparison with previous revenue is indicated by the fact that in 1923 the net was just over $10,000,000. The jump of more than $3,400,000 over the 1923 figure indicates a healthy situation relative to the canal use.

Such figures show the recognition that is given to the advantages furnished by the waterway. They represent a steady normal gain and a business that is not dependent upon spurts or upon oil. It provides facilities which are appreciated by the rest of the maritime countries and there is nothing as yet to show that it has reached the peak of business that can be expected. With each year showing more normal business the time is probably not far distant when increased normal traffic will set the high record for itself.

THE RADIO CONFERENCE

On the fourth annual radio conference at Washington the eyes and ears of the country are concentrated. Three others have been held with beneficial results. They haven't as yet brought about any regulatory legislation but there has been developed an understanding and agreement which has resulted in the department of commerce undertaking a supervision and regulation which has been generally responded. It is upon this department that such work devolves but when it is realized that this supervision means the manufacturers, the broadcasting stations, the radio press as well as the millions of receivers the magnitude of the task can be appreciated.

At this conference now underway it can be expected that many new ideas will be advanced. It will be the desirable opportunity for getting together and exchanging views, for discussing the many problems that exist and those which are constantly arising and for giving to the department of commerce the opinions of those directly interested as to what ought to be done in order to better prevailing conditions for the good of radio.

The aim of all is for the same goal. Radio has taken the country by storm and it is no small job to undertake the regulation of it for the benefit of the greatest number. Radio conferences have been helpful in the past and there is good ground for feeling that such will be the outcome of the gathering now in session at Washington. Working hand in hand with the secretary of the department of commerce is temporarily serving in place of new legislation. How long it can continue to meet requirements is a question.

A CRISIS FOR PAINLEVE

More uncertainty exists as to what is going to happen in France. The plan, proposed by Premier Painleve is not meeting with favor and the situation has gotten to the point where there is going to be a vote of confidence in the ministry or it is going to be a vote in keeping with the lack of confidence which is being indicated.

The Painleve plan calls for a capital levy that will run for 10 to 15 years as a means of relieving the present situation, when it is not believed that it holds the remedy which France needs.

France has been delaying its financial problems for a long time and in the meantime they have been growing worse, with large expenditures appropriations for wars and war purposes and the loaning of sums for war purposes to other countries. France seems to have felt that it was going to find an avenue of escape opening itself up through a thick fog. It hasn't come and now it has got to the point where desperate measures are being urged for the purpose of relieving the strain on the franc.

It remains for the Painleve government to find the answer if it can. Thus far the proposals that have been advanced do not satisfy the control in the house of deputies. The premier is committed to the solution which he advocates and would temporarily get help through resort to further borrowing at home.

It was expected that the test of the Painleve cabinet would come at an early date when the new ministry was formed. It seems to be rapidly approaching the crossroads.

BACK ON THE TRACK

"Lo, Jimmy!" caroled the little string bean of a girl who was tripping down the street trying to catch up with the youth doggedly tramping ahead of her. He turned with evidently great reluctance.

"Lo, Conny," he conceded.

"My, you're glad to see me!" she reproved, eying him sideways, bird fashion. "And I've been gone six months, and everything! Why, you haven't even been over to see me!"

"Didn't s'pose you wanted to see me," he countered. Didn't s'pose you had any time to waste on a poor ordinary dub like me after—after—"

"Oh-h-h!" the slip of a girl gurgled in great joy. "I do believe you are talking about my meeting a real English title and playing tennis with it—him! How'd you ever hear?"

"You wrote Edith all about it!" the young man reminded her. "In detail. And Edith nearly got lockjaw in her hurry to relay the news to me! You said he was absolutely handsome, with perfect manners and so interesting and that you were going to have tea with him the next day! You said—"

"How horrid of Edith to show a personal letter about!" said the young person reprovingly but with joy in her eye. "I can't believe it of her, really! Yes, Reggy was a dear boy."

"Yee-ow!" howled the young man. "It's a wonder he let you come back home at all! Meeting his sisters, too! And how about Edmund, the son of the doggy person over in Paris who—"

"Did she tell you about that, too?" breached the young person severely. "Just wait till I get hold of that girl!"

"You leave Edith alone," commanded the young man. "No doubt she thought she was doing me a kindness, and I guess she was. Edith said she considered you practically lost to us and that no doubt one of your many admirers over there would be coming soon—"

"Edmund and his mother are going to visit us on their way to California next winter," she mused out loud, ignoring the convulsion of nature which marred his countenance. "I guess you didn't have a very slow time of it while I was away, running around with Ede all the while. I see plainly through her whole scheme now and if you weren't entirely dumb you would realize that she was merely trying to poison your mind against me."

"Don't try to distract me from the main point," objected the young man coldly. "Edith is an extremely nice girl and a true American friend of yours, and you should appreciate her. How could I help taking her to the club dances when she told me she was dying to go and nobody had invited her? And you never took time to write to me except snippy notes and cards. How long is Edmund going to stay? Believe me, I have too much pride to run second to any foreigner, and just fill up gaps in your entertainment line, and—"

"How you act, Jimmy!" the string-bean of a girl said energetically. "Any one who didn't know you would say you were raving jealous—"

"Ha, ha, ha!" the young man cried. "Me, jealous! It doesn't make the least difference to me how many men you flirt with. I'd have you know. It's just that I've got too much self-respect to hang around when all your interests are centered on foreign lords and counts and things, who no doubt have look up your father in Bradstreet, though, goodness knows, they wouldn't have to try hard to really fall in love with you."

"Do you actually think so, Jimmy?" she asked cheerfully. "Do you think I am a wee bit attractive? Reggy always was saying—"

"Yee-ow!" the young man exploded again. "I don't care what he said! I suppose you believed it, too! What's the use of my coming over if you're spending all your time writing letters back to Europe, as Edith said—"

"Hi-ni!" the cute little thing said grimly, as though to remind herself of something important to be attended to at a future date. "I see! Say, Jimmy, let's go and dance tonight—and if you'll come over to lunch tomorrow we'll play golf in the afternoon—"

"Really?" the young man stuttered beamingly. "Will you, really, Connie? Edith said you wouldn't have any use for any one back home after all your triumphs abroad—"

"And I think there's room for you in our car this week end when we drive up north," she added beguilingly. "I'm just dying to have a good old visit with you, Jimmy!"

"Say," the gratified young man chortled, "I'm on! I'll have to bust a couple of dates with Ede, but of course she'll understand—"

"You're right she'll understand," breathed the pretty little thing in a satisfied way.—Exchange.

CHILD TRAINING

OTHER PEOPLE'S CHILDREN

Alice A. Keen

This is a problem which every mother has to deal with at one time or another—other people's children. Your own boys and girls are within your knowledge amenable to the rules of your making, their actions, in a measure, predictable, but those other children who come to the house after school or on Saturdays, going from room to room with wide, inquisitive eyes, unaccustomed games—it is evident that they have been trained by an entirely different set of rules or by none at all.

It was when the children started school and began picking up a wider acquaintance that this problem of other people's children first came to vex me. Then I gave the matter a good deal of serious consideration. To solve it in a tactful, good-natured way—that was what I wanted to do.

It was all wrong, I know, for my house to be so rudely overrun, quiet and demoralized by such unrestrained, and often destructive, hilarity. Not always could I be at home to check its progress. Nor was it right that such a guardian should be necessary.

When people sojourn in a foreign country, I reasoned, they come under the jurisdiction of that country. And, surely, it should be the same with households and rules of households. The children who came into my home to enjoy its privileges, its attractive games and books, should be amenable, while there to the same rules that governed my own children.

"And that," thought I, "is a rule that works both ways."

So, in the first place, I told my children that when they went into other homes they should propose nothing that was contrary to the rules of the place.

"And," I added with some foresight, "if there seem to be no rules, act according to the ones we have here at home and you won't be very far from right."

Then, so as to have everything perfectly clear and well-defined in my own little democracy, the children and I made a list of rules which I typed in capitals and placed conspicuously on the kitchen wall.

Here are some of them:

"When not at the dining-room table, all eating must be done in the kitchen."

"Clean hands for clean books."

"Feet must be kept off upholstered chair seats."

"Rough games to be played out-of-doors."

Of course there were others, but all pertaining to those little niceties of behavior that make our children more comfortable to live with and require from them only a little ordinary thoughtfulness.

I was rather doubtful as to how the children of the neighborhood might look upon my bulletin of rules, but the idea appealed to them immensely. It seemed as if they actually like it better—this knowing just exactly what was expected of them. They were not driven away, but came as they would to a well-conducted club, behaved decorously and even suggested other rules now and then as occasion seemed to demand.

My experience is that children, generally, would rather be decent than otherwise and will behave if the way is made clear and reasonable.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The bishop of London, Rt. Rev. Arthur F. W. Ingram, who has accepted an invitation to address eight American universities next year, paid his first visit to this side in 1907, when he came over to present a Bible given by King Edward to the old Bruton Parish church at Williamsburg, Va., the second oldest church in America. Bishop Ingram has often been called the "Bishop of the Slums" for at the time of his promotion to the bishopric of London, which is one of the most important in the church of England, he occupied the post of suffragan bishop of Stepney, which is one of the poorest and wickedest divisions of the Whitechapel section. But Dr. Ingram was just as proud of his parishioners in the "East End" as if they had been the greatest aristocrats of Mayfair, and even today he pays frequent visits to his "poor people" to see how they are getting along.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

TIJUANA

Tijuana, just over the border in Mexico, south of California a large part of which was destroyed recently by fire, was built "on a desert and the eighteenth amendment," according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Tia Juana, as the name was first written, means 'Aunt Jane'—somewhat too sedate a title for the town of recent years with its race tracks, gambling tables, alcohol and jazz," says the bulletin. "So the tempo of the pronunciation was automatically stepped up to 'Tijuana.'

"Tia Juana, the sleepy and inconsequential, existed before the eighteenth amendment. It consisted of a shack or two in the midst of a sandy desert. But hectic Tijuana was as truly a result of the famous addition to the constitution of the United States as if one of its clauses had specifically provided for the town's erection. Near the original shacks a complete Main street burst into being. It has never been more than a few hundred yards long—born in the desert at one end and dying in the desert at the other—but it makes up in concentration what it lacks in size. The buildings are mostly one-story affairs of wood, many of them showing that naive hypocrisy of the old West, the false front, which gives to the near-sighted a faint suggestion of a second story.

"There has been little variety in the 'business interests' of Tijuana. Something close to 99 per cent. of the town's structures are concerned with the distribution of alcoholic beverages, with gambling, and now and then the purveying of food, as side lines.

"Tijuana differs from Mexicali, opposite Calexico, Agua Prieta opposite Douglas, and Juarez opposite El Paso. The latter three and other Mexican communities on the border have a more or less thriving business life of their own. The high concentration of saloons in each case has been superimposed on established communities. But Tijuana is the almost pure oasis and 'sanctuary' where American visitors may forget prohibition and throw other Americanan inhibitions to the winds. Repeal the eighteenth amendment and Tijuana probably would become a deserted village.

"Tijuana proper—if one may use the phrase—lies about half a mile inside Mexican territory. Almost exactly on the border is a large race track and a connected group of buildings housing bars, a restaurant and gaming rooms. Seventeen miles north of the border lies San Diego, California, the starting point for most of those who visit the Mexican oasis. A railway connects San Diego with the border, and during the racing seasons in recent years several trains daily have carried their thousands to and from the track and its neighboring allurements.

"Tijuana has been a thorn in the side of the more solid citizenry of southern California, including the merchants and bankers. It has been asserted that more than $20,000,000 is left in Tijuana annually by Americans. All of it does not find its way into Mexican coffers, however. Practically all of the gambling concessionaires and saloon proprietors are Americans. They must pay heavy fees to the government of the Mexican state of Lower California. Some of the provisions in this regard are a bit amusing. Each year the race track proprietors build a new school house in some Lower California town! What is left after the reduction goes back to the United States in the pockets of the proprietors."

Stories That Recall Others

Here's a Bright One

Billy, age three, asked his mother where his daddy was. On being informed that he was working in Dayville and would be there for a week or two, he said: "Mamma, does it ever come night where daddy is?"

His mother assured him it did. She then asked him why he thought there was no night at Dayville. He said: "Why, because it's Dayville."

Here's Another

He came in with this statement: "Lost my watch. Want to put in an adv."

The watchloser and the clerk proceeded to frame an advertisement that gave a full description of the vanished timepiece. The loser got out his notebook, gave the number of the works, the name of the maker and every minute detail. The cost of the advertisement for the time wanted amounted to $1.20. He presented a dollar. "Twenty cents more," said the clerk.

The man fumbled through his pockets for the additional change. Finding none he presented another bill.

"I had some change in my pocket when I left home this morning," the man said. He continued rummaging through his pockets and just as the clerk was producing the change the man shouted:

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute! Here's my watch! I had it in the wrong pocket. And here's my change. I knew I had some change somewhere."

Woman is a dream and dreams go by contraries.

From Small Beginnings

Albert A. Pope, Developer of the Bicycle

A very small boy with a very large basket full of country produce every day visited certain houses where he had established customers, and with his ready smile and genuinely good and fresh fruit and vegetables succeeded in many little business transactions. The basket was heavy and small, and it emptied itself long before the hostesses had all been reached, so the boy branched into prosperity by getting a horse and wagon and delivering still more goods than before. In spite of this he had more customers than he could supply, so he took thought, and then engaged his boyhood friends as assistants, with other wagons or other baskets, and so made money. It is not hard, with such a boyhood, to develop into a real business man. That boy was Albert A. Pope, founder of the Pope Manufacturing Company and the great friend of all who love the bicycle.

When Albert A. Pope grew a little older he had to engage himself to work for others, and to work exceedingly hard for a very small salary. The great maker of the bicycle had no money to spend in buying such amusing things as bicycles—and there were no bicycles to buy even if he had the money. While he was still enduring, back-breaking work the Civil war sent out its call for men. Albert A. Pope was then only 18, but at once he began to prepare for service. In the war he served in some of the most bloody engagements, was wounded, and was several times promoted for bravery in battle. When the war was over he went home and again became a business man, but this time on his own account.

At the Philadelphia Centennial, when he was 33, he saw a bicycle for the first time. He made arrangements to sell bicycles, but in a year or so saw how profitable it would be to make them as well as to sell them. When the Pope Manufacturing Company had been in business a short time, Albert A. Pope saw how necessary it is to have good roads if wheeling is to be pleasurable. In many ways he advocated the policy of building excellent roads everywhere. He organized wheelmen, published a magazine in their interest and built up pride in wheeling. To him, almost more than to anyone else, those who enjoy the bicycle owe a debt of thanks. The keen-minded business like boy became a provider of pleasure for thousands.

Too Much of a Good Thing

Good things are good in all of such
You and at last you have too much.
—Nanny Meadow Mouse.

Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse lived quite comfortably in Farmer Brown's cornerib for a while. They were sure that never in all the Great World had there been two such rich Meadow Mice before. There was so much corn that if they should eat they couldn't eat it all up, even though they should live to be twice as old as most Meadow Mice get to be. So they looked forward to winter without a worry of any kind.

Then one day Farmer Brown's boy moved the board, by which they got in and out of the cornerib. It happened that both of them were at home at the time. They didn't know what had happened until Danny that night started to go outside. Then he found there was no way of getting out unless he jumped down to the ground. If he did that there would be no way of getting back.

But Danny and Nanny decided that this didn't matter. They would spend their time eating, sleeping and exploring that cornerib. This they did and were happy for a while. But at last they began to grow tired of nothing to eat but corn. First Danny lost his appetite. He grew peevish. Then Nanny lost her appetite, and she grew even more peevish. They quarreled, and they really didn't know what they were quarreling about. Both had been fat—very fat indeed. But now they began to grow thin. One day Nanny noticed this. It set her to thinking.

"I know what's the trouble with us," she cried.

"What?" squeaked Danny.

"We have too much of a good thing," said she. "We have too much corn. We need a change. We have lost our appetites because we need something besides corn. Corn for breakfast, corn for dinner, and corn for supper is altogether too much corn. I am getting so that I hate the sight of it. If we could get outside and get something else for a change we would be all right.

But they couldn't get outside. At least, they couldn't get outside and get back again. And though they hunted and hunted and hunted they could find nothing in that cornerib for a change. It was a case of eat corn or nothing. Beyond a doubt it was a case of too much of a good thing. Danny began to think of that barn they had planned to make their home before they had found the cornerib. There would be plenty of change of food there. To be sure they wouldn't be quite so safe as they were here. Here no enemies could get to them. But even safety and plenty of food were not the only things to be considered. There was not enough happiness and, after all, happiness was the most important thing.

"I'm going to leave this place," said Danny one evening just after the Black Shadows had come creeping out. "Are you coming with me, Nanny Meadow Mouse?"

"Indeed I am," replied Nanny.

Once more they scampered for the big straw stack in the barn yard

"You know we can't get back if we want to," said Danny.

"I'm glad of it," replied Nanny. "Just now I feel as if I don't want to see another ear of corn as long as I live. When do we start?"

"Now," replied Danny. "You follow me."

So Danny led the way. It was a long jump for such a little fellow, but he landed on the grass unhurt, and Nanny followed him. Once more they scampered for the big strawstack in the barnyard, for under that they knew they would be safe. There they could plan how to get over to the barn.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

America's Safeguard, Our Common School

Mr. Editor:—We hear on all sides, and we know the statement true, that America's greatest need today is a melting-pot in order that this nation may become one people instead of remaining as it now is a great congeries of all sorts.

The wisdom and foresight of our forefathers provided us with an adequate and effectual agency for this end—namely, the common-school. In the common-school the youth of our land without respect to their parents' riches or poverty, of whatsoever race or religious affiliation meet on equal terms, and learn thereby to know and respect one another, and there form associations and companionships that enable them in mature life to work unitedly in mutual confidence for our beloved country.

The common-schools in thus making us one people are the safeguard of our common liberties. Shall we despise this precious heritage?

FRANK PALMER.

Norwich, Nov. 9, 1925.

Figures of Progress

We occupy only 5.7 per cent of the world's territory and represent only about 6.2 per cent of the world's total population. Yet we produce 60 per cent of the world's pig iron, 53 per cent of all copper, 43 per cent of all coal. The $930,000,000 of new life insurance written in August, 1925, was more than double the amount purchased in August, 1921, only four years ago.—Thrift Magazine.

Rising Tide of Crime

Current reports in the press show a rising tide of crime throughout the United States. It seems within the bounds of truth to say that never before in the history of this country has there been as much general crime as now, and there is nothing at hand to indicate that conditions will not go from bad to worse.

A typical condition exists in Chicago, where, according to the head of the Chicago Crime Commission, crime costs the city $600,000,000 a year.

If there is anything in the functions of government more important than the life and safety of the citizen it has not yet become apparent.

We are fond of thinking of ourselves as a nation capable of defeating any foreign foe.

Let us emulate our prowess by showing that we can lick the enemy within our borders.—Thrift Magazine.

Siamese Trade Improves

Foreign trade at the port of Bangkok for August showed some improvement as compared with the trade of the preceding month, according to cable advices received by the Department of commerce from Vice Consul C. C. Hansen, Bangkok. Due to an increase in imports of general merchandise imports for the month totaled 11,540,000 ticals an advance of slightly more than 2,000,000 ticals over the July figure of 9,533,000 ticals.

Exports advanced by 247,000 ticals. Continued unfavorable conditions in China retarded rice movements, and exports of this commodity declined by 811,000 ticals from the July figure. Other native export products, however, increased by 1,000,000 ticals as compared with the preceding month. Local business conditions reflect a more optimistic tone, and recent rains have improved the growers' outlook.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory for the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

ART STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEMORIAL FOR OZIAS DODGE

The Norwich Art Students' association at a public meeting at the Converse art gallery Monday evening paid fitting tribute to the memory of Ozias Dodge, widely known artist and art critic, and for years director of the art school connected with the Norwich Free Academy. The memorial program was given in the large room on the second floor of the art gallery and attractively arranged about the walls of the room was an exhibit of Mr. Dodge's paintings and etchings. Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins, president of the Norwich Art Students' association, presided. Tribute to Mr. Dodge's memory was paid by five speakers all of whom were personally acquainted with the late artist. Mrs. Higgins presented as the first speaker, Henry A. Tirrell, principal of the Norwich Free academy.

I came to Norwich in 1896, and I believe Mr. Dodge came to Norwich in 1893, said Mr. Tirrell. I came to know him as director of the art school. Mr. Dodge was a very thorough man, Mr. Tirrell said. He believed in teaching the grammar of a subject before he attempted to teach the literature of a subject. Mr. Tirrell said he was greatly impressed by Mr. Dodge's practicability. He was very successful in that he was practicable. Mr. Dodge was very earnest. I wish to bear testimony to Mr. Dodge as a former teacher and a very efficient director of the art school.

Miss Trumbull, next presented by Mrs. Higgins, paid tribute to Mr. Dodge as a teacher. Miss Trumbull read several letters from former students of Mr. Dodge who spoke in very complimentary terms of Mr. Dodge as an artist, instructor, and friend.

Miss Nancy E. Lucas spoke briefly on "Mr. Dodge in the Art Association." My first remembrance of Mr. Dodge was when he invited us (the art association) to his studio in the Central building and Miss Lucas I well remember going to the studio.

It was characteristic of Mr. Dodge that his criticisms were so constructive that they led us in the right direction. He never criticized harshly. Miss Lucas spoke of the many talks and lectures he gave to the members of the association and of the active part he took in forming the programme for a number of the association meetings. He strived for high ideals in the association, rather than for numbers in the membership. He stood for the highest ideals in art.

His Work as Forester

Mrs. Higgins presented as the next speaker, Philip Buttrick of the Connecticut State forestry association, who fore tribute to Mr. Dodge on "His Work as a Forester." Mr. Buttrick said:

In speaking at this memorial service to Mr. Dodge, on behalf of the Connecticut forestry association, in which he was long a member, an officer and an inspiration, I trust that it will not be out of place to mention him first in the capacity in which he was best known—as an artist—before discussing him in his capacity as a forester.

There is a common saying: "Art is long, by which I suppose is meant that the artist must work and struggle through long years to win to perfection in his chosen field. There is no royal road to achievement in art any more than there is a royal road to geometry. To undertake the long, hard trail to success, the artist must have two of the greatest of all virtues—courage and persistence—courage and persistence to conquer himself—his shrinking and the indifference of the public.

To know that our friend, Ozias Dodge, was a brave and tenacious man, it is sufficient to know that he was an artist, but there is added evidence in the fact that he was also a forester, for if art is long, forestry is infinitely longer. For slowly as it comes, a man has the chance to gain recognition as an artist in his lifetime. After his death, his fame endures long beyond the time his last canvas has faded to the dull brown of the eternal dust and his last marble has crumbled away to mingle with the earth from whence it came.

But the forester is not so fortunate. He plants trees, or preserves those already living from their enemies—to what end? Not that, marked with their author's name, they shall be carefully guarded in galleries and collections, to be a thing of joy for centuries, but that men may enjoy them for a little while as living things, and then them identity and their origin forgotten, cut and use them for the multitude of products which they supply. Once fallen, they are soon forgotten, but the man who planted or cared for them has even more quickly passed out of memory—usually unhonored and unsung. When he planted them, he was lightly regarded by his fellow men. When they were used, he had long been in his grave.

When the great artists of the Renaissance, whose names are household words, and whose works we admire in the great galleries, were painting, the art of forestry was just beginning. The trees which the early foresters planted have done their work, served man and passed away, as do all living things. The men who planted them sleep in unknown graves—their names scarcely known.

If honor and fame come to the successful artist and but little or not at all to the forester, the material rewards which are possible for the artist are likewise denied the forester. It is true that great works of art increase in value after the death of the artist, but they also have a considerable financial value while he is yet living. The products of the forester's art, on the other hand increase in value but slowly. In a century or more they bring a handsome profit to their possessor, but the planter worked for a living wage, or even used his own means to bring them into being. He must take his profit in the joy of public service.

It is in this way that I like to think of Ozias Dodge, as indeed of all artists and all foresters—as public servants. The one helping to make life more worth while by creating beautiful objects, the other by making earth herself more beautiful and providing future generations with certain material products without which they will be too poor to enjoy beauty of any kind.

All honor, therefore, to Ozias Dodge, thrice brave, thrice patient and thrice useful. Artist—forester—and servant of the common good.

If a memorial were to be erected to him, I can think of nothing better than to place a simple tablet in one of the plantations which he has made, and upon it inscribe the words used in St. Paul's Cathedral in the memorial stone, to commemorate its great architect: "If you seek a monument, look about you."

Of Mr. Dodge's service to the Forestry association it is necessary to say but little, as it was as his service to all those organizations with which he was allied. Diligent—loyal—patient and constructive. His peculiar place at our board meetings cannot easily be taken by another, and his loss is a personal one to us all.

It is not only of Ozias Dodge, artist, forester and servant of the common good that I would speak tonight, but on my own behalf, of Ozias Dodge, a personal friend. I count it a great privilege to have known him and a great loss not to have known him longer and better; but at least he was my friend, yet in that respect I enjoy no rare distinction, for Ozias was a friend of all mankind, and few of us have so great a distinction.

"Mr. Dodge, the Townaman" was the topic on which Greavenor Ely, a close friend of Mr. Dodge, spoke. Ozias Dodge, Townaman, said Mr. Ely. The term seems to me to be particularly appropriate. He was never a "joiner." He never aspired to public office. He disliked politics and politicians as such. He was, nevertheless, one of the best informed men I have ever known. As a townaman he was an ideal member of the community. He seemed to be thoroughly informed on all sorts of subjects. He was very naturally interested in trees and in any project to beautify the town.

As a neighbor and friend to the community in which he lived I don't think he had an equal. People went to him for all sorts of advice and they never went away lacking. I think he was the most versatile man I have ever known. I know of no one who can take the unique place he held in the community.

Mr. Dodge As An Etcher

Following the tribute by Mr. Elv, Mrs. Higgins presented Valentine Chappell of New London, who spoke on "Mr. Dodge, the Etcher," in part as follows:

It has often fallen to my lot to speak of etchers and etchings, and it has always been an easy task, for there are many etchings I have loved, and many etchers I have admired— and the years of a collector are long years, and the mile-stones of his progress are the prints he acquires, and the red-letter days are memories of conquests gained in the shop and in the auction-room. But the savor of it is, after all, in the friendships gained of congenial souls, loving the same things of beauty, and the same forms of art.

Tonight there is a great element of sadness in thinking of prints and printers, for as I look back, over the years which I have spent collecting etchings, I can find no more vivid memory than of that bright wonderful evening when Mr. Dodge looked at to whim we have always turned for time. I have a brother whose enthusiasm I can always count on when things of beauty are before his eyes, and my brother and I have a friend, now far away from us as miles are measured, to whom we have always turned for enthusiasm and advice. But true print-lovers I have found, are few and far between, and it was with an electric thrill that I watched Mr. Dodge turn over my prints—to admire or criticize—to accept or reject—with an almost uncanny accuracy of judgment. There are many etchers who are not good judges of prints, just as there are many painters who cannot see beyond the confines of their own studios, but in Mr. Dodge there was an artist charitable and catholic to see the good, and sure to see the bad in all art. Great names did not fool him, nor was the talent of a new-comer ever unappreciated. Truly I think that he was a great critic, and as I learned to know him and his work, I knew that it was so because he was a great artist too, and a great etcher—and his work was fine, and he did it for love, so that he made visible for us on the printed page the beauty of nature as he saw it interpreted through the cleanly of his mind. There is a true and quiet beauty about his work—a quality of still New England days. He could not have drawn trees as he did if he had not loved trees. His hills and rocks are solid and true, and back of them the distance stretches out in a very real perspective. His lanes and wood paths lead our fancy down their winding ways, and we see them disappear into the forest amid flickers of light.

Mr. Dodge was especially successful in the introduction of color into etchings, and in this line his work is very notable. A particularly beautiful example of the use of color is seen in the Blue Pool. Ten colored etchings are shown in the collection.

Twelve figure subjects appear in the exhibition, several of these being charming studies from the nude. One of these, and perhaps the most full of subtle charm and grace, is called Life's Dawn, which is printed from the best plate made by Mr. Dodge before his death. Of this etching, a critic in the French publication, Ilevue de beal, and du Beau writes: "At this year's exhibition of the Chicago Society of Etchers, Ozias Dodge showed Life's Dawn. It is useless to try to describe this work with high sounding words; far better let yourself become faturated with the charm of the composition. A charm so sure and so compelling that it seems to break all bounds and to radiate that glowing restraint which is so characteristic of the artist's rare gift."

Ozias Dodge also uses color in his etchings. His exhibitions have always been notable. His mastery of his art is sure and convincing. His compositions always original yet carefully thought out express such depths of feeling that they hold and draw us to him. He is one of the most interesting etchers represented in the exhibition.

To this tribute nothing can be added except a personal one from those who knew and honored him in the city of his adoption and who mourned afresh the loss of the master, the citizen and the modest, kindly friend, who was always ready to aid in any undertaking which would further a better understanding of the beautiful in nature or in art.

Sleeps Like a Child

Thanks to New Harmless Treatment.

We all remember how soundly we slept as children and how we bounced out of bed in the morning, bright, refreshed and ready for the day's play.

And you can do the same thing now if you will follow the example of thousands everywhere—take just a short treatment with the wonderful new preparation called Neura.

Neura is an easy-to-take pink pellet that does not contain any opiates or harmful habit-forming drugs of any kind. Yet the very first treatment usually gives wonderful results.

So remarkable have been the results from Neura that it is now being dispensed by Lee & Osgood Co., and all good druggists with an absolute guarantee to return your full purchase price if the very first package does not give you deep, restful sleep. Don't toss and turn for hours. Get a good night's sleep by taking Neura today.

REV. G. G. M'GEE IS GOING TO VIRGINIA

A farewell service for Rev. G. G. McGee, pastor of Mt. Calvary Baptist church, will be held on Thursday at 7.45 at the church.

Almost two years ago Rev. Mr. McGee was called to the pastorate of Mt. Calvary Baptist church. After a successful pastorate here, he has resigned to take up work in Virginia. Along with his ministerial work there he will teach in the high school department of the Rappahannock Industrial Academy, at Ozsana, Va.

While in Norwich Rev. Mr. McGee has made many friends among both races, who regret to have him go.

He will take his leave in the near future.

SEEKS DIVORCE FOR HER HUSBAND'S DESERTION

Mitzel Nossek Bailey of New London has brought suit for divorce from Alden Edgerton Bailey of Hartford, whom she married Oct. 15, 1926. She alleges desertion on April 15, 1930. She alleges desertion on April 15, 1921, and asks the custody of a four-year-old daughter. The suit is returnable in the superior court in December.

WEDDING
Cody-Sullivan

At the Sacred Heart church, Monday morning at 8 o'clock, at a nuptial high mass, Clifford Cody, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cody of Baltic, and Miss Stella Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Emma Sullivan of South B St., Taftville, were united in marriage by Rev. John Miley, assistant pastor of the church. Miss Alice Frechette, the church organist, played the wedding march.

The couple was attended by Patrick Sullivan, a brother of the bride and Walter Cody, a brother of the groom. The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe de chine and carried pink roses and carnations. Following the wedding ceremony there was a breakfast at the home of the bride's mother on South B street. The bride received many handsome and useful gifts. Each of the attendants was presented a substantial gold piece.

During the day the bride and groom left for a wedding tour to New York and other places and on their return they will reside in a newly furnished home in Baltic. They will be at home to their friends after December 1st.

DARTMOUTH IS ONE OF MIGHTIEST TEAMS IN EASTERN FOOTBALL WORLD TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 9. (AP)—Dartmouth not only dominates the eastern football arena as her team prepares this week to invade Chicago in quest of national laurels but the big green scoring machine, through uncanny perfection of its forward passing attack, has revealed itself as one of the mightiest of the modern game.

Standing at the top of the list with an unblemished slate, Dartmouth has rolled up 307 points in seven games, an average of approximately 44 for each contest while opponents have been at down with an average of only three points.

The Green's latest exploit has been to average more than a point a minute against such a first rate opponent as Cornell, whose Dobie-coached forces themselves hold the modern high scoring record.

Back in 1921, with George Pfann and Eddie Kaw, All-American stars, leading the attack Cornell ran up 392 points in eight contests, an average of nearly 50 points a game. The University of California amassed 397 in 1922 but it took the Golden Bears nine games to do this so that their average of 44 is comparable more to Dartmouth's mark than Cornell's.

Dartmouth's scoring average may shrink abit this week against Chicago if the latter's defense is able to cope with the Green's aerial drive. But the Hanover eleven should have little trouble staring at the top of the list in this side of the Rockies. Beyond that barrier, Southern California, rolling up 359 points so far in eight games, appears certain of setting the pace nationally.

While Dartmouth is seeking Chicago's scalp, Yale and Pennsylvania pick up the fight this week to gain some of the rapidly dwindling portion of eastern gridiron glory. These two elevens alone appear to have a chance of disputing the Green's claims to the mythical eastern title, but to do that Yale must score convincingly over Princeton and Harvard, while Pennsylvania must conquer Pittsburgh and Cornell. Neither has an easy assignment but Yale's chances of strengthening her position seem the more favorable.

Syracuse and Colgate, both tied once but sharing with Darthmouth the distinction of being unbeaten, also meet in their annual struggle next Saturday to decide which will stay in the vanguard of the eastern array.

The following statistics tell the story of eastern circumstances as the season approaches its climax:

AGGIES PLAY THEIR BIG GAME OF SEASON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 9—The Connecticut Aggies will play their objective game of the season next Saturday, when Rhode Island State is met at Kingston. The event promises to be a big fight in the Connecticut scheddle, as classes have been suspended for the day, and the entire student body will follow the team to Kingston by special train.

Coach Dole followed his usual custom and gave the team a day off from practice this afternoon. Work in preparation for the Rhode Island game will get under way tomorrow, and a fairly light—week's work has been planned by Dole. Very little scrimmage will be attempted as the Aggie team is now in top form.

The New Hampshire contest at Manchester last Saturday was a gruelling one and Connecticut's small squad came through in a more or less battered condition, though no serious injuries were sustained. Nanfeldt, the star tackle, suffered a strained ankle; Daly has an injured wrist; and Logan twisted his knee. Other than these, the Aggies have no injuries of any consequence.

Tomorrow the second team will scrimmage with the freshmen, while the first eleven will drill on new plays for the Rhode Island game. On Wednesday, the plans call for a short varsity scrimmage, in which the new plays will be tried out, and on Thursday the team will receive its final workout prior to the Rhode Island contest. No practice will be held Friday, as the freshmen will be playing school.

CHANGE MADE IN YALE LINE FOR PRINCETON GAME

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—The first change in the Yale varsity line, preparatory to the gridiron battle with Princeton next Saturday, was made by the football coaches today when James S. Coleman, of Macon, Ga., was moved up to right end, taking the place of Fred Potts.

The return today of Guy Richards, regular right guard, who has been out of the game since his injury in last week's scrimmage, makes it probable that every Yale regular will be in condition for the 41st clash between the "Big Three" rivals. Richards's return to the line, it was said, will add materially to the strength of the Blue forward combination.

The coaches made it plain today that the slight injury suffered by Bennett, quarterback, in the Maryland game will not keep him out of the contest Saturday.

Eleven hundred tickets will be offered to the public tomorrow morning. This public sale was made possible by the return of a large block of tickets by Princeton. They will be sold two to a person.

FOUR TEAMS ENTERED IN INDOOR LEAGUE

The Tigers indoor baseball team wishes to announce that they would like to enter the indoor baseball league being formed by Battery B with games to be played at the Armory. With the Tigers coming into the league the total membership now is four teams, namely: Battery B, Joe Faber's All Stars, Nutmegs A.C. and Tigers. The opening of this league is expected to take place in the near future and home and home games are expected.

PARK CITY GIRLS ISSUE BASKETBALL CHALLENGE

The Original Park City Girls' Basketball team of Bridgeport, Conn., city champions for the last six seasons, have opened their season and challenge any girls' quintet desiring bookings throughout the state.

The personnel of the team is composed of some of the best material obtainable and is being molded into another championship team by Coach Max Fitelson, a member of the Y. M. H. A. team of Bridgeport. Mr. Fitelson is rated as one of the best all around players in the state and is a keen student of the game, understanding thoroughly.

Miss Anna Casper, a member of the team since its origin 6 seasons ago, will again be at the helm and is anxious to hear from any team in the state wishing to play the Original team or the Park City Separates a snappy junior combine.

Last season the Original Park City team compiled an enviable record, playing a total of 40 games during a period of five months of play. They hold a win streak record of 18 consecutive games and are striving for another successful year.

The K. C. gym has been obtained for home bookings. Any team expecting to organize or one that has formed already is asked to communicate with Miss Casper at her home, 22 Williston street, Bridgeport so she can arrange her schedule.

ACADEMY BEARS NO ILL FEELING TOWARD BULKELEY

The article written bout the Academy-Bulkeley officials appearing in The Bulletin of Monday morning might convey the impression that Norwich people and the Academy bore ill feeling toward the Bulkeley team and school. Such is not the case. The righteous wrath of Academy students and sympathizers is directed solely at two men, the referee and umpire. Every one agrees that Bulkeley played a good game but were assisted through the laxness of both the referee and umpires in calling and interpreting plays.

The officials at the game were Central Board officials. The Central Board is endeavoring to standardize amateur athletics in Connection and no reflection should be made upon the board or its work through the conduct of its officials at the game Saturday. Mr. Keefe, who was head linesman, performed his duties in a creditable fashion and his position was a difficult one as he was a graduate of Bulkeley, a fact which no doubt led to some of the criticism of this official. Mr. Keefe should not be classed as inefficient with the Hart brothers.

There has been a rumor of a break in athletic relations between the Academy and Bulkeley but it is sincerely honed by Norwich people that such a thing will not be brought about. There is keen rivalry between these two schools which should not be broken up by differences brought about by the inefficiency of two officials. A protest will no doubt be made to the Bulkeley faculty as well as to the Central Board.

ACADEMY JUNIORS CLASH WITH WHEELER TODAY

The Academy Juniors, who for the past three weeks have been drilling hard under Coach MacLaren, will play Wheeler High at North Stonington this Tuesday afternoon. Both teams are nearly the same in average weight with Wheeler having considerable advantage in experience. Today's contest will be the Juniors first game this season and they have been put through long, hard preparations for it.

No definite lineup was to be had for either team Monday evening. But Coach MacLaren, however announced that he would select his team from the following players, who will make the trip to North Stonington: Aldrich, Brick, F. Fox, Robertson, Berghinzo, Navick, Sechtef, Pankowski, Brewer, Perkins, Fox, Hasiam, McCarthy, Kealy, and Johnson.

MADISON SQUARE PROMOTERS GIVE UP TUNNEY BOUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—Madison Square Garden promoters today announced that they had abandoned the hope of signing Gene Tunney and Young Stribling for a fifteen-round heavyweight fight at a Christmas fund show on Dec. 23.

Unwillingness on the part of Stribling's parents to apply to the New York boxing board for special permission for the Georgia boxer to take the bout was explained as the reason for breaking off negotiations. A state ruling limiting boxers under 21 years to six-round contests affected Stribling, who does not reach his majority until three days after the date of the show.

TOLLEY BREAKS FOUR RECORDS AT OXFORD

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Cyril Tolley, one of the foremost of British golfers, broke the course record at Oxford University Saturday four times. Yesterday afternoon there was a scratch competition at 36 holes, during which Tolley made a 78 in the first round and a 72 in the second.

Miss Joyce Wethered led the women with 78 and 76.

Sir Ernest Holderness, twice national amateur champion, was seventh in the competition with an 82 in both rounds.

TUNNEY'S BROTHER ALSO PACKS A GREAT PUNCH

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The Tunney wallop runs in the family.

Tomas Tunney, motorcycle officer and brother of Gene, leading aspirant for Jack Dempsey's heavyweight boxing title, furnished proof of this today after taking four men into custody single handed. Three of the four tried to prevent Tunney from arresting the driver of the automobile which collided with a taxicab but the policeman took them all into custody. Three paid fines of $2 in Tombs court today.

WALKER'S TITLE WILL BE AT STAKE ON NOV. 25

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Under a new ruling of the New Jersey state boxing commission, compelling all champions as well as their challengers in bouts here to enter the ring within their class weight limit, Mickey Walker's welterweight title will be at stake in his bout with Sailor Friedman of Chicago at the Newark Armory November 25.

Walker and Friedman must scale at or under 147, the welterweight limit, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the fight.

Since no official decision is handed down, Walker can lose his crown only by a foul or a knockout.

A Challenge

The Broadway second team challenges the St. Patric's seconds for a game for Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock for the Chelsea grounds. If challenge is accepted answer through this paper.

INJURED HAND CAUSES TERRIS TO CALL OFF BOUTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—Returning here from a fight with Basil Galans at St. Louis last week, Sid Terris, New York lightweight, announced today that an injured right hand had compelled him to call off several prospective matches in California. One of his most important bouts was to have been with Ace Hudkins.

Terris said that the injury was suffered in the second round of the Galans bout. He does not expect to box again for four or five weeks, and will have an X-ray photograph taken of his hand tomorrow.

EASTERN LEAGUE MEETS AT WATERBURY TODAY

WATERBURY, Nov. 9—The annual meeting of the Eastern league will be held here tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Officers for the coming season and new business will be transacted at the session. President Daniel O'Neil is expected to be re-elected for another term.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Eastern league baseball writers will also be held here tomorrow.

Lizzies Beat Broadway

The Elizabeth street school team had an easy time defeating Broadway school 28 to 6 Monday afternoon. The stars of the game were Sherry, Radinsky and Serafin for the winners and Flaherty and McFarland for Broadway.

The Lizzies challenge St. Patrick's school for a game this week. If challenge is accepted call Louis Zeiler at the school.

PRINCE ALBERT never owned a teething-ring, because it never had teeth! And never will. The Prince Albert process cut out bite and parch right at the beginning. And your tongue says "Thank you!" every time you load up that old jimmy-pipe with cool, comfortable P. A.

Watch the sun break through the smoke-clouds the minute you get going with good old P. A. Cool and sweet and fragrant, P. A.'s true-blue smoke zooms up the stem and throws pipe-grouches for a loss. You'll feel like a boy with his first week's pay. Never any tobacco that rang the bell like that before.

Men who gave up trying to smoke a pipe have tried again with Prince Albert . . . and stuck! Because P. A. has what smokers want—deep-down satisfaction and no regrets. Genuine pipe-pleasure and no mistake. You'll say so.

And not only do you get quality in Prince Albert, but quantity as well. There are TWO full ounces in every tidy red tin. Just take a look at the U. S. revenue stamp. It's there in Uncle Sam's own wording. Get yours today. Every minute counts when you're just hankering for a real smoke.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Look at the U. S. revenue stamp—there are TWO full ounces in every tin.

MARANVILLE IS SOLD TO BROOKLYN DODGERS FOR WAIVER PRICE OF $4,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Walter J. (Rabbit) Maranville, veteran Chicago national shortstop and manager of the Cubs for a time last season, has been secured by Brooklyn for the waiver price of $4,000.

The Brooklyn club announced today it also had obtained William Marriott, third baseman, by the same route from the Boston Nationals.

The release of Maranville by the Cubs at the small waiver price came as a surprise to baseball men. It marks one of the first important moves by the new Chicago manager, Joe McCarthy, but was declared by Brooklyn officials to have no significance so far as the management of the local club is concerned.

For more than a decade, Maranville has been among the National League's outstanding infielders, first as an important cog in the championship Boston Braves of 1914, later with Pittsburgh and this season with Chicago where he replaced Bill Killefer as pilot in mid-season.

The rabbit did not have much success at the helm of the Cubs and gave way to George Gibson for the closing part of the campaign. His release at so cheap a price now indicates there was no bidding among rival clubs for his services.

Maranville went to the Cubs after the 1924 season in the big deal with transferred Cooper and Grimm to the Cubs from the Pirates in exchange for Aldridge, Grantham and Wellhaus.

COACH WHITNEY

ACADEMY TEAM HAS SHOWN REMARKABLE IMPROVEMENT

Those who saw the Academy team early in the season and also saw the same team in action Saturday against Bulkeley remarked on the wonderful improvement in the squad and were loud in their praise of Coach Whitney in developing as pretty a football team as the Academy has had in a number of years.

When Coach Whitney took over the coaching of football at the Academy he was confronted by the task of whipping a practically green team into shape. His task was by no means an easy one for very few of his candidates knew even the rudiments of football and what was more discouraging they were very slow to learn. At times it seemed as if it was a hopeless task but by continual driving Coach Whitney has at last produced results. Now at the local school there is a team that is second to none in the eastern part of the state including Bulkeley and Windham. In Saturday's game there is no one but what agrees that the Academy team outplayed Bulkeley from start to finish but the local boys were out-refereed.

The Academy played a style brand of football against Bulkeley which reflected with credit on the coaching of Mr. Whitney. It was very unfortunate that the Academy schedule was so arranged that two of the most important of the interscholastic league games were early in the season when the team was still green and inexperienced. Had the league games been played later in the season it would have been better for the Academy as well as for Westerly and Stonington who were also forced to accept early season dates.

The Academy has one open date, that of Thanksgiving day and Coach Whitney is endeavoring to secure either Bulkeley or Windham for this date, with the hopes that Bulkeley will accept as he is anxious to prove that the Academy is the better team when playing under impartial officials.

The Academy record to date is not so impressive but it will be noticed that the last half of the games played there has been marked improvement. The Academy has played six games, won two, lost three, and tied one. The record follows:

Academy		Opponents
6	Westerly	17
0	Westerly	11
0	Stonington	0
26	Plainfield	0
14	Chapman	13
12	Bulkeley	13
62		54

Broadway Seconds Win

The Broadway school second team defeated the Falls school team 14 to seven Monday afternoon in a game marked by the brilliant playing of Sylvester Bellone and Ted Vulkares, the latter making two runs of 50 yards for touchdowns.

Joins Hole-in-One Club

BOSTON, Nov. 9—The first twenty five years are the hardest, in the opinion of Fred Low, Unicorn Country club professional. Low has just joined the hole in one club after failing during the past 26 years he has been playing golf to pass the initiation test.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

A new French pugilist in this country seeking to profit by the favorable impression left behind by Georges Carpentier and Eugene Criqui, makes his debut in New York tonight. Lucien Vines, the latest invader, has Charlie Rosen, rugged Gotham tight weight, as his foe in a 12-round bout.

Spain, which has sent few boxers and manly bull fight stories to these shores, has an entry on the same card in Vincent Sanches, a bantamweight. His initial American test will be furnished by George Buldue of Maine.

Coach Bill Roper of Princeton, whose Tigers routed Harvard Saturday, is opposed to scouting. "I don't know of any way to keep a man from looking up and telling what he sees, but I'd like to see scouting sent to the ash heap just the same," he says.

Fordham has replaced Columbia as New York's biggest 1925 contribution to eastern football. Undefeated this season, the maroon eleven by a victory over Holy Cross has gained recognition as a powerful scoring machine and one that might have bowled over many of the so-called major teams.

Cecil Walker, Australian rider, is the latest to sign a contract to pedal in the first six-day race of the new Madison Square Garden. He won 28 races during the summer bike season.

Tex Rickard, deciding to make way on high priced fighters, admits he "is $35,000 on the Walker-Shade and Sattery-Berlenbach bouts last summer. "I am through taking all the risks and giving the fighters most of the money," he declares.

In spite of the fact that Princeton's successful aerial attack against Harvard startled Yale coaches, word has come out of New Haven that the Eli forces may start their second team against the Tiger. The Rockne idea of permitting the substitutes to break down the rival defense for a fresh first team had appealed to Coach Jones.

OIL FIELD BOILERS PRODUCE HIGH PRESSURE COLD GAS

SNYDER, Tex., Nov. 9.—A vast reservoir of "cold", non-inflammable gas has been discovered in the oil fields of this section and is being used to operate machinery and pumps.

The gas is said to insure the most economical operation in the history of oil production. Small wells, which otherwise would require more oil for their boilers than they could produce are now operating at a profit.

For a time the gas mystified oil men and chemists, but it finally has been analyzed as an air containing about 93 per cent. nitrogen.

One of the strong sights here is to see boilers producing pressure without fire. The gas is run into the boilers and in two minutes a pressure of 125 pounds is attained. From the boiler the "air" is carried under pressure through the usual steam lines to the bumps and machinery.

The air has been used to drill three different wells within a radius of three miles. Additional producers have all struck this gas in sufficient quantities to finish their wells.

Men in the field use the air for anything steam would accomplish. All they need to do is to turn the air into the boiler, which merely acts as a reservoir to equalize pressure. It also is used to inflate automobile tires and refrigerators.

Watermelons, milk, water, or anything the men wish to cool is placed under the "air" use of an engine, which is covered with fire instead of being hot with steam. A watermelon left under the exhaust for two hours will freeze solid.

The air itself is not actually cold, but the release of pressure produces the effect of cold, similar to the process of manufacturing ice with ammonia under pressure.

The gas makes between three and five million cubic feet a day, from the first well, with a rock pressure of more than 300 pounds.

CAMERA'S EYE WILL BE ON RECKLESS DRIVERS

Several motor vehicle operators face the prospect of being disciplined directly by the state motor vehicle department as a result of investigations of complaints arising from their method of driving here going to and from the Yale-Army football game at New Haven. Private citizens, evidently encouraged by the department's stated desire to have violations responsibly reported, sent in many complaints during the past week and inquiry has shown that a large percentage of the complaints were well founded.

Irrefutable evidence of any reckless driving that may occur along certain stretches of state highways leading to New Haven during the procession of cars expected to go to the Yale-Princeton game next Saturday will be before officials of the motor vehicle department within a few days after the game. It may be in the form of motion picture films to be taken of traffic at dangerous points on some of the state highways. The primary purpose of the department in getting these pictures is to get a permanent record of what may be the peak traffic for 1925 in Connecticut, that the careful analysis and study when reproduced on a screen in the department and then for public exhibition, with the conclusions reached, wherever desired in the state.

Facilities for doing this work have been furnished to the department for use in its safety work by the Hartley Corporation, of which Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins of Norfolk is president. The camera will be set up at different locations along the important highways to photograph the traffic as it comes. If instances of reckless driving or selfish cutting in should occur within the scope of the camera, they will be registered on the films to go before officials of the department and it is not unlikely that the registration numbers of the cars of the offending drivers will be discernible. Judging from the results obtained in taking moving pictures of other typical traffic scenes in different cities of the state. Such evidence, thus accidentally secured, would be all that the department would need to proceed with disciplinary measures where they might be deemed necessary.

The department records show that 362 accidents caused by "cutting in" were reported in Connecticut last year, and that many of these happened in the months of the big football games.

INDUSTRIAL CO. STOCK SALE GETS UNDERWAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 9.—Willimantic Industrial company drive for the sale of $60,000 of new stock in order to meet the expense of a large addition to its building which is occupied by the thriving Rossi Velvet company got away to an enthusiastic start Monday evening of members of the Chamber of Commerce. Following a bonteous supper served by the Woman's Relief Corps general Chairman James B. Fullerton methodically completed the organization. The general superintendents for the sale and their captains, each one of whom had a team of five men are: James B. Fullerton captains, Samuel Chesbro, Otto B. Robinson, A. J. Martineau, Raymond A. Parker and Andrew C. Rossi, Roland B. Jordan, superintendent, captains, James F. Mustard, P. D. Donohue, J. B. Riordan, Louis H. Arnold and Edwin J. Donnelly. As a send off practically all of those present subscribed several hundred dollars on the spot. The work is to be completed Friday evening. Mr. Weatherhead explained the Chamber of Commerce part in the drive. George F. Taylor, president of the industrial company, accounted for the relations of the company with the Rossi Velvet firm. The industrial company owns three quarters of the stock and the Rossi Velvet company one quarter. The building is leased on a basis of 6 per cent. income. This per cent is paid on the stock leaving a yearly surplus of two per cent. The get the spirit talk was everything that the name implies and was given by Edwin J. Donnelly, a stock salesman by profession.

WESTERLY

Sewage main installation will begin Thursday of this week on Dixon St., Sewer main drains will be laid to connect with the Narragansett avenue sewer drain already laid. Easy excavation work was found on Railroad avenue and drains have been rapidly laid and will be finished at a point in front of the walk to the Rhode Island state armory on Dixon street.

Joseph Gingerelli 8, son of William Gingerelli of 83 Oak street, sustained a bruised and skinned knee Monday noon when he dashed across High St., when the High Street Grammar school was excused for the noon recess, when he collided with the left front wheel of the Buick sedan driven by A. Julian Crandall of Ashaway. Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called and the boy was taken to his home. Westerly Police Patrolman Robert Kessel investigated the accident.

While at work at Pleasant View beach, on the addition to the Wigwam hotel, Monday morning about 10:30 o'clock, Edward S. Wilcox, residing at 16 Spruce street, suffered a stroke of apoplexy. Word was sent to the Westerly Sanitary corps and the ambulance removed him to the Westerly hospital, after Dr. John Rybi and Miss Lucy M Crowley, executive secretary of the Westerly chapter of the American Red Cross had made a quick trip to the beach. Mr. Wilcox died at the Westerly hospital Monday afternoon at about 1:30 o'clock without his regaining consciousness.

Records in the office of the Westerly town clerk show: Nov. 7, Richard J. Butler to James Gradilone, a certain lot or parcel of land on the northerly side of Batterson avenue, Lots Nos. 39 and 40 on plan of building sites of Rhode Island Granite Works.

Nov. 6, Heirs of Almada A. Saunders to George E. Phillips of Providence a triangular lot or parcel of land at Pleasant View Beach, on northerly side of Atlantic avenue and adjoining property recently deeded to Pleasant View Beach Fire district.

The death of Annie C. Browning, wife of Dr. George V. Foster, formerly of Westerly, occurred on Sunday afternoon in New York, where she had been ill with pneumonia. Summer visitors to Watch Hill and Westerly residents some thirty years ago, Dr. Foster and wife, occupied the Westerly residence of Charles Perry on Margin, while Mr. Perry, a brother-in-law, occupied his summer cottage at Weekapaug.

Granite City camp, No. 9150, Modern Woodmen of America, will hold its annual roll call this (Tuesday) evening at Stillman hall, on High street. An elaborate program has been prepared, consisting of a piano solo by Edward Haggerty, vocal solos by Albert Sidebottom, H. I. Pendlebury and H. D. Kennedy and selections by Charles Griffen, humorist of Providence.

Westerly Lodge, No. 676, B. P. O. E. will observe Elks' Memorial day on Sunday, Dec. 6th. The committee in charge consists of L. C. Purcell, Chesvil Novogrod, C. Leo Hizgins, William Donovan, Charles Goldberg, Richard F. Lenihan, Daniel Ashworth, Americo Monti, Charles H. Cushman and John H. Murphy.

Deborah Chapter, No. 4, O. E. S., Mrs. Eleanor F. Mitchell, worthy matron, meets this (Tuesday) evening at the Masonic rooms on High street. The regular business session will be followed by the serving of refreshments and a social hour.

Harold L. McAuslin and Truman Beckwith of Providence were Westerly visitors on Monday.

Thomas McKenzie spent Monday afternoon and evening in Providence.

Many Westerly Shriners attended the regular session of Palestine temple, Monday evening.

Westerly Police Patrolman and Town Sergeant George L. Madison is spending part of his vacation in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Rogers and Mrs. William Vincent of Pawcatuck left Westerly Monday to pass the winter months in Florida.

Fire in the carpentry shop of Theodore C. Dionne on Oak street was the cause for an alarm Monday night at 6 o'clock from box 66, Oak and Haswell streets. All three pieces of fire apparatus responded and when the firemen arrived the flames were coming through the roof near the chimney. The fire was soon extinguished by use of chemicals from the booster tank and the resulting damage was slight. Engineers Bonner and Passetti were joined by Westerly Fire Chief George E. Egner, who had understood that the alarm was for a fire near box 56, Dixon [illegible].

Suffered for years with acute rheumatism.

HAD RHEUMATISM FOR YEARS— FOUND HELP AT LAST

Tells how simple home treatment brought relief

Thousands of rheumatic sufferers who have tried remedy after remedy in vain, report that they have got quick, complete relief from a very simple home treatment.

"I have suffered with acute rheumatism for years," writes a man from Winchester, N. H. "After having tried various remedies, Sloan's Liniment was recommended to me, and it stopped the pain. I am quite old—past sixty years."

A little Sloan's patted on lightly—and a healing tide of fresh, germ-destroying blood is sent tingling through pain-ridden tissues. No rubbing! The medicine itself does the work.

Soon the swelling and inflammation go down. The aching stops. Almost suddenly you find yourself really free from pain, really comfortable at last. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

NOANK

The November meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Beret Jensen in Smith court. Miss Lottie Morgan, the newly elected president presided. This was an anti-narcotic meeting, and the following program was carried out: Singing, Crusade song and song of consecration, scripture reading, Miss Lottie Morgan; prayer, Miss Lizzie Potter; sing, Onward, Christian Soldiers; secretary and treasurer's report; readings, Train Up a Child, Mrs. Lois Shandoer; What Am I? Mrs. Hattie Chester; The Price He Paid, Mrs. Jerome Brown; excerpts from medical temperance leaflet, Mrs. Melinda Moeller; Reading, Boys and the Flag, Mrs. Mabel Spicer; Facts, Miss Morgan; Confession of a Very Sorry Man, Mrs. Potter; Laxness of Home Training, Mrs. Ada Pitch; Did It Pay? Mrs. Charlotte Butson. The members decided to follow the example of other unions and knit squares to form an afghan for the Soldier's hospital at Allington, near New Haven. Mrs. Ina King has charge of this matter and is asking for squares measuring six inches, or for donations of yarns in any color. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown are entertaining relatives from Providence.

Recent donors to the list of books on the shelves of the Mystic and Noank library are announced as follows by the librarian, Miss G. K. Hickey: Aesop's Fables, Rev. G. F. Townsend, gift of C. B. Hydecker; Arron Smith, Lewis Sinclair, gift of Miss Anne C Spicer. The following were presented with the compliments of the authors: An Art Philosopher's Cabinet, The Aztec God and Other Dramas, Balads and other Poems, Dante and Collected Poems, The Story of an Eskimo Dog, given in memory of Ernest Howard Baynes; the author.

Miss Elsie Porter and Miss Josephine Shandoer are to leave Thursday for the South, the trip to be made by automobile.

The annual meeting of Noank branch of the American Red Cross was held Monday evening with Mrs Charles Palmer.

Rev. Byron V. Hatfield supplied the pulpit of Noank Baptist church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Sheffield and daughters, Phebe and Shirley, were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Main.

Miss Emma Gauthier has returned to the village after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gautlier of Glasgo.

William Banks has resigned with Tourjee Bros.

Raymond Jones has gone to New York for a few days.

Buster Main is visiting Providence relatives.

Robert Tooker has returned from Shamrock, R. I.

Mason Langworthy is employed at Groton Long Point as carpenter.

The Grammar school of Noank grades 5 and 6, had a game of football Saturday afternoon at Williams field. Grade 5 won 14 to 12, both teams playing good football. E. Butson for the 6th grade getting two touchdowns and kicking the extra points. For the other side R. Merritt got two touchdowns but failed to kic kfor the extra points. The game was for the championship of the school.

Raymond Ruthiner after spending a week in Springfield, Mass., has returned home.

John McGuarne went to Block Island for the week end.

Arthur DeBaise was in East Providence recently.

William Plumstead was a recent caller in Worcester, Mass.

Those Winning Smiles

which mean so much . . . commercially, socially, are gained this new way with gleaming, white teeth

Don't believe your teeth are "naturally" dull. Just accept this 10-day test. See how dazzling white teeth and healthy gums come when film coats go.

HERE is a simple test that proves the truth of the recent dental statement that dull, "off-color" teeth can be lightened amazingly, given dazzling whiteness.

In a few days you can work a great change in the color of your teeth. Can give them clear and charming gleam.

There is a new way in tooth and gum care. A way that removes the dingy film that clouds your teeth. A film that absorbs discolorations and keeps teeth dingy looking.

Just run your tongue across your teeth. And you will feel that film. It is the great enemy of pretty teeth and healthy gums.

It clings to the teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It forms a breeding place for germs. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack, your teeth open to decay. These germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Old-time methods failed in successfully fighting film. So ugly teeth were common. You must remove it. Ordinary brushing won't do it satisfactorily. Under it are the clear, whiter teeth you envy in others.

Now modern science has perfected an effective film combatant, called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film, then removes it. It firms and protects gums; beautifies teeth quickly and correctly.

REASONS FOR GROWING SOY BEANS

Wisconsin knows 16 excellent reasons for growing soy beans and tells them in a bulletin issued by the university experiment station this summer. The success of the soy bean seems to depend upon selecting the proper variety to suit the soil conditions as well as climate and altitude. Different types of soy beans are grown for various purposes, some being superior for hay, while others are better for seed, silage, or hogging off. The farmer desiring seed is dependent either upon the advice of high class seedhouses who have experimented themselves with this popular legume whose growth is increasing rapidly over wide stretches of territory or upon their state experiment stations.

Having selected the type which seems best fitted to their purpose, the essential is to secure pure seed of the highest grade and for this the high class seedhouses of the country and reputable dealers must be depended upon. Wisconsin finds the varieties cover pretty well all conditions in the Badger state. The experiment station declares that inoculation is necessary when soy beans are planted for the first time on any particular piece of ground. The nodule bacteria of the soy bean, the experiment station authorities say, are different from those found on any other legume. As the soy bean is a newcomer in Wisconsin the bacteria which form the nodules are not present in Wisconsin soils in active form so that the need for inoculation is greater than exists in any other legume.

The method of inoculation will be furnished by seedhouses with the cultures and the experiment stations also prepare and distribute the bacterial cultures.

The 16 reasons advanced by the University of Wisconsin to the farmers of the state which apply in other states as well, follow:

They are adapted to nearly all soils and regions of the state but grow best on fertile, sweet soils.

This crop is especially valuable on soils too poor or too low in lime to grow other legumes.

They fit into regular systems of rotation.

They require no special machinery, ordinary farm implements can be used.

The work on soy beans comes at a time when other crops do not need immediate attention.

They are an annual crop so there is no loss from winter-killing.

This crop is not subject to any bad diseases or insect pests.

Soy beans are more frost resistant than corn.

They stand hot weather especially well.

They yield large amounts of high protein forage, rich in feeding value.

They furnish good, cheap home-grown concentrates to balance rations.

They leave the soil in excellent condition for the following crop of small grain.

There is an increased yield of other crops following soy beans due to the fertility left in the soil.

They are an emergency crop when clover fails, or other crops are washed out, destroyed by hail, or eaten by cutworms.

Soy beans are used for so many purposes that they can be diverted from one use to another if necessary.

There is a good cash market for surplus soy bean seed or hay.

TREATING OATS FOR SMUT

One of the great difficulties encountered by the commercial seed dealer is to find forms of treatment for various fungous diseases of grain which may be applied and destroy the spores of the fungus without injuring the germinating quality of the grain seed. The use of copper or nickel salts as dust treatment and formaldehyde have been the commonest means to suppress these diseases which cling to the seed in the form of minute spores ready to germinate and spread when the plants develop.

Oats smut has been one of the most troublesome pests to the seedsman. While copper and nickel salts used as dust proved valuable in reducing oats smut, they did not provide commercial control. Experiments conducted by the Ohio station recently show that when copper or nickel salts were combined with mercuric chloride the resulting mixture was efficacious in destroying the smut spores and to be distinctly superior in affording freedom from injury to germination.

According to the Ohio report the combination stimulated germination to a marked degree which was not apparent in test plots where the oats had been treated with formaldehyde. One part by weight of the copper or nickel salt and two parts of mercuric chloride were mixed and ground together and applied at the rate of 3 ounces per bushel to treat the grain. The cost of the treatment was from 10 to 15 cents per bushel which is relatively high but in the case of badly smutted oats where the pest reduced the yield from 10 to 30 per cent, the cost of the treatment was considered well worth while.

It is the application of such treatment to seed to prevent the spread of diseases and to guarantee the purchaser of the seed a full crop which makes tested and pure seed seem expensive very often to the farmer but he is more than repaid by the absence of these fungus pests which reduce his crops when he can harvest clean fields with full yields of grain.

BARLEY AS A CORN SUBSTITUTE

Seedsmen have become much interested in the subject of barley this fall owing to numerous requests for information concerning types of barley from farmers and stock raisers of the northwest who have to turn become interested through experiment station work on barley as a substitute for corn for stock. The poor crop of corn last year and the losses predicted for this fall through an unprecedented drought and hot weather over a large part of the corn belt have brought the up-to-date farmer to a study of substituting a more certain grain.

Barley, according to the Washington state station, produces a larger crop than any of the cereals in that state. Rating barley at 100 per cent, oats give a comparative yield of 85, winter wheat 82 and spring wheat 75.

The South Dakota station recently issued a bulletin concerning barley for feed in which it said, "Ground barley may be considered the best substitute among our farm grains which we have found for corn as a fattening feed for pigs. There are a number of prepared feeds on the market but ordinarily they are so costly that the average farmer cannot afford to feed them. Farmers should use barley as a fattening feed if they do not have corn.

On the basis of its experiments, South Dakota station says that 100 pounds of barley has the same fattening value as 106 pounds of No. 4 corn. "This is due to the fact," says the bulletin, "that barley is richer in protein and less tankage is required with barley than with corn."

The Washington station advises that only barley of known and tested worth should be used and types adapted to the localities. The seed houses and experiment stations can advise as to the best types for the various sections and their seed, of course, is thoroughly cleaned and tested to conform to state laws and to the standards set by the seed trade for maintaining high production and germination.

LIGHTS INCREASE WINTER EGG YIELD

There is some confusion as to the best method of using lights to secure winter egg production, but this is probably due to the fact that three systems of lighting are in general use.

One system uses lights in the evening, another uses lights in the morning and a third system, which is a combination of these two, uses lights both morning and evening.

Any of these systems will give good results. As conditions vary in various poultry plants, so each of these systems fits into the particular management for different flocks. It is a matter of convenience for the poultryman which decides the method to be used in most cases.

One man says that by lighting early in the morning until daylight he is able to shut off the light (which have been started by an alarm clock system) without losing his sleep. The man who does not retire early finds that lighting best in the evening, it does not interfere with his sleeping hours. The third method is usually employed by men who rise early and retire early.

The main thing to be remembered is that lights should not be used to increase the daylight period more than 12 hours. Night lighting is generally carried on from 9 to 10 at night and morning from 5 o'clock until daylight. The third system from 8 o'clock until daylight and from dark until 6.

The system of night lighting is generally considered less severe on the birds, but, of course, lengthens the poultrymen's labor for the day. Whatever artificial lighting is used scratch grains should be increased a few pounds per hundred birds per day as artificial lighting, resulting in an increased egg production, has a tendency to reduce the flesh of the birds. Lighting systems usually increase production for about two months, and then the birds will not stand up under it unless exceptional care has been used. If carried from November to January 1, through the period when daylight hours are shortest, it fulfills its best functions.

On the other hand lighting is not generally considered an efficient practise until the pullets have reached their first peak of production and a slight dropping is noticed. Old hens that are molting should not be lighted until they have finished their molt and are growing new feathers.

OUR EXPORTS AGAIN EXCEED IMPORTS

The excess of our exports over imports in the calendar year which ends 40 days hence, the "favorable trade balance" as it is sometimes called, seems likely to approximate 800 million dollars. The foreign commerce of the United States usually shows, says the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York, an excess of exports over imports amounting to several hundred million dollars. Prior to the World war, when our exports were exceptionally heavy, the largest excess of exports of "favorable balance" was $66 million dollars, in the fiscal year 1908. With the opening of the war the excess of exports crossed the billion dollar line in the fiscal year 1915, was 3 1-2 billions in 1917 and over 4 billions in 1919, then receding to the pre-war custom of keeping within the billion dollar line. In the calendar year 1923 our favorable balance was 719 millions, in 1924, 375 millions, and as above stated, seems likely to be about 800 millions in the calendar year 1925.

Latest available figures of the commerce of the principal countries of the world, says the Trade Record, indicate that the United States has a larger "favorable balance" than any other country. Trade reports of 50 principal countries for the calendar year 1924 show that 26 of the 50 had in that year an excess of imports over exports, while 24 showed an excess of exports over imports.

Most of the countries whose figures show an excess of imports are in Europe, and nearly all of those countries whose exports exceed imports are in America, Oceania and Africa. In Europe alone 17 countries show excess of imports and 6 show excess of exports. Great Britain shows the largest excess of imports, the excess of her imports over the exports in 1924 being a little more than one and a half billion dollars. Germany ranks next with an excess of imports amounting to over a half billion dollars. Netherlands shows imports about 360 million dollar greater than her exports, Italy's excess of imports is about 200 million and that of Belgium about 150 million. Austria's excess of imports is about 200 million dollars, and all of the Scandinavian states show imports in excess of exports. The European countries which show exports larger than imports are France, in which the 1924 exports exceed imports by about 70 million dollars, Checho Slovakia has an excess of exports about 35 million dollars, while Finland, Lithuania and Jugo Slavia also show slight margins on the export side.

Turning to other parts of the world, 10 countries in America show exports in excess of their imports. The United States stands at the head of the list with an export excess of over one billion dollars in the fiscal year 1925, while the 1924 figures show that Canada's exports exceed her imports by about 260 million dollars. Cuba's exports were 143 million greater than her imports; Argentina 143 million, Brazil 128 million, Mexico 192 million. In India in 1924 the excess of exports over imports was 442 million dollars; in Japan the imports exceeded exports by about 267 million dollars and in New Zealand the excess of exports over imports was about 16 million. Egypt's exports exceeded her imports by 74 million dollars and in the Union of South Africa imports exceeded domestic exports by about 96 million dollars. For China there are as yet no official figures, but presumably the imports exceed exports as the record of her trade in recent years shows in nearly every case an excess of imports over exports.

RAILROADS HAVE PART IN MOTOR GROWTH

Railroad and automobile growth are closely inter-related, according to J. S. Marvin, assistant general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce who quoted some figures on this point at the recent dinner of the Traffic Club of Flint, Michigan. Mr. Marvin pointed to the growth of Flint and the increase in its railroad business as an example of this relationship.

There were 734,730 carloads of automobiles and parts shipped in 1924 while total automotive freight including highway materials and fuel is estimated at 2,631,890 carloads. All freight including mines and agriculture reached a total of 33,786,000 carloads of which 9,913,000 were in the manufacturers and miscellaneous classification. It is interesting to note that the total automotive freight was equal to more than a fourth of the total manufacturers classification.

President Alfred of the Pere Marquette Railway voiced the opinion that the next few years would witness remarkable strikes by the rail carriers in the speeding up of long haul traffic.

What Is Mercerized Cotton?

Some confusion exists in the minds of many housekeepers as to distinctions between "mercerized" cotton goods and those fabrics having more or less temporary glossy finishes produced by paste mixtures. "Paper cambric" is an example of a fabric with the paste finish. Artificial silk, or rayon, is a more lustrous fabric than either of these, but should not be mistaken for mercerized cotton.

Many years ago, says the United States department of agriculture, John Mercer, for whom the process is named, discovered that when cotton yarn or cloth was dipped in strong solutions of lye for a short time and then washed, neutralized, and dried it became much stronger. In later years it was noted that if the yarn or cloth was held under well-regulated tension during the process it was rendered glossier as well as stronger. Hence mercerization is a process that adds not only durability but beauty. There are today on the market many cotton fabrics in which the entire cloth is glossier and stronger than ordinary cotton materials or in which bright mercerized yarns have been introduced to form stripes, checks, or figures. Some of the best known mercerized fabrics are batiste, mull, cotton damask, cotton foulard, sateen, voile, and cotton poplin. Each of these is valuable for some special purpose according to its character—the sheer, fine fabrics like batiste for underwear and infant's dresses and the heavier ones for linings or household

Corsica Nearer to Italy

The island of Corsica has been moving at the rate of nine inches a year toward the coast of Italy during the last hundred years, according to Commandant Bellbroner of the French Geodetic service. The fact has caused considerable comment among the tourists who have come to Napoleon's island this summer, some humorously calculating the year when it will be joined to the mainland of Italy and France will have a minority race on the Garden peninsula.

Borneo Fourth Largest Isle

Borneo, an island in the Malay Archipelago, is the fourth largest island in the world. The others, in the order of their size, are Australia, Greenland and New Guinea. It is in the control of the British and Dutch governments. Besides its agricultural products it has a large mining industry.

Where They Came From

The chestnut came from Italy.
Celery originated in Germany.
The citron is a native of Greece.
The nettle is a native of Europe.
The onion originated in Egypt.
Oats originated in North Africa.
The poppy originated in the East.
Rye came originally from Siberia.
Parsley was first known to Sardinia.
The pear and apple are from Europe.
Spinach came from Arabia.
The sunflower was brought from Peru.
The mulberry tree originated in Persia.
The gourd probably is in Eastern plant.
Walnuts and peaches came from Persia.
The horse chestnut is a native of Tibet.
Cucumbers came from the East Indies.
The quince came from Crete.
The radish is a native of China and Japan.
Peas are of Egypt an origin.
Horse radish comes from southern Europe.

"Limousine" Now Accredited

PARIS, Nov. 5, (AP)—Persons who have been boldly using the word "limousine" to describe their most valued automotive possession, always in the belief that it was of excellent French origin, should know that it has just been accepted by the French Academy as a word in good usage.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

For the first week in November there were six permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton for new buildings in the city. The total valuation of these permits as placed by the owners is approximately $8000 and includes two new dwelling houses, one on Summit street and the other on Woodmansee avenue. Both houses are of the semi-bungalow type and have six rooms and bath. The other permits are for garages and additions.

The building permits issued during the past week at the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton were as follows.

To John Senetzke to erect a frame bungalow on Woodmansee ave. The bungalow will be 26x26 feet with stone and cement foundation. There will be 5 rooms and bath finished in hard wood and plaster. The exterior finish will be in clapboards and shingles.

To Edward H. Crowell to erect a double garage in the rear of his home at 484 West Main street. The garage will be of frame construction with concrete floor and foundation.

To S. W. Loskin to build a frame veranda on the present house at 15 Pearl street. The veranda will be 8x5 feet and will conform to the house in construction.

To Henry G. Montle to erect a dwelling house on Summit street. The house will be 24x26 feet and of the semi-bungalow type. The foundation will be of concrete and the superstructure will be frame. There will be six rooms and bath finished in hard plaster and cyprus trim. The floors will be oak. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and shingles.

To William C. Young to build an addition to the present garage owned by Charles A. Chamberlain on Broad street. The addition will be 16x22 feet and of frame construction.

To W. S. Spencer to build a frame garage, 12x20 feet for William Brown on Fourth street.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 10 sales of real estate as compared to 23 sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $85,257 and $51,550.

The sales of real estate in New London during the past week numbered 14, two more than for the corresponding week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $110,788 and $30,730.

Building Permits in State

Building permits were issued during the week in the towns of the state reported in The Commercial Record to the number of 331, for new construction to cost $2,572,592. In the corresponding week of 1924, 392 permits were issued and in 1923 permits for new construction numbered 334. The cost of new buildings for which permits were issued in 1924 was $949,038 and in 1923, $1,295,174.

New London

Plans for complete alterations to the Pequot Casino property on the Thames river, recently purchased by Mayor W. Ellis, E. Clark and Mrs. Clark, are being prepared. The alterations will consist of the removing of a section of the building 85 feet long on the south side and interior changes throughout. The building, which will be arranged for a residence, will contain eight rooms on the first floor, with servants' quarters in the second floor and a garage in the basement.

The permit has been issued to Clarence E. Martin for a two-story cottage at 164 Ledyard street. The house will be of frame construction, arranged for one family. It will be 24x24 feet and will cost about $4,000.

Work has been started on the remodeling of the second wing of the former Chester W. Bliss residence which has been moved to Highland street, and will be rearranged for a frame bungalow.

Ground has been broken for a cottage in the rear of 314 Montauk avenue, for Silas Maxson, Jr., 738 Bank street. The house will be 21x28 feet, with an ell 10x12 feet. It will be arranged for one family and will be built by day labor.

J. J. Dodds, 457 Ocean avenue, has the house inclosed which he is building on Dell avenue for George A. Rogers. As reported before in these columns the house is of frame construction, bungalow style, arranged for seven rooms. The sub-contracts for the plumbing, heating and electric wiring will be awarded shortly.

Announcement has been made of the intent of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., to purchase the Williams street sub-station of the Connecticut Power Co. and to remodel it for housing the present Water street, electrical plant. It is probable that work on the changes will be started shortly.

M. R. Donohue, of Baltic has sold to a group of realty owners, represented in the transaction by Sidney M. Sullman, three cottages on the boardwalk at Ocean Beach. It is understood that the new owners intend to build a hotel on the site at some later time.

Plans for the development of the Guthrie estate property at the corner of Pequot avenue and Lower Boulevard, purchased from Mrs. Frances A. Guthrie by the newly formed Pequot Realty Co., indicating an extensive residential building project, have recently been announced. It is the intention of the Pequot company, which is headed by Frederick W. Mercer, to cut a street through the land making some 60 building sites very attractively located. It is probable that a large residence on the property will be remodeled for a high class apartment building. Another piece of eight acres, bought by the same company from Mrs. Guthrie, will be developed later.

Building Permits

Clarence E. Martin, cottage, 164 Ledyard street, $4,000.

Valvoline Oil Co., pump house, Sixteenth street, $300.

J. G. Mondelci, garage, Ashcraft street, extension, $550.

Dennis Heffernan, frame dwelling, Lincoln avenue, $8,000.

Silas Maxson, Jr., cottage, rear 714 Montauk avenue, $4,000.

Joseph Litvin, brick store, 28 1-2 Colt street, $500.

ISOLATED CHINESE PROVINCE GETTING FIRST MOTOR ROAD

KINGCHOW, Province of Kansu, Nov. 9.—The central China province is getting its first motor car road.

For communications in the past, Kansu probably has been the worst off of any of the 18 provinces. It has no railways, and practically no navigable rivers. But in spite of these disadvantages, travel has been lively because the main route to Tibet and Turkestan leads through the province.

Lu Fung-hsiang, military and civil governor of the province last year ordered his principal general to start the road work with the soldiers under his command. The general commanded each regiment to build seven miles of road. The soldiers promptly impressed resident farmers into service. A road capable of handling motor traffic of more than 100 miles has been completed.

COMPLETES COPY OF BIBLE ON STRIP OF PAPER, THEN SWOONS

TOKYO, Nov. 9. (AP)—A complete copy of the Bible on a single strip of paper has been made by a Japanese Christian missionary, Dr. Ishizuka. The paper scroll is about 110 inches long and 30 inches broad. The strip can be read, but only with the aid of a magnifying glass. The text is in Japanese, more than 4,000,000 characters covering the scroll. It required four years and three months to complete. At its conclusion Dr. Ishizuka fell into a long swoon.

Sweden Employs More Women

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 9 (AP)—The number of women working for the state has almost doubled since 1923. The Swedish government's civil service list showed 17,177 women employes last year, forming one-sixth of the government officials.

Vagaries of London Weather

LONDON, Nov 9—(AP)—Within ten minutes in one day recently the London hotel and shopping district experienced hail, sleet, rain, lightning and thunder—but no fog.

Many American visitors here have been disappointed when informed that real fogs only occur in winter.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

American supremacy on the sea 75 years ago was acknowledged by England. We had the fastest, most comfortable and best ships in ocean travel and English papers said it looked like the "hand writing on the wall" to English shipping, and meant that England must take drastic action. That England did so, while America went to sleep (and is still asleep as regards national shipping) is shown by present day shipping.

Items of interest in 1850 as taken in part from the files of the Courier are as follows:

Tuesday, November 5, 1850—Edwin Gavitt has offered for sale to the highest bidder the staunch and commodious little steamer, John R. Vinton. The steamer has a cabin, saloon, and promenade and was built in 1847. The steamer is complete and has a new boiler. The steamer measures 115 feet deck and is 104 tons register and has a draft of 5 1-2 feet, making it ideal for passenger service on the river and sound.

E. Whiting is offering for sale a second hand Boston Gig and it is understood that he has already been offered a price for the vehicle.

The number of inhabitants in Portland, Me., is 20,819, an increase of 5,604 in ten years.

The remains of Gen. Zachary Taylor, late president of the United States have been buried in the family burying ground about seven miles from the city of Louisville, Ky. A military escort met the body when it arrived at Louisville on the steamboat Navigator.

There is now talk of extending the New London and Palmer railroad up the Ware river, to intersect with the Vermont and Massachusetts railroad at, or near, South Gardner. It is stated that the tonnage from Ware alone amounts to nearly a million tons per anhum.

Thursday, November 7, 1850—Backus & Barstow, the "Round White Sign," company, have announced that over 10,000 American Brick Oven Air-tight cook stoves are now being used in American homes. The great claim for this stove is the fire brick oven-top which distributes the heat. Lee & Harvey of Greeneville are featuring the Quincy Air-tight Cook Stove and Wagner's Improved National Air-tight stove.

English railroads are much faster than American roads, several of them having runs which average nearly 50 miles an hour. American roads are rapidly speeding up their runs but they have not yet attained that speed.

San Francisco has been swept by another disastrous fire, damage this time running over 2 million dollars, the fire burning over four squares consuming over 300 buildings, including the Pacific News office, which was partly owned by Col. Winchester.

Saturday, November 9, 1850—Reports from Capt. Waldo are that over 10,000 people are still out on the desert and stand no chance of making the mountains before winter sets in. Cholera is killing them off rapidly and hundreds are starving. Appeals are being made for provisions and everything possible is being done to save the people caught in the desert but it is feared that thousands will die before aid can reach them.

Many Norwich people are taking advantage of the $3 rate ticket by boat to New York to hear Jenny Lind in her last concert in New York before going south.

The bitter feeling in Charleston, South Carolina is shown up to a great degree in the refusal of anyone there to accept the office of United States District Attorney.

The English admit that American vessels are ten years ahead of the English vessels as regards shipbuilding but claim America is five years behind England on engines, and this is admitted by Americans, who, however, claim that America will lead in both within five years. Feeling between the American company and the Cunard company is very bitter and the race for the fastest time between New York and Liverpool is keen. The Pacific, American ship and the Asia, Cunard ship have both raced for time and the English papers admit the American ship has made the best time ever made between New York and Liverpool, the Pacific making the trip in 10 days 4 3-4 hours, while the Asia, Cunard, made the trip in 10 days, 7 hours. This beating has caused the English people to insist on an investigation of their shipping.

The Cunard company began with ships 1,100 tons and engines of 350 horse power but the ships are now of 2,300 tons. It is said that the English ships carry sail enough before them to swamp a revenue cruiser, while the American ships, although of larger tonnage, are an exquisite model and ship through the water without a ripple, cutting the water like a greyhound.

All London papers agree that the voyages of the Atlantic and Pacific look like "the handwriting on the wall" to our rulers which it behooves them to lay to heart.

GROUP OF OPERATIC STARS FEATURED IN OPENING NIGHT CAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. (AP)—The Metropolitan Opera Company's eighteenth season under the direction of Guilio Gatti-Casazza opened with a departure from the tradition of the last few years.

Instead of featuring one popular artist in a favorite role on the opening night, Mr. Gatti-Casazza chose to present an opera which will furnish adequate and almost equally important parts for six leading singers of the company, three of them Americans.

In Caruso's heyday, the gala occasion of the season's opening was turned into a personal triumph for the famous Italian tenor, who renewed his hold on popular favor through the singing of one of his favorite roles. In recent seasons it has been the Austrian prima donna, Maria Jeritza, who has carried off the honors of the first night and started not only the opera season but the social season as well.

When the curtain rises for Ponchielli's sombre tragedy, La Gioconda, however, Rosa Ponselle, Jeanne Gordon and Merle Alcock—all Americans—were announced as the feminine leads. The three leading masculine parts had been assigned to Beniamino Gigli, Giuseppe Danise, and Jose Mardones.

It is not until Wednesday night that a one-star opera will be given for the benefit of the devotees of a personality. Then Jeritza will take her first curtain of the season in the role of Tosca, which won acclaim her first season with the Metropolitan. She will divide honors only with the veteran Scotti.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza's varied bill will offer the opera devotee a greater range than ever. The season will see the most general presentation of Wagnerian operas since the war laid them under a shadow.

Revival of two other German works—Die Verkaufte Braut by Friedrich Smetana and Der Barbier van Bagdad by Peter Cornelius also was announced. Altogether, 14 German operas will be sung.

There were no notable withdrawals from the personnel of the company announced this year. Galli-Curci, Jerista, Alda, Bori, Rosa Ponselle, Easton and Rethberg will again essay the soprano leads. Two new sopranos—the young Kansas City Girl, Marion Talley, and a German lyric soprano of the Frankfort Opera, Elizabeth Kandt—will be heard for the first time in Metropolitan presentations.

Jeanne Gordon, Margarete Matzenauer, Ernestine Schumann-Heink and Merel Alcock are listed as mezzo-sopranos and contraltos, with the notable addition of Carmela Ponselle, who won her right to appear in Metropolitan casts through her concert last spring with her sister, Rosa, long a prominent member of the company.

Martinelli, who last season was absent for months because of illness, will start tenor leads with Chamlee and Gigli; Scotti, Danise, Ruffo and last year's sensation—the American, Lawrence Tibbet—continue their work as baritones. Feodor Challapin will divide his time with the Chicago opera company, but will appear in Brig and Mefistofele. Other bassos include the veteran Bohnen who scored heavily in the Ring cycle last season, and Didur and Mardones.

MARKET FOR STAGE FOLKS SERVES THEATRES OF WORLD

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—With the exception of the 3,000 stage folk who during a season play New York and actually are in touch with their managers, 37,000 others who are sent from here to many parts of the world, depend more or less on the "corner gangs," as the police dub them.

Every casting agent, the percentage man, maintains an office—a place where mail may be addressed and where dead photographs may be stored to await the final cleaning-out. So when the police threatened to arrest loiterers on Broadway it affected many "types" who waited at prescribed places for appointments.

This custom, old troupers say, originated in the pride of the actor of other generations. One call on a producer or agent for introduction was proper, but any more would be a confession of idleness, an unpardonable sin in older days. So, even though each meal might be an egg cooked over a gas jet in a cheap room, the character man would each afternoon array himself in his best wardrobe and sally forth to be "found." The managers, being aware of this, would then walk through the crowds and pick their types.

Although much of the pomposity has departed, the custom still survives insofar that on the northeast corner of Broadway and Forty-fourth street gather the "straight" or any-part men. At Forty-sixth, vaudevilleans test their new jokes on each other. An entire picture might be cast in a walk of the short block between Seventh avenue and Broadway on Forty-seventh street.

Here the stage gives way to the orchestra pit in the next three blocks north. Musicians ready to play for any occasion loiter here and a good first violin may be found even farther north.

There are hundreds of other places of rendezvous nearby, adjacent to theatres, in private alleys and cafes. Even barber shops have their coteries and some restaurants and hotels are known for the patronage of luminaries where business is mixed with the demi-fasse. But always the business reverts to the street corner.

Hundreds, sometimes thousands of the men—juveniles, character men, chorus boys, supers—all have their appointed station to await news of a place which may lead them anywhere. A job, not art. But work. That is the feeling of the younger generation, for the greater majority make no more per week than an office worker and twenty weeks is a good average year, whereas each must maintain a complete wardrobe.

DETROIT MAKING ROADWAY FOR ITS CAR OUTPUT

DETROIT, Nov. 9.—(A.P.)—Detroit wasn't so much until the automobile came chugging into the picture. But just as too much prosperity frequently proves an expensive thing, so do many officials here suggest that too many automobiles may spoil the municipal broth.

Almost everyone in Detroit, it seems, drives. Everyone with as little as $5 for a first payment is a potential purchaser. Detroit makes more automobiles than any other city; two hundred thousand of its population are employed in automobile factories. They make motor cars, and then ride in them.

So Detroit's thoroughfares are choked with machines—flivvers by the ten thousands, trucks, passenger cars of every description, jitnies and motor buses. The automobile industry has "made" Detroit. It also has created serious problems. Detroit today is hard pressed to keep pace with its motorized citizenry.

Subways, elevated, wider streets, stringent parking regulations—all have been suggested as panaceas. In the meantime the situation becomes more acute. Where to put a car is more of a problem to many than raising the revenue to buy it. Garage shortages in many sections, coupled with the native thrift or penuriousness of owners, have worked to increase all night parking at curbs. Big and shiny ones stand with their lowlier bretherd. Thereby, is added another perplexing traffic problem.

There has been evolved what is known as the "Master Plan," entailing an expenditure within the next 15 years of $100,000,000 for new thoroughfares and the widening of many existing arterios.

For two years past street widening has been in progress, but it has not kept up with traffic increase. A superhighway to bisect the city, providing a direct east side-west side thoroughfare, has been approved by the voters. Yet today, before the approved plan has begun to take shape, it has been found the proposed 80-foot street will be inadequate, and the plans are being revised for a 120-foot paved way.

The traffic problem is by no means confined to downtown Detroit. It extends even beyond the city limits. Several of the street widening projects now under consideration are eight miles or more from the business district. Some of these streets are to be widened to 204 feet. One superhighway, connecting Detroit and Pontiac—cities 25 miles apart—provides room for four machines moving in each direction at the same time. Yet even this roadway already has experienced serious traffic tieups.

INVITES BURGLARS TO RETURN GOODS "IF NOT SATISFACTORY"

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9—A Philadelphia store that was robbed invited the burglars to bring back the goods if they were not found satisfactory.

Realizing the power of advertising the store inserted a display ad in local papers headed "Notice! to the Burglars Who Robbed Our Store!" the notice said:

"You boys are not using your powers of observation. (An unpardonable fruit in any burglar); if you had read our advertisements and noticed our very low prices you could have saved yourself the trouble of "breaking in" to get the things you wanted. We are glad to know, however, that you prefer our merchandise. Every article in our store is absolutely guaranteed—whether you buy it or steal it makes no difference. If what you fellows took does not give you good service, bring it back and we will make it good—with the assistance of General Butler."

"P. S.—Special reception for burglars calling after our store is closed. Bring your friends along."

Officials of the Soiji, head temple of the Sodo sect of Buddhism, have decided to establish a Buddhist women's university in Tokio at a cost of 1,500,000 yen. Work will be started early next year and completed within two years.

2 SICK WOMEN REGAIN HEALTH

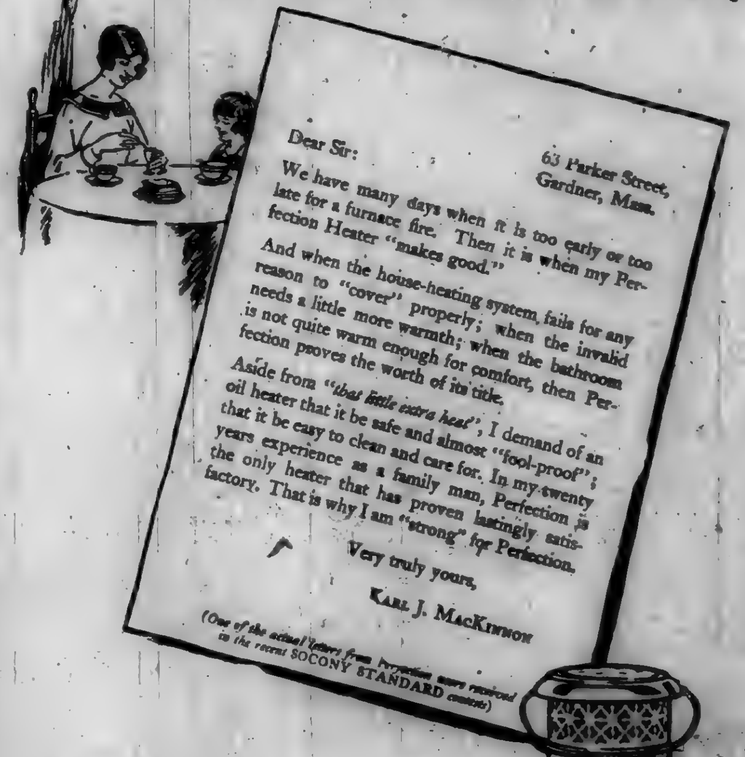
Through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read their Letters

Valdosta, Georgia.—"I was troubled with a very severe female weakness accompanied by some very unpleasant symptoms and with pains in my back, sides and legs. Since taking a treatment of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am better in every way, and the unpleasant symptoms have disappeared. Your medicine is wonderful for nervous, run-down women."—Mrs. L. O. DASHER, R.F.D. 4, Box 14, Valdosta, Georgia.

Relief from First Bottle

Battle Creek, Mich.—"I had great pains and swelling in my sides, pains so bad at times that I could not do my housework or stand on my feet for weeks and I was in a very nervous condition. In a Cleveland paper I read a letter about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had great relief from the first bottle and I shall continue its use because I believe and know it helps me. I want to help other women and I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. C. E. PALMER, 247 Champion St., Battle Creek, Mich.

"—THAT LITTLE 'EXTRA HEAT'!"



Dear Sir:
63 Parker Street,
Gardner, Mass.
We have many days when it is too early or too late for a furnace fire. Then it is when my Perfection Heater "makes good."
And when the house-heating system fails for any reason to "cover" properly; when the invalid needs a little more warmth; when the bathroom is not quite warm enough for comfort, then Perfection proves the worth of its title.
Aside from "that little extra heat", I demand of an oil heater that it be safe and almost "fool-proof"; that it be easy to clean and care for. In my twenty years experience as a family man, Perfection is the only heater that has proven lastingly satisfactory. That is why I am "strong" for Perfection.
Very truly yours,
KARL J. MACKINNON

COACHING NEW LONDON FIREMEN IN DRIVING THE BIG AERIAL TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—Drivers of the New London fire department, particularly the drivers stationed at fire headquarters are being given instructions in the driving and handling of the mammoth aerial fire truck the city has just purchased. The big Seagrave apparatus is driven daily about the streets throughout the city that the operators, particularly the rear wheelsman, may obtain an idea of the steering of the truck.

There is no change today in the condition of Ernest Pernell, who suffered a fractured skull Saturday night when he was run down on Bank street by an automobile owned and operated by Carl H. Briggs, 843 Main street. At the Lawrence hospital this afternoon it was stated that the man had not regained consciousness and that his recovery was considered doubtful.

An automobile was reported to the police as having been parked on Lincoln avenue several days. An investigation made by Sergeant Nelson Smith disclosed that the car is owned by William B. Bolton, Station 10.1-2, Waterford.

The funeral of Mrs. May Grover Brown, wife of Walter A. Brown, formerly of Uncasville, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Merritt R. Tooker, in Uncasville. The services were conducted by Rev. Charles Smith of Uncasville. The bearers were J. S. Collins, William Rogers, Fred Zepp and Henry Erickson. The committal was in Comstock cemetery, Montville, with the burial ritual of the Order of Eastern Star, of which order Mrs. Brown was a member.

Mrs. William Ames, of 46 Summit avenue, Mrs. Bernard Lamb, Poquonoc Bridge; Mrs. Alice Owens, Connecticut college; Mrs. Frank J. Corrigan and infant daughter, 36 Sherman street; Francis K. Robinson, U. S. S. Jouett; Karl Darrow, Niantic; Mrs. Charles Wheeler, Stonington; Mrs. Irving Chittenden and infant son, Waterford; Mrs. John Lieper, Waterford; and Helen Begley, Mrs. Cora Skaltz, Marion Burke and Miss Anna Sanford, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated Charities were dismissed Sunday and today.

The funeral of Manuel Beatrice was held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was attended by many mourners. A solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, with Rev. Raymond O'Callahan deacon, and Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger sub-deacon. The bearers were Joseph Holmsin, Edward Mcumbiow, Carl Benson, Henry Wade, James Smith and Michael Conway. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. Fitzsimons.

The funeral of Manuel Beatrice was held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was attended by many relatives and former acquaintances. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev Alexander Wollschlaeger. The bearers were Robert Lynn, Anthony Liberal, Joseph Fidalgo, John Lee, Charles Souza and Alfred Gonsalves. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Walter Banning and James McFee have come to the conclusion of the gossips that there is nothing—dirty color scheming of their shameless immediately in the worst way and done that the street of McFee on a complaint for disturbing the peace of the neighborhood in which they reside. 71 Bank street. They have been tenants in the same house, McFee on the floor over the basement where Walter Banning and Mrs. Banning are domiciled. They quarrelled Saturday afternoon and McFee is alleged to have resorted to strategy to get the Bannings out of the premises. Mrs. Banning represented that McFee offered a raise of three months in the rental price of the apartment for any other purpose than to evict the Bannings, McFee thought that Lazarus Lazerow would jump at that bait. The exact words of Mrs. Banning in reciting what occurred almost tantalized the point on the witness stand. It sent the spectators into roars of laughter. Mrs. Banning's attitude then indicated that she had won a victory. She reckoned without McFee. He countered with a description of Mrs. Banning that led Judge S. Victor Prince to declare the battle of abuse a draw. So he continued the case for a month and asked Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield to take a hand in restoring peace between the warring.

Irving Bettencley escaped appearance in the police court today by consenting to return to Leominster, Mass., and there answering a complaint alleging that he enticed Edith Lemery to leave her husband and to live with him. Edith is not yet of age so her foster father and her mother set out to make things as hot for Irving as they could. The Leominster police were asked to secure Irving and bring him back to answer for what he had done. He had in the meantime arranged for care for the nursery girl while she was at the Lawrence hospital where she gave birth to a baby. Irving declared that he wants to wed the girl and then to take her to Vishers Island, where he has employment at such wages as will permit him to support the girl and the baby.

Herbert Chesseresa, a sailor at the New London submarine base will never win a medal for marksmanship if the aim is not truer than it was when he threw a table knife out of a window of the restaurant at Bank and State streets. He was accused in court this morning of having had the purpose of hitting Policeman Courtney with the knife when he hurled it, but it did not reach the officer. It fell far short of the mark. Just Chesseresa was arrested for his folly. He tried to explain that he saw a sailor chum pass and that his purpose was to attract his attention but the officers declared that there was no sailor in sight when the knife was thrown. Chesseresa was fined $25.

Charles Wilcox was stamped as degenerate by the stories told by his wife and others in the court. He is employed by the Collapsible Tube company and when he works a full week earns some $18, but he does not work all the time. He has an affinity on Ashcraft road and he spends time with her. The conduct of Wilcox has been such that the state authorities have been called in to take a hand and they are of the opinion that Wilcox should receive a term in jail. That would not be a new experience, but his earnings are needed by his family. He was today sentenced to jail for six months and then the execution of the sentence was suspended for a year to try out Wilcox's promises.

James Taylor of Potter street, when arraigned in the police court today disclosed that he and his wife are not living the life of the traditional turtle dove. Mrs. Taylor complained that James had beaten her, and she said she would not understand that from any man. When that was represented to the court James retaliated with an accusation that his wife was never in the court and that she had an affinity with whom she attends the picture shows, neglecting her household duties. Judge Prince fined Taylor $5 and told him to refrain from further exhibition of pugilism.

Durell Dusenberry, a sailor at the submarine base, and Abbie Charon, a waitress at the Canton restaurant were in the court this morning as a result of the night before. There was no evidence against the Charon woman so the complaint against her was nolled. Dusenberry had to settle for he owned up that he smashed the glasses. It was expensive for Dusenberry for he paid more than $20 into the court for his lack of wisdom and his error of judgment.

Fred Bemis Jackman, a sailor at the coast guard, was the representative of Morris Bernstein in the sale of clothes to coast guard recruits. In that capacity it was the duty of Jackman to give out coupons in exchange for $3 in cash, the coupons entitling the coast guard recruits to an outfit before they had earned it. The scheme was a moneymaker for Bernstein and for Jackman, too, as well as for another party at the coast guard station in the end Jackman was only more than $500 and this Bernstein took measures to collect by accusing Jackman with having embezzled the money. Jackman was arrested and then his sister came to his rescue. She paid Bernstein a sum of money and gave him assurance that she would pay him the balance of what was due him. This was done to avoid prosecution. Jackman paid the costs of the court and his sister paid the cash that represented his stealings.

Witnesses were summoned today and Saturday in the case of the state against John Quinn, who has been convicted of selling liquor two or three times and on each occasion has appealed to the common pleas court. The case will come to trial tomorrow.

Charles Frick, 814 Bank street, and employed at the plant of the Whiton Machine company, complained to the police late this afternoon that his cycle was stolen from the grounds of the company earlier in the day. The theft, it is believed, was committed by one or more youths.

Fred Rogers, an aged inmate at the Old Fellows' home, Fairview, Groton, died at the institution Sunday night. He was 73 years of age and formerly resided in Hartford.

Mrs. Cornelius Barry and infant daughter, 20 Pleasant street; Raymond Perry, 34 Mercer street; Mrs. John Sprague and infant twin sons, Groton; Mrs. John Attemisici, Gales Ferry and Mrs. John Mattson and infant daughter, 17 Farmington avenue, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

The residence of Mrs. Bertha Utley, Buddington road, Groton was burglarized last night and plunder comprising $100 and two revolvers were stolen. Mrs. Utley this forenoon lodged complaint with the state police.

Mrs. Buddington departed from her home to make a visit with a friend last evening and is positive that the front entrance was secure when she departed. However, when Mrs. Utley returned home she found the front door open and an investigation revealed that the money, which was in a cash box and the revolvers missing. Jewelry and silverware that could easily have been taken was not disturbed. Entrance to the house, it is believed, was gained by the crook using a skeleton key.

John W. Fletcher, pharmacist, United States Coast Guard service, formerly stationed at this port, and Miss Phyliss J. Harmon, this city, were married Saturday at the parsonage of the First Baptist church, the ceremony being performed by Rev Chester H. Howe. Mr. and Mrs Fletcher have departed for Philadelphia, to which port Mr. Fletcher was recently transferred, and where the couple will make their future home.

William H. Tooker, 202 Crystal avenue, and Miss Laura P. Chute, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rober E. Chute, 700 Main street, were married Saturday at the parsonage of the First Baptist church by Rev. Chester H. Howe. Mr. and Mrs. Tooker are now in New York enjoying their wedding trip and upon their return they will take up their abode on Jay street. Mr. Tooker is employed at the plant of the former Groton Iron Works.

John McDonald, Groton, was arraigned in the Groton town court this morning on a charge of vagrancy and pleading guilty to the complaint, he was sentenced to 60 days in jail by Judge Cornelius C. Costello. McDonald was arrested by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh yesterday upon complaint of Dr. Charles Benjamin, Mystic.

William Walsh, Mystic, pleaded guilty of the charge of reckless driving and was fined $25 and costs. Walsh was arrested Saturday by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh following a machine he was driving colliding with a car owned and operated by Charles Fowler, Westerly.

Alfred Winkler, Pequonoc Bridge, was fined $10 and costs on a charge of speeding. He was taken into custody several days ago by State Police Officer Fred Caron.

DID NOT ADOPT NEW OIL STORAGE ORDINANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9.—The city council received this evening but did not adopt nor will it adopt till the matter has been thoroughly threshed out an ordinance relating to the storage of fuel oil for heating purposes. The proposed ordinance is drastic in its provisions and such as will place upon the city the enforcement of regulations by insurance companies. The ordinance will, in the opinion of many, force changes in the rules laid down by the insurance companies in the past. It is likely to be considered a long time before it is adopted.

The council voted to conform to the request of the governor in the observance of silence for two minutes at 11 o'clock on Wednesday, so called Armistice day.

A vote passed authorizing the city manager to purchase 182 1-3 square feet of land on Church street for the widening of that thoroughfare from the First Congregational church society at a cost of $250.

It was voted to lay a sewer on Ashcraft road to accommodate property of Joseph Mondelci, who paid his assessment some long time ago, but who has not yet had the benefit of the sewer.

The planning board recommended the establishment of a comfort station on State street east of the monument. The matter was referred to the committee on public welfare. James P. Sullivan was elected a member of the planning board to fill a vacancy that has long existed.

Mayor Fox stated for the benefit of all interested in the water supply of the city that the volume in Lake Konomoc has increased 12,000,000 gallons in five months. He said that while the city's consumption has increased 7 1-4 per cent in 15 years the supply had increased 25 per cent. In the same period. So there was no need of any alarm as to the supply of water for the people.

Councilor Streeter remarked that the matter of water supply was before a committee and that he was not anticipating any report on the matter till it came from the committee. He said the increase in the use of water had come in some degree from the adoption of the Volstead act and pointed out that the abolition of the saloons tided to the increase in supply. Mayor Fox replied that the figures he gave were official and said they carried their own argument. There was some show of tartness in the remarks of both gentlemen, but here the matter rested.

MRS. HORACE GARDNER DIED SUDDENLY, AGED 89

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—Mrs. Nancy G. Gardner, 89, widow of Horace Gardner, died suddenly last night of heart disease at her residence, 761 Montauk avenue. Mrs. Gardner had been for some time in a weakened condition because of infirmities attending her advanced years. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Nancy Beebe, of Cohanzie, and Mrs. Ella Foster, of Lebanon, and by two sons, LeBurton P. Gardiner, of Camden, N. J., and Horace R. Gardiner, 321 Ocean avenue, this city. Mrs. Gardiner was born in Essex but had resided in New London the greater part of her life. Her husband died eight years ago.

ANOTHER STUDY OF INEQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY

Educational opportunities in Georgia are unequally distributed owing to the unequal distribution of wealth. Ten counties possess 46 per cent of the assessed value of property, while less than 1 per cent is in 10 of the poorest counties. Three-fourths of the children of the state, considering the white population only, are in counties financially unable to give them proper schooling; so that, while the compulsory school law requires six months of school, many of the countries are too poor to provide it, according to figures compiled by Ralph B. Wazer, of Emory university.

On a 5-mill school tax, Fulton county could spend $19.80 annually on the education of each child of school age, but Coffee county would spend only $1.56. Consequently, the state allotment of $4.60 per capita does not begin to meet the deficiency in the poorer sections.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS BETTER THAN SMALL SCHOOLS

Comparing costs and results of education in consolidated and in one-teacher schools in Connecticut shows that 28 per cent of pupils 14 years of age in one-room schools drop out during the school year, but only 8 per cent in consolidated schools drop out; 41 per cent of those 15 years of age in one-room schools drop out, as compared with 12 per cent in consolidated schools. The percentage of elimination in the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth grades of one-teacher schools is approximately twice as great as in the same grades in consolidated schools. Of the teachers in one-teacher schools, 23 per cent have had two years or more of professional training, compared with 49 per cent in consolidated schools have on the average two years more experience than those in one-teacher schools.—So col Life.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH TEACHERS CHANGE PLACES

A number of English and French teachers of secondary schools will change places this fall for a year of exchange work, each taking over, as far as possible, the entire work of the other. An English teacher, to be eligible for this assignment, must be 25 years of age, or over, a graduate of a British university, and must have been an instructor for at least two years in a secondary school in England or Wales, with experience in teaching French. Teachers will continue to be paid by their own school authorities, and the exchange service will be recognised for pension purposes.

PORTLAND APPRENTICES PAID FOR SCHOOL TIME

To meet the need for skilled workers, an apprenticeship school has been organized in Portland, Ore., by the state board for vocational education and the association of building and construction. Afternoon classes are conducted in carpentry, bricklaying plastering, painting, and sheet-metal work. Apprentices are paid by their employers at regular rates for time in school. The money is paid into the treasury of the apprenticeship commission, to be delivered to the boys on becoming journeymen. Night classes have also been started for adult carpentry and sheet-metal workers.

EVERY ADULT SAMOAN CAN READ AND WRITE

Illiteracy does not exist in American Samoa. The official government languages of American Samoa are English and Samoan. Every adult Samoan can read and write in one of those languages. The public schools in American Samoa are conducted in English and are rapidly adding to the number of English-speaking children and adults in Samoa.—William W. Edel, superintendent of education.

The difference between a cook and a chef is that the latter can fix things up so you can't tell what they are.

Isa Kremer Defends Jazz Music

"Want a tonic for the blues? Take a dose of American jazz, nine of doses for the aesthetically inclined not to exceed one hour."

This is the prescription given by Isa Kremer, Russian singer, and one of the leading figures in the music world, who will appear here on Monday, Nov. 16 at Broadway theatre "Your American jazz is good for the soul!" she exclaimed. "I recommend it to anybody suffering from the blues. I get quite a kick out of it myself, but I think you should restrict your exposure to it to not over an hour. After that it becomes a drug and is dangerous.

"The people of Europe in order to forget their miseries have taken to jazz as if to some kind of drink. Colored jazz singers are quite the rage. When they cannot get genuine American negroes over there they get black-face comedians or anybody who will black their face and imitate the antics of the American jazz orchestras. The craze affects the rich as well as the poor—jazz from morning to night.

"Yes, jazz is good for you if you are melancholy, but too much of it is too much!"

Broadway Theatre

There is one show in town that everyone should see and that is at the Broadway. It is a jubilee program and such a fine show! The crowds that filled that popular playhouse both matinee and night yesterday were overflowing with praise.

Little Joan, the maid of mirth, made a fine opening act. She is an attractive lass with a natural inkling towards comedy. She's as clever as she's vivacious.

Arde De Haven and Rita Hard assisted by Frances Silvio in Uniformity Good was the second comedy offering. It is a very fine military satire by Eugene Conrad. Very lively comedy predominates.

Lewis and Gordon presented Janelle O'Dormond and Lew Hunting in Five Minutes From the Station, by Elaine Sterne, staged by Howard Lindsay. Edmund Daley assists in this clever comedy which takes on all kinds of new turns and twists making for clever entertainment.

The quartet that followed was great. They are billed as the Just Wait Four and everyone was willing to wait for more songs and more comedy which is injected in this offering.

The Ralstons offered "The Acme in Equilibrism" which made a truly pleasing finishing number.

Sailed is the name of the photoplay written by Jack Boyle and boasts a cast of ten stars.

Princess Bonnie

Princess Bonnie will be one of the prettiest local productions ever staged at the Broadway theatre, according to those who have had an opportunity to watch the cast working at the American Legion rooms during the past two weeks.

The principals are all local young men and women of exceptional talent and have appeared in one or more of the local productions which have made Norwich well known as the home of "good talent."

The play, a Spanish-American opera, staged under the direction of the John B Rogers company, is far heavier than any ever before attempted in this city, but the manner in which the show is being whipped into shape for its public production on Nov. 17 and 18 speaks highly of the young people who make up the cast.

Nearly 150 local young people will be seen in the various numbers which make up the play, and the song numbers are exceptionally worthy of mention. The character parts have been carefully selected, and in Mrs. Walter Buckingham and Miss Eunice Taft who are to play the leading feminine roles, and in J. Warren Kane and Frank Cowell, who will play the men's leads, those in charge of the production have assured a perfect balance for a first class presentation of Princess Bonnie.

Breed Theater

Of the many interesting phases of the big William Fox special production, The Iron Horse, one that stands out in relief against the historical background is the wonderful life-like representations of the types and characters of that period, shortly after the Civil War.

There are blue-eyed, light haired riders who might have ridden straight from the canvases of the great artist, Frederick Remington; others with hair and eyes of the night that might, with a change of costume be lap-dissolved into the Spanish cavaliers who crossed the Cordilleras with Cortes. There are famous plainsmen—frontier characters — empire builders—pioneers—Indians—as real and picturesque as the once livid characters they are representing in the great moving picture of American endeavor, The Iron Horse.

Supporting the huge mast consisting of George O'Brien, Madge Bellamy, Gladys Hulette, Cyril Chadwick, Will Walling and Fred Kohler are such sterling players as Francis Powers, Jack O'Brien, Colin Chase, James Welch, James Marcus, J. Farrell MacDonald and Frances Teague.

The production was filmed under the direction of John Ford, who made such past success as North of Hudson Bay with Tom Mix; Cameo Kirkby, with Tom Mix; PEAP \A PAP by and Hoodman Blind. The Iron Horse comes to the Breed theater next week for a limited engagement.

Palace Theatre

Most of you are familiar with radio. Many of you know that the world is indebted to that eminent scientist Dr. Lee De Forest, whose invention of the audion makes not only radio broadcasting and receiving possible, but also the long distance telephone. You are now to have an opportunity of seeing and hearing his latest and greatest invention, the phonofilm or Radio Talking Motion Pictures.

The Phonofilm must not be confused with previous attempts to make talking pictures in which a phonograph was attached to a motion picture machine. There is no phonograph used in connection with the Phonofilm—the film itself literally talks and reproduces music. All sounds are actually photographed simultaneously on the same strip of film which registers the pictures. This insures absolute and unfailing synchronization of sound and action.

Phonofilm sound reproduction is superior to the phonograph and to radio as neither the scratch of the needle nor dreaded static are encountered.

A program of wide variety is offered including brief talks by prominent people, jazz bands, comedy monologues, operatic selections, instrumental and vocal solos, beautiful dances etc. In fact the Phonofilm covers the entire gamut of entertainment, grand and light opera, musical comedy, etc., as well as the stars of the dramatic and vaudeville stage. The Phonofilm lofer a new form of entertainment, more novel and versatile than is afforded by either the dramatic stage or the motion picture and versatile than is afforded by either the dramatic stage or the motion picture screen.

Can you visualize an evening's entertainment in which nearly twenty feature acts are presented, the leading performers in each division following one another? No "fillers"—no "padding" just intimature.

The phonofilm has had a long successful run on Broadway, New York, where it has created a tremendous sensation. Do not miss the most unusual attraction of the age. See what the uncanny genius of De Forest has accomplished for the entertainment of mankind.

"It is a marvelous thing. Unless I am very much in error, it is due to revolutionize the motion picture theatre and industry completely within an incredibly short period of time. It is not a toy, but a practical scientific wonder,—one of the greatest wonders of the time."—S. Morgan Rowell, Montreal Star.

Breed Theater

This is the era of legs.

Even a generation ago it didn't make much difference whether a woman had shapely limbs. The reason was they couldn't be seen because of the prevailing modes of dress.

But today it is different. True, there is quite a war on between two feminine factions after short skirts. Those who argue for brevity have two good reasons, and, it might be added, those who want more material in the skirt also have two reasons and both are pretty much alike.

If Paris says, "Short skirts this season, girls," those with the two good reasons display two inches more of them just by way of being emphatic. And if Paris says Long skirts this season, girls, the order is ignored and trim figures defy the great designers and modistes.

Why short skirts should be worn is ably demonstrated in Monta Bell's Pretty Ladies a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production now being shown at the Breed theater.

There is a chorus of more than 30 girls in this film, all with beautiful legs and trim, slender ankles. These girls were chosen from more than two hundred applicants who applied at the casting director's office for the jobs of chorus girls, but only those with perfectly formed legs were chosen. One look at these girls in their chorus girls' short costumes and you have the reason for the Paris decree of "short skirts."

Zazu Pitts and Tom Moore play the leading roles in this production, and have for their supporting cast such well-known people as Ann Pennington, in one of her own dance numbers, Helena D'Alky, Conrad Nagel, Norma Shearer, George K. Arthur, Lucille Le Sueur, Paul Ellis and others.

Pretty Ladies is based on a Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Adela Rogers St. Johns.

CAUSES DISCONTINUANCE OF COMENIUS INSTITUTE

Comenius Institute of Pedagogy at Prague was closed June 30 by the Czechoslovakia ministry of education. The institute was the source of considerable expense, and even more was demanded for the fulfillment of its aims. The ministry of education was unable to satisfy its demands and, being urged to economy by the ministry of finance, it became necessary to discontinue the institute.

Zoos Provide Big Business

As the wild animal zoos and circuses are constantly being depleted by death and accident, it is necessary to have constantly in the field catching new specimens, a small army of big wild game hunters. Lariats were used in catching many of these animals, but even the strongest rope was unavailing when it came to holding the rhinoceros. Usually that ponderous animal is captured by means of a pitfall.

One sixth of all the expenditures of the republic of Cuba during the coming fiscal year will be devoted to education. The budget recently approved by the Cuban congress carries a total of $83,787,588, and the education department will expend $14,056,166 of it. No other branch of the government received so much. Guatemala's budget for 1926 allots an even larger proportion to education, namely, 18 1-2 per cent; only "treasury and public credit" received more, in the budget of Mexico education stands 4th in the list of items, and it received 7 per cent of the whole amount appropriated.

World Weather Map

A daily weather map of the entire world, similar to that now issued by the United States bureau for this country, is one of the prospects that will doubtless be realized in the not far distant future in the opinion of Roscoe Nunn, associate meteorologist at the weather bureau. In pointing out the need for such a map, Mr. Nunn said that it is now impossible to study the weather of the world as a whole, even though the weather in one part of the globe may be influenced by movements of the air at distant points. "Old King Weather travels ceaselessly over the face of the entire globe," said Mr. Nunn, "but has never yet been seen whole. We feel a slap of his hand here, a kick there, while his face smiles peacefully for a spell upon a distant sea or land, but no one sees more than a small part of his great bulk at any time. The only way we can visualize him as a whole is by means of the whole weather map, based upon systematic, synchronous observations over the whole globe."

Hardy Roses Are Sought

Through the state experimental station South Dakota is endeavoring to grow roses that will be hardy and prolific. Near Sioux Falls the State Agricultural college station has 11 acres underway and 18,000 plants are growing now. Some flowers have been grown with upward of 50 petals. The state is preparing against the time when the United States prohibits the importation of rose stalks from Europe or South America.

In Airtight Bags

Observations were made at the National Academy of Sciences in Washington recently on five subjects (three men and two women) placed in an airtight bag through a stream of heated, dry air (about 85 degrees C.) was passed. Loss of weight was five to thirteen times greater than normal, oxygen consumption increased slightly, while skin temperature was fairly uniform and only one degree or so above normal owing to the comfort effect perspiration.

All-the-year sessions are proposed for the high schools of Omaha, Neb., following the successful experience of the technical high school with the four-quarter plan. This school has been operating 48 weeks a year for 7 years, and the plan has proved very satisfactory. A 4-year class is graduated at the end of each 12-week quarter. Bright and energetic pupils may complete the entire course in three years. The other three high schools have already adopted an 8-week summer session.—School Life.

JUST WHAT YOU NEED FOR BRIGHT EYES
ROSY CHEEKS
Bright Eyes—eyes that "snap" and "sparkle" till they rival the very stars, can only come from perfect health. And so it is with a clear complexion and rosy cheeks. Girls who take Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are seldom "hollow-eyed," dull or listless—because this wondrous purely vegetable favorite cleanses the system of poisonous waste by stimulating the Liver and Bowels to free and regular action. Safe, pleasant, gentle and non habit-forming. At your druggist 25c a box.

WINDJAMMER NEARS ITS END AS BRITISH CARGO VESSEL

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 5 (AP)—The windjammer has just about given up the ghost, at least so far as the British flag is concerned. The old full rigged vessel that once carried the brunt of the sea cargo is too slow nowadays and it doesn't pay.

The thousands of these British ships that sailed the seven seas now number six. The survivors remaining upon Lloyd's register are the Monkbarns, William Mitchell, Garthneil, Hewa and Kilmallie, each of which is known in many American ports, and especially Honolulu and Manila. All have served 30 or more years, and with the exception of Garthpool are three masted vessels.

The Garthpool is the sole British four master on the job and among seamen is known as The Ghost, because of the great fleet of such ships all gone to Davy Jones' locker, which it represents.

Finland seems destined to become the world's last owners of ships of this type, as most of the British sailing vessels sold within recent years have been bought by Finnish interests.

Grain from Australia, nitrate from South America and salt outward from Liverpool are about the only cargoes now offered for sailing ships.

TRAINED ORGANIZER FOR PRE-SCHOOL STUDY CIRCLES

Employment of a trained worker to organize preschool study circles in Georgia gives evidence of the success of this work which has been for several years under the guidance and support of parent-teacher associations.

The preschool study circle seems to be the logical agency in which parents may learn how to prepare their children for school life. These circles in Georgia have been so beneficial to the parents that the Laura Spelman Memorial of the Rockefeller Foundation has made the employment of a trained educator possible through a gift.

British Spirits to U. S. Drop

GLASGOW, Nov. 5 (AP)—British spirits for medicinal purposes entering the United States legally amounted to only 1,361 gallons between January and May. At this rate not more than 2,900 gallons will be sent from England for the entire year. Before prohibition was effective in the United States, Britain sent more than 1,250,000 gallons annually.

MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(By the A. P.)—Speculative operations for the advance received another decided setback today when an avalanche of selling orders, launched by bear traders, carried prices down 1 to 11 points in the first hour of trading. Some of the losses were subsequently recovered in part when operators for the rise, in an endeavor to revive bullish enthusiasm, bid up a selected list of oil, amusement, tobacco and mercantile issues, point gains ran above 2,000,000 shares for the 20th consecutive session.

Heavy selling for both accounts took place in the motor shares Hudson broke nearly 7 points to 232 and then rallied a point, and General Motors, Pierce Arrow common and preferred, Chandler, Dodge Brothers A, Hupp, Jordan, Mack Truck and White fell back 4 to nearly 2 1-2 points. Nash Motors broke 20 points to 485 on a few sales.

While the reaction was generally regarded as a natural correction of a weakened technical position, liquidation of stocks was also influenced by speculative apprehension over the money situation, a sharp break in cotton future on publication of another upward revision of the government crop estimate and reports that some of the larger commission houses were demanding increased margins.

Uneasiness over the credit situation was increased by the announcement after the market closed that the Boston Federal Reserve bank had increased its rediscount rate from 3 1-2 to 4 per cent. This lends added interest to the meeting of the New York Federal Reserve bank directors on Thursday.

Steels were in supply despite the fact that an unusually favorable contract statement of the U. S. Steel Corporation is expected at noon tomorrow. U. S. Steel common reacted 2 3-8 points to 135 1-2 and losses of 1 to 2 1-2 points took place in Bethlehem, Crucible, Gulf States, Reploglc, Sloss-Sheffield, Republic and Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

American Can broke over 4 points to 234 5-8. Other outstanding weak spots were American Linseed, Commercial Solvents A and B, Fisher Body, General Baking, General Electric, Goodrich Rubber, National Lead, Pittsburgh Terminal Coal, Woolworth and Radio Corporation, the last named falling to a new low record for the year. Du Pont opened 11 points lower at 230, but recovered about half of the loss at the close.

Baldwin Locomotive showed independent strength, crossing 103 for a gain of nearly 6 points on a revival of rumors, later officially denied, that a company had sold its valuable coal and iron land estate holdings. The stock slipped back to 129 5-8 at the close. Pacific Oil was heavily bought on rumors of an increased dividend, climbing nearly 5 points to 60 3-4 and closing within a small fraction of the top.

United Cigar Stores and Schulte stores each advanced to new peak prices for the year. Independent strength also was shown by air reduction, Atlantic Coast Line, Brunswick Balke Collender, Coca Cola, Delaware and Hudson, May Department Stores, Texas Gulf Sulphur and Union Bag and Paper, all up 2 points or more.

The money renewed unchanged at 4 per cent, despite the large deficit shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement, but the rate was firmly marked up to 5 per cent. Closing of that figure. Prime commercial paper in the first quarter of 4 1-4 per cent, and prime commercial paper rates were steady at 4 3-4 to 4 7-8 per cent.

Temporary tendencies predominated in the foreign exchange market. Unified francs broke over 10 points from yesterday's high to around 3.90 cents, a reflection of the opposition to Premier Painleve's new tax bill. Demand sterling ruled slightly lower at 4.84 5-16, and most of the other European exchanges showed nominal recessions.

TAFTVILLE

Sale to continue at Edward Adams' store until further notice.—Adv.

One of the biggest coons of the season was the trophy of a hunt Friday night by James White and William J. Malone. They have promised their friends invitations to a coon supper in the near future.

Miss Miriam Atkins of Brown University, Providence, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Atkins of South Second avenue.

NORWICH GREEKS GOT NEWS THROUGH READING BULLETIN

About fifty Greeks, men and women, from Norwich were at Webster, Mass. Sunday, to attend the dedication of a fine new Greek Orthodox church. In common with the others of the 4,000 assembled they were greatly disappointed at the non-appearance of Prince Paul Christian, crown prince of Greece, who had been announced to speak at the ceremonies.

It was only when the Norwich Greeks read The Bulletin Monday morning that they learned the explanation of Prince Paul's failure to appear. As told on the telegraph page, motor troubles so delayed him that after reaching Hartford he returned to Oyster Bay, where he is the guest of William B. Leeds and his wife, the former Princess Xenia.

The Norwich party stated that the procession planned as a part of Sunday's exercises had to be abandoned because of the rain; but the other ceremonies were very impressive.

Tree Leafless

The last rain has left many of the trees, especially fruit trees quite deposited of their leaves. In the woods, almost the only trees retaining any foliage now are the oaks.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Worth have returned, following several days' stay in New York.

Mrs. Flint Brayton will reach her home on Lincoln avenue Wednesday after a ten days' visit with Mrs. James A. Turner, Jr., in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Frank H. Pullen, of Lincoln Avenue is in Hudson, N. Y., visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. Werter Van Deusen.

Miss Katherine Elmer Brown is home from Stamford, spending several days with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. Eldred Brown, of Otis street.

Mr. and Mrs. Rollin C. Jones motored to Newton Center, Mass., and spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, formerly of Norwich.

The Monday Sewing Club's meeting yesterday was the annual food party held with Miss Elizabeth F. Pullen, at her home on Lincoln avenue, sixteen attending the luncheon at noon.

Dr. Edward P. Brewer, who has passed the season at his summer home at Bear View leaves this (Tuesday) morning by rail from New London, expecting to reach Miami Friday morning.

The next meeting of the Monday Study Club is to be held with Mrs. Frederick T. Sayles at her home on Washington street. Miss Jane McEwen Aiken entertained the club at its last meeting, when the paper was read by Mrs. Sayles and Miss Nancy H. Lucas gave the oral topic.

Farewell messages were received in Norwich Monday from Mr. and Mrs. Russell B. Olds, who, with their little daughters, Helen Louise and Patricia Ann, left Charles City, Iowa, Monday evening for Los Angeles, their intention being to make their home in California. Earlier in the year Mr. and Mrs. Olds entertained the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. Rollin C. Jones, of Broad street.

PRELIMINARY MEETING ON COMMUNITY CHESTS SHOWS IDEA WELL RECEIVED

In the Thayer building committee room of the Chamber of Commerce, which is acting as the coordinating agency to obtain the sentiment of local organizations upon the idea of a Community Chest for Norwich, a meeting was held Monday evening with an attendance of about 30 representatives of various organizations before whom speakers from Bristol and New London explained the operation of the Community Chest in their cities.

Opinions, generally favorable, were expressed by several who were called upon to speak after the visitors had been heard. All the representatives were urged to present the matter to their organizations as soon as possible and notify the Chamber of Commerce what action is taken.

Dr. S. J. Donohue, a vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided, opening the meeting by explaining that no action was to be taken, but the purpose was to ascertain the sentiment and later another meeting would be called at which organization could be made. It was the purpose of the Community Chest to eliminate numerous collection campaigns, establishing a general fund instead of from which the amount would be apportioned to the participating organizations.

M. C. Treadway of Bristol was the first speaker. He said that the Bristol Community Chest had been organized in 1922 and had its first campaign in October of that year. There were five participating organizations, the hospital, the visiting nurses association, the Boy Scouts, the boys' club and the Red Cross. Each had two representatives in the board of trustees, there were two trustees at large elected and the mayor and the president of the chamber of commerce were on the board. The budget committee of five decides upon the amount to be raised. The test of acceptance for admission to the Community Chest is that the organization must be a welfare organization but not a religious organization. The first budget was $35,000 in 1922 and in 1925 the budget was $47,000, this last one having 3,450 subscribers, which was double the amount of the year before. The Community Chest spreads the burden of charitable work from the few to the many, it brings in only one drive a year, allows executives to put in all their time on their work and brings the most influential men of the community into supervision of this charitable work. Bristol recommends it unreservedly, he said. In 1922 there were 134 cities with Community Chests. This year there are 215.

J. F. Kennedy of New London spoke of the adoption of the Community Chest plan there, now in its first year with its first drive ahead of it. The sixteen participating organizations are the Red Cross, anti-tuberculosis association, Associated Charities, Boy Scouts, Italian Ladies Aid society, Lawrence and Memorial hospital, Salvation Army, Colored Welfare Group, Visiting Nurses association, Young Men's Christian association, Young Women's Christian association, Charter House, Day Nursery, Diocesan Social Service Bureau, United Jewish Charities, Girl Scouts, Schools Service club. This includes practically all those which at any time found it necessary to go to the public to ask for funds. Any welfare organization that raises its money in New London and spends it there is eligible to go into the Community Chest. Each participating organization has representation on the board of directors, but the members of the budget committee are not from any of the participating organizations.

Mr. Kennedy said that the budget would be between $70,000 and $80,000. It is to be raised in a one-week campaign without the aid of a professional director, but the services of a professional social service organizer have been used in educating the people to the adoption of the Community Chest idea. This man, however, is not a money raiser.

Both Mr. Treadway and Mr. Kennedy were asked a number of questions on details of the plan. It was brought out that the expense of raising money by the Community Chest plan was from 6 to 7 per cent. as against from 18 to 20 per cent. by individual organization efforts.

It was also brought out in the questions that amounts needed for capital outlay or for new buildings were not included in the Community Chest budget, nor would a campaign to pay off a mortgage be included in the budget.

F. S. Hitchcock, principal of Chapman Technical school, New London, spoke of the necessity of doing the preliminary work thoroughly, getting the prominent men of the community enlisted and perfecting the organization. He spoke of the absolute justice of the decisions of the budget committee and said the operation of the Community Chest should be guided by the leading hard-headed business men of the community who would use the common sense with which such men were endowed.

When called upon to express opinions at the close of the meeting J. C. Macpherson spoke for the Y. M. C. A., E. A. Harris for the Boy Scouts, Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard for the United Workers, S. B. Palmer for the Backus hospital, Samuel Jennes for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Rev. F. M. Coholan for the diocesan bureau and the Salvation Army captain for that organization.

Mr. Harris for the Boy Scouts and Mr. Jennes for the American Legion reported that their organizations were in favor of the Community Chest, but the other speakers only gave expressions of their personal opinions which were generally favorable.

The general committee comprises the following representatives of different organizations: Chamber of Commerce, James L. Case, Arthur E. Story, H. A. Tirrell, John J. O'Rourke; Central Labor Union, Robert McNeely, William H. Donahue; Lions, William A. Anderson, C. E. Carpenter, Louis J. Fontaine; Rotary, E. A. Harris, J. M. Roantree, J. N. Weymouth; Merchants Bureau, Abner Schwarts, W. H. Cruickshank, John M. Le; Manufacturers' association, A. N. Van Wagenen, E. L. Bliven, C. J. Twist.

Organizations to which invitations were sent to send delegations of three each were the following: Boy Scouts, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Men's Hebrew Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Diocesan Bureau of Social Service, United Workers, American Red Cross, Backus hospital, and Salvation Army.

COURT GIVES FINE ON RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE

John R. Wall, negro, of 17 Stony hill, New London, was found guilty of reckless driving when arraigned before Judge Frederick N. Dimmock in Waterford town court Friday afternoon and given a fine of $25, to which costs were added. He paid up and was allowed to go.

Wall was arrested by State Policeman Whitmarsh of the Groton barracks, following an accident near Mallory hill about 11 o'clock Sunday night a week ago when his car crashed into a coupe driven by Harold Stevens of Squire street, New London. Wall was driving toward New London and attempted to pass a motor truck carrying a straw ride party travelling in the same direction as the Stevens car approached. Evidence of witnesses to the accident testified that the defendant was driving at high speed and that he collided with both the truck and the Stevens car.

The defendant was charged by the arresting officer with driving under the influence of liquor and with evading responsibility after an accident which practically demolished his car and caused considerable damage to Stevens' vehicle. Because of insufficien evidence to support the former charge the complaint was amended, alleging reckless driving. After hearing the testimony of a half dozen witnesses, Judge Dimmock found Wall guilty.

In addition to wrecking his car, Wall sustained a fractured right forearm and lacerations of the left hand when thrown through the windshied of his car. Stevens received minor cuts and abrasions, but escaped serious harm. Other occupants of both cars were uninjured. Judge Dimmock dismissed the count alleging evasion of responsibility due to lack of evidence, upon recommendation of the prosecutor.

Mischa Elman Returns

There is Norwich interest in the fact that when Mischa Elman appeared in concert in New York Sunday night for the first time since his marriage, it was to be greeted in Carnegie Hall by a tumult of the violinist's admirers. His native Russia was not so crowded as were the floor, stage and galleries of the familiar auditorium, a New York paper says.

Mr. Elman's manager let it be known that his young wife was not present, having been called away by the illness of her father in San Francisco. Mrs. Elman is a cousin of the Cadden family, of Norwich.

Third Friday the 13th.

For the third time during 1925, the 13th will fall on Friday this month. The same (supposedly) unlucky combination occurred in February and in March of the present year.

DISTURBANCE IN LOCAL THEATRE

The patrons of a local show house were very much disturbed and annoyed by the continuous coughing of a person in the audience. Don't be a nuisance because you have a cough or cold. A few doses of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND taken promptly will bring speedy relief from coughs, colds and hoarseness. Mrs. W. T. Clary, White Plains, Va., writes: "We have used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for colds and bad coughs with splendid results." Lee & Osgood Co.

MAKES ALIBI CLAIM IN AUTO DAMAGE SUIT

Judge C. B. Waller in the common pleas court here Saturday morning reserved decision after hearing the evidence in the trial of the suit of Mrs. Mary Butler Sabourin of this city against Mrs. Frank Avery of Chaplin which was an appeal by Mrs. Avery to the common pleas court from the judgment of $60 in damages and costs given against her by Justice of the Peace Albert J. Bailey.

The case comes from an automobile accident in Washington square June 1, 1924, when the plaintiff's car was one in a string of machines which had stopped. She claimed that a machine ahead of her, with registration N-3737 backed into her car twice and then drove off, but she secured the number, Wilfred A. Sabourin, who was with her in her machine at the time, corroborated her testimony.

The defendant claimed that it was not her car in the accident and gave testimony that she and her car were in Chaplin, 35 miles away from Washington square, at the time of the accident upon which Mrs. Sabourin brought suit. It was also in the testimony that there were no marks on the Avery car to show that it had struck another.

Mrs. Sabourin's car, it was claimed, had a broken head light, radiator smashed in, fenders and front springs damaged so that the expense of repairs was $53.00 and she lost the use of her car to the extent of $20 as she was a school teacher at East Hampton and while her car was laid up for repairs she had to take the bus to Marlboro and go from there in a private car.

Judge John H. Barnes was counsel for the plaintiff and Judge Frank H. Foss of Willimantic for the defendant.

NORWICH MAN SUES FOR COLLISION DAMAGE

David K. Lyon, Jr., of this city has brought suit in the superior court, returnable in December, against Stanton L. Briggs of Windham, claiming damages of $1,000 for the injuries he received and the damage sustained by his automobile in a collision with the Briggs' machine on Nov. 8, 1924, on Broadway in this city. It is alleged that the driver of the Briggs car ran it from the west to the east side of the street as it was approaching the Lyon car and collided with the latter. Lyon had his nose smashed, right hand and leg cut, left leg wrenched and strained. His automobile received damage which it was estimated would cost $400 to repair.

Bishop Shahan a Speaker

Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic university, Washington, was one of the speakers after Cardinal Hayes had opened the first national convention of the National Catholic Alumni Federation in New York at the week end at the Commodore. That night the 300 delegates, representing 30 of the 76 Catholic colleges and universities in this country were guests of the Catholic club at 120 Central Park South at a reception.

Removing Bank

In the progress of the work of widening the highway below Trading Cove, a good proportion of the high bank in front of the home of Captain John A. Ziegberg has been already removed. Great changes are noticeable in all that section, as the steam shovel gets in its work.

INDIAN MISSIONARY SPEAKS AT ST. PATRICK'S

Catholics, in their prosperity and luxury, content and forgetful, were rebuked gently but effectually at the three masses in St. Patrick's church Sunday by Rev. John S. Woods, representative of the Catholic Indian Bureau, with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Rev. Father Woods, who is a graduate of Kendrick Seminary, St. Louis, where he was ordained to the priesthood, is a native of Chicago. He has spent the twenty years since his ordination working in and visiting Catholic missions throughout the United States.

Speaking to the large congregation at the 9 o'clock mass, the children's mass, in St. Patrick's, Father Woods considered the one special effort to aid the missionary cause made annually by Catholics in general—the collection the first Sunday in each Lent for Negro and Indian missions. It did not take long to prove that such a special collection is absolutely nothing, compared to what well-to-do members of the church should and could do. The over 22,000,000 Catholics of the United States for most of the year forget that there are 11,000,000 Negroes and 350,000 Indians in the country standing in need of gospel teaching. While in 1917 Catholics of the nation contributed $480,000 toward the uplift of these two races, other denominations gave $17,000,000.

The Washington Bureau of National Catholic charities is maintaining among the Indians in Arizona, New Mexico, the northwestern portion of the country and Alaska 59 boarding schools, 28 day schools, taught by 450 Sisters. There are in the field 250 priests and about 78 lay brothers. These holy workers have bidden farewell to all that humans hold dear, going out to spend their lives in the service of these neglected souls so dear to Christ. One missionary priest in Alaska, formerly a vice-president of a college, who has chosen the mission field as his life work, travels by dog sled over a territory where there are 13,000 Indians. Many of the consecrated nuns have been 25, or 30 years teaching and training the Indian children in the bureau's schools.

Directly, Father Woods appealed to the children in the congregation to cultivate early in their hearts the mission spirit—to put away pennies, or nickels in systematic denial to one day aid toward helping these little Indian babies and older children, who, in desert places, or in the northern states, when it comes Christmas must be content wit hthe tree which the good Sisters provide, often lacking ornaments and even the simplest gifts. Father Woods told of some schools where the Indian pupils lack even stockings, during a winter temperature of 5 below zero. As for the hardships of the faithful mission teachers and preachers, living in shacks, learned mission priests who have left comfortable eastern homes, sleeping in haystacks during the severity of the awful winters, putting up with coarse and scarce food in their wearying horseback rides from one mission school to another at great distance, the preacher said such instances were too common to excite wonder among the devoted workers, although such a reproach to people in these states, selfishly enjoying luxury and comforts, fancying they have done their duty by a single contribution once a year. Most impressive was an instance he cited of a rich Catholic to whom the mission bureau priests had gone to solicit aid toward financing some new mission school project. The man was willing—but when conditions were made known, the interest which he would charge on the needed loan made it prohibitive. Shortly after, that man who had been so keen in his usury with God was touring Europe. His car overturned and he was killed. His estate was over $90,000,000.

By contrast, Mrs. Mother Drexel donates annually $140,000 toward the upkeep of 11 Indian schools, where the average attendance is 530 or 550 pupils.

St. Patrick's three congregations gave generously in response to Father Woods' appeal. From Norwich he goes to St. Patrick's church, Hartford, making that rectory his headquarters while he is in Connecticut laboring for the cause for the coming month.

Father Woods gave communion to a large number at this mass, having the assistance of the rector, Rt. Rev. M. H. May. Henry F. LaFontaine played for the Junior Choir hymns, one of his interludes being "The Lost Chord," in which he used the organ chimes.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S COUNCIL HELD STATE MEETING

The fifth annual meeting of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women was held Saturday at the Hotel Fond, Hartford. The local council was represented by a large delegation with Mrs. R. F. Sullivan chairman. The women listened to a most interesting address by Bishop Nilan, who is the founder of this social activity in this state; also by Dr. John A. Lapp, director of the social action department of the Catholic National Welfare Councils, of Chicago.

Dr. Lapp, who is an authority in the social service field and author of several books on civic and social education, was most optimistic in his views on civic, religious and social questions. He urged the 500 delegates to take the optimistic view on these questions and gave scientific facts why this should be done.

The election for county chairman resulted in Miss Anna McGrory of Norwich being chosen as New London county chairman. Reports were read by the chairmen of the many councils of the state and addresses by Mrs. Arthur Emmett, in charge of the Big Sister Work; Miss Mary P. Flaherty, chairman on social legislation, and Mrs. James J. Dunn, chairman on national membership, were enjoyed.

The special musical program was under the direction of Miss Morris, a graduate of Pope Pius X School of Liturgical Music at Manhattan, N. Y. The solos by Mrs. George L. Taylor of Danbury gave much pleasure, her beautiful soprano voice being heard to distinct advantage, the accompanist being Miss Elizabeth Cain of Hartford. The guests were cordially greeted by the reception committee of which Mrs. George B. Newton was chairman.

At noon a delicious luncheon was served by the committee on arrangements of which Mrs. William N. Meagher was in charge.

HAD LOOT FROM NORWICH MAN'S COTTAGE

Joseph Dodo of Eastern avenue, New London, was bound over to the January term of the superior court when he was arraigned before Judge C. C. Costello in Groton town court Monday morning, following his arrest Sunday night by State Policeman Frank Schweikert on a charge of breaking into and entering a cottage near Poquonoc Bridge, Groton, and stealing goods. The defendant pleaded guilty to the charge. Bonds were fixed at $1,500 which the accused was unable to furnish and he was remanded to jail.

According to the state police, complaints had been received that a number of dwellings in the vicinity known as the Gardner farm, Poquonoc Bridge, had been broken into. Sergt. Clifford N. Gorgas, State Policemen Joseph Bobnick and Frank Schweikert, set a watch about the place. Their vigilance was rewarded Sunday night at Midway when a Ford truck, without lights, was seen to stop near a gasoline filling tank. State Policeman Schweikert flashed a light upon a man whom he later found to be Dodo. He was carrying an empty gasoline container.

Dodo was taken to the state police barracks and after an examination he admitted to the police that he had a quantity of household articles which were taken from the cottage owned by Ralph Patrick of Norwich on the Gardner farm. Sergeant Gorgas and State Policemen Bobnick and Schweikker visited Dodo's home and located 15 blankets, 20 pillows, a stove, a motor boat engine, a number of phonograph records, and other articles, estimated at $200 in value. The loot was removed to the state police barracks.

According to Dodo's statement, he visited the Gardner farm on the night of Nov. 3, and broke down the doors and windows with a hatchet. He went to the cottage again Friday night and carried away the supplies. An investigation of conditions at the Gardner farm neighborhood by state policemen showed that a number of cottages have been broekn into and stripped of household articles.

WILL CONDUCT CONFERENCE ON WEEK-DAY SCHOOLS

Week-day schools of religion are given a large place in the program of the state Sunday school convention in Bridgeport, November 18 to 20. Professor Edward R. Bartlett, director of the department of religious education in DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana, will conduct four conferences on the subject during the convention, giving nearly eight hours to the discussion of the various principles, plans and problems involved in the promotion of week-day schools of religion. Some of the subjects which he will discuss are: "Problems in Organization of Weekday Schools of Religion," "The Program of Week-day Schools of Religion and Its Administration," "The Curriculum; Content and Method of Week-day Schools of Religion." Since the week-day school of religion is the most important subject in the field of religious education today, and because many places in Connecticut are either carrying on a school of this character, or expecting to start one in the near future, many communities are planning to send delegates to the convention who will seriously take all of Professor Bartlett's work.

Already thousands of children are attending the week-day schools of religion in Bridgeport, New Britain and South Willington, on released time from the public school and a majority of the children in Meriden will be in week-day schools of religion beginning early in January. Other communities like Middletown are studying the matter with a view to opening such schools a year later.

FINED FOR PARKING ON ROAD WITHOUT LIGHTS

Fred J. Scoville of New Haven was fined $5 and costs in a justice court at Lisbon Monday evening when he was presented by Grand Juror George F. Heimboldt on a charge of parking his car on a state highway without lights. Scoville was driver of a truck engaged in carting scenery for the Mansfield Players and, on Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock his truck broke down on the Jewett City road and before it could be repaired or hauled away darkness overtook him. The truck was without lights and Mr. Scoville sought to secure a lantern from a nearby house but in his absence an automobile driven by a Mr. Flynn of Plainfield crashed into the rear of the truck. The automobile in which Mr. Flynn, his wife and two children was riding was considerably damaged. Mr. Flynn caused the arrest of Mr. Scoville and he will bring civil action to recover the damages.

Fined in Waterford Court

Lucius A. Browning of this city entered a plea of guilty to the charge of speeding when presented before Judge Dimmock in the Waterford town court last Friday. He was arrested ten days ago by Constable Frank L. Peabody and his case had been continued until Browning was represented by United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson. Browning was fined $10 and costs, which he paid.

NORWICH TOWN

"High Spots of the National Convention", was the theme of Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey's address at the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church. The theme took the form of a general outline of the the National Council, held recently in Washington, D. C., in a very interesting summary of events. Rev. Mr. Bailey held the close attention of his congregation. Much emphasis was laid on the ideal city in which this large company of people numbering many thousands, representing every state in the union, assembled for the eight days session.

At the opening of the Sunday school period, an interesting ten minute patriotic programme was given by the members of Charles Barber's class.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society, also the annual election and installation of officers and committees took place at the evening service. The retiring president, Arthur Avery, was in charge of the business meeting when reports were submitted and new officers voted on. Later, the meeting was turned over to the leader, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, who offered prayer and conducted the installation exercises. The new officers for 1926 are: President, Miss Ida Beebe; vice president, Robert Avery; corresponding secretary, Miss Jessie C. Hyde; recording secretary, Miss Louise M. Avery; treasurer, Arthur Avery; stewardship superintendent, Miss Elizabeth Avery; and the following committees: Prayer meeting, Mrs. Burton Jopson; chairman, Charles Marsh, and the Misses Victoria St. Martin, Marion L. Bailey, Elizabeth Avery; Lookout, Burton Jopson, chairman, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, Misses Mabel Corrigeux, Helen Schwank, H. Louise Hyde and Woodward Wheeler; Missionary, Miss Jessie Hyde, chairman, Irving Manning, Ralph Marsh, and Misses Louise Avery, Bessie Whaley, Florence Wheeler; music, Miss Louise Bailey, chairman, Misses Bernice Underwood, Rose Durr, Flower, Miss Ida Beebe, chairman, Misses Dorothea Buckley, Ethel Whaley and Elton Odgers, Lyle Johnson, Kenneth Tembel; social, Miss Esther Durr, chairman, Reginald Avery and Misses Dorothy Waterman, Rose Durr, Lucile Browning; citizenship and information, George F. Hyde, chairman, Frank Chapman, Nathan Wheeler, Arthur Avery, George Durr and Miss Ilose K. Durr.

During installation, the new candidates were addressed with words of welcome by the retiring officers and chairmen as follows: The retiring president, Arthur Avery, in the absence of the new president addressed the vice president, which Mrs. Burton Jopson spoke for the retiring treasurer, in welcoming the new candidate, Ralph Marsh had a message for the corresponding secretary and a letter from Miss Marion L. Bailey, read by Rev. Mr. Bailey, greeted the new recording secretary. Another letter was read by Miss Louise Hyde from Miss Susan Hyde, which extended greetings to the junior superintendent, Miss Jessie Hyde spoke to the stewardship superintendent, also prayer meeting committees; Miss Elisabeth Avery to lookout committee; Mrs. Burton Jopson to missionary committee; Miss Marjory Merry to music committee; Miss Louise Avery, to flower committee; Miss Mabel Corrigeux to social committee in the absence of Miss Ida Beebe and Miss Louise Hyde spoke to the citizenship and information committee. Rev. Mr. Bailey then gave the charge to the several officers and committees.

The committee on missions and finance of the Congregational church will hold a meeting at the parsonage Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

"Our Work Through the American Missionary Association," Acts 8:26-40, will be the theme for discussion at the Congregational mid-week service for confesence and prayer, Thursday evening.

The November meeting of the Dorcas Home Missionary society of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with the president, Mrs. Jane B. Aldrich.

At the First M. E. Church during the Sunday morning worship, Henry C. Wolfe gave a talk on the Near East Relief. Mr. Wolfe whose home is in the west has headquarters in Hartford, during his travel through the states in the interests of the work. Miss Grace Mitchell was the leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening, when the topic was "What can young people do for international friendship?" The scripture references were found in Matthew, Acts and Galations. At the Sunday evening preaching service, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich preached a splendid sermon on The Value of Obedience.

The Misses Gladys and Irene Bonney of Whitneyville, were guests over the week end at the home of the grandparents, Mrs. S. I. Bonney of Harland road.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck and son Crosby, motored to East Haddam Sunday and called on Mr. Peck's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. William Peck. They had as their auto guest, Mrs. William A. White of Leffingwell.

Miss Gertrude Tefft of Wightman avenue, has had as her guests for a week, her aunt, Mrs. Groves and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Thorpe and son of New Bedford.

During their stay in Norwich Tow they were dinner guests remaining for the evening at the home of Mrs. Charles F. Geer of West Town street. Mr. Thorpe was a week end visitor with his relatives, returning home with his family on Sunday.

INTIMATES PUBLIC IS BEING MULCTED BY COAL MAGNATES

Statement Made by Secretary of the American Fair Trade League—Expresses Likelihood of Formal Charges Under the Penal Law Before the New York Commercial Frauds Court—Charge Would Be That Anthracite Coal Operators Were Compelling Retialers to Accept Adulterated Coal or Be Deprived of All Deliveries—League is Not Concerned With the Merits of the Controversy Between the Operators and Miners.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—The American Fair Trade league, composed of 300 manufactures and trade associations, issued a statement today declaring that its investigation of complaints that anthracite coal is being adulterated and misbranded, "indicated widespread violations of the laws of several states." The statement said that the investigation, covering a period of several weeks, also "confirmed the charges recently made by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to the effect that anthracite mine owners were mulcting the public by a re-sizing plan forced upon dealers."

The league was organized in 1925 "to promote honesty in manufacturing, in advertising and in merchandising and to bring to public attention existing evils in merchandising methods which operate to the injury of society." Among the members are the American Tobacco, the General Electric Co., the American Chain Co., the Packard Motor Car Co., the National Retail Hardware association, and the National Association of Retail Druggists.

Edmund A. Whittier, secretary treasurer of the league, who issued the statement, said that the preliminary investigation of recent coal deliveries in the New York district indicated the likelihood of formal charges under the penal law, before the New York commercial frauds court. He regretted that legal procedure might make it necessary to name certain retail dealers as defendants in a test case, because the real offenders were coal operators who were compelling retailers to accept "adulted" coal, or be deprived of all deliveries."

The statement said, in part:

"With the merits of the present controversy between the anthracite operators and their employees, the league is not concerned. The questions involved thereby are entirely outside the scope of its activities. But the league is directly interested in the situation as it affects the public's right to know what it pays for and to get it.

"The most significant fact developed is that six months ago distributors were notified by anthracite operators of a re-sizing plan whereby a largely increased percentage of less salable sizes was passed along to the consumer.

"Prior to the publication of Mr. Lewis' statement, the American Fair Trade League received complaints from anthracite users who believe that coal they have purchased lately is below the standards of value and usefulness indicated by the usual grade names for the various sizes. Some of these consumers have applied to the league for relief in the belief that the coal situation is parallel to the situation in shoe. Trades where the league has compelled manufacturers and dealers to discontinue the unfair use of familiar trade names and terms by which the public is accustomed by long experience to estimate the quality and value of certain commodities.

"While the present situation in the coal trade makes the task of correcting fraudulent trade practices a difficult one, we believe that if the complaints we have received are an indication of the wide extent of misbranding and adulteration of anthracite coal a definite cause of action lies against distributors of this commodity. The league will welcome evidence from consumers generally relating to the delivery of adulterated anthracite coal."

In the event that the league determines to carry the matter to the frauds court, it will have available a tested line of procedure. A formal complaint would be made to the district attorney accompanied by a transcript of the evidence gathered by the league's investigators. While this was declared tonight to have been already 'most carefully prepared,' it was deemed possible that the district attorney might order a corroborative inquiry, the results of which would influence a formal presentation to the commercial frauds court.

The situation in that tribunal was said today to insure an early hearing of the case in which the league would appear as complainant "in its own good right."

The report made public tonight cited the new standards recommended to the anthracite industry by the operators conference on April 1, as having "changed the value of all these sizes (egg, stove, chestnut, etc.,) by permitting introduction in each size of a large proportion of coal taken from other sizes."

"Stove coal was adulterated by introducing a larger proportion of egg and chestnut," the league declared. "Egg coal was adulterated by introducing more broken coal, chestnut by more pea, and pea coal by more buckwheat."

MOTHER LODGE OF ELKS TO CONTEST CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—A sharp legal battle between the mother lodge of the Elks and United States District Attorney Buckner's office was in prospect after the exclusion today of a deputy U. S. marshal from the clubhouse. The marshal carried subpoenaes calling for books and papers in connection with the "beer investigation" recently ordered under the prohibition laws.

Following the reflection of the marshal, Mr. Buckner ordered a subpoena served upon the club doorman, declaring that the investigation would be extended to cover a section of the federal criminal code concerning resistance offered a federal officer in the serving of a legal or judicial writ or court process.

Elks' club attorneys said they would not produce the books and papers until if was determined whether the grand jury conducting the investigation has a right to them. They declared that they did not believe that the government has a right to the books and papers of a secret, fraternal organization, and they contend that the club has the right to exclude non-members.

Mr. Buckner vigorously opposed the stand taken by the club's attorney, stating that "if it should be decided those gentlemen are right in their contention, club membership would be a pretty popular thing, for such a position would put a private club or fraternal organization above the law."

A "John Doe" subpoena was later left at the home of Albert Wallace, manager of the club, with a woman said to be his mother-in-law. The grand jury will convene tomorrow and will question 11 waiters in the inquiry concerning the alleged sale of "3 per cent. beer" in th eclub.

EAST HARTFORD MAN GUILTY VIOLATION OF SULLIVAN LAW

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Eugene Reising, 41 years old inventor of East Hartford, Conn., pleaded guilty today when he was arraigned before Judge Allen charged with violation of the Sullivan law for selling guns and silencers to members of the recently broken up robber band of "Cowboy" Tessler.

Judge Allen set the date for the sentence for Nov. 17 in order to investigate Reising's contention that he had sold the guns and silencers without any knowledge that they were to be used in violating the law. Two of the leaders of the "Cowboy Gang," Fred and Arthur Rothermel, were recently sentenced to prison, and Frank (Cowboy Tessler is now in the Tombs awaiting trial for murder.

EIGHT PERSONS WERE HURT IN COLLISION OF TROLLEYS

MEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 10—Eight persons were injured today in a rear end collision of trolley cars on the Fellsway here. While a Boston elevated car was stopped for adjustment of its trolley a car of the Eastern Massachusetts Railway crashed into it. William Craig, motorman of the Eastern Massachusetts car, was taken to the hospital with a fractured wrist and head injuries.

MAY REPEAL MOST OF THE EXCISE AND SPECIAL TAXES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—The house ways and means committee today voted to slash almost $114,000,000 more from the annual federal tax burden by repealing most of the excise and special taxes now in effect and cutting substantially the levy on automobiles.

This completed the revision of rates in preparation for the drafting of a tax reduction bill to be presented to the house next month, and the committee estimated tonight that it had approved reductions totalling $308,372,709, or slightly more than was proposed by the treasury.

The committee today also approved the new surtax rates, for which a maximum of 20 per cent. on incomes in excess of $100,000 already had been fixed. The present maximum is 40 per cent. on incomes in excess of $200,000.

Under the new schedule, no change in rates applying on incomes under $43,000 would be made. The reductions effected by broadening to $10,000 to each income bracket calling for rates between 15 and 20 per cent.

Automobile levies received the major share of the excise reductions. The tax on pleasure cars and motorcycles was trimmed from five to three per cent. representing a cut of about $40,000,000 annually in revenue. While repeal of the levies on automobile trucks and wagons, tires and accessories was approved. Accounting for about $31,000,000 more.

No change was made in the taxes on admissions and dues although the committee voted to exempt legitimate theatres housing the spoken drama and "high class musical entertainments" from the ten per cent. admission levy if a provision susceptible to adequate administration could be drawn. Chairman Green doubted if this could be done. The admission levy now applies on tickets selling for more than 50 cents.

WOULD REDUCE NUMBER OF BROADCASTING STATIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—The fourth national radio conference today went on record as favoring a sharp reduction in the present number of broadcasting stations, urged the commerce department to refuse further licenses until such a reduction has taken place, and expressed opposition to inclusion of direct advertising in broadcasting programs.

The conference's action on these questions was taken through adoption of the reports of two of its nine committees. The resolution favoring reduction in the number of broadcasting stations was declared by delegates to offer the most feasible solution for the present congestion of the air. Submitted with the unanimous approval of the committee on operating regulations the resolution was virtually unopposed on the floor of the conference.

A question as to the fate under this program of broadcasting stations which have been completed but have not yet been licensed brought the response from Secretary Hoover that their builders had been given the gravest warnings by the commerce department, and he saw nothing for them to do but to wait until there was room for them in the broadcasting structure. He emphasized however, that wherever the department had an available wave length it could assign to a station without interfering with those laready in operation it would do so.

...nse Evidence in Mitchell Courtmartial

Captain Robert Oldys, of the War Plans Section, Testified in Support of Colonel Mitchell.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Five witnesses added today to the evidence the defense is placing before the general courtmartial trying Colonel William Mitchell in an effort to prove the truth of his published charges that the war and navy departments are incompetent, negligent and almost treasonable in their administration of the national defense. Each of the five contributed statements to Representative Frank R. Reid, chief counsel for the air officer, tonight characterized as "most helpful to the defense."

Captain Robert Oldys, of the war plans section, army air service, testified in support of Colonel Mitchell's statement that high ranking army and navy officers had given congress misleading information about aeronautics and cited an instance where an army pilot, Major Harley Wheeler had been killed because he "tried to save his ship rather than himself."

The witness said Major Wheeler had been reprimanded by a non-flying officer because his squadron, then serving in Hawaii, was smashing so many ships, and it was after the reprimand that he was killed trying to save his plane. Mr Reid cited this disaster, he explained to the court, to prove Colonel Mitchell's charge that the lives of airmen "are used as pawns."

Other evidence held by the defense to be "important and material" to its case in contesting the charges of conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline was given by Captain Oldys. He quoted from the Lassiter air board report of 1923 to show that unless steps were taken then to improve conditions in the air service it would have to be "practically demobilized." Although the secretary of war approved the report, he testified, its recommendations have not been carried out by the department.

Colonel Mitchell's charge that the war department had been guilty of almost treasonable administration in not forestalling the attempt of a foreign organization to secure a foothold in Central America" was another point supported by Captain Oldys. He read from official records of the air service an extract of a letter stating that the American minister to Guatemala on December 31, 1922, "had urged that the United States take steps to facilitate the establishment of an air mail service through Central America, as alien enterprise was attempting to gain a foothold" there. He also testified that the McNair report on aviation conditions in Hawaii was "inaccurate" and that the chiefs of the army air service, ordinance bureau and coast artillery had recommended that it be disregarded by the war department because it was erroneous." Later, the witness said the report was used by a war department officer as a basis for testimony before a congressional committee.

SEVEN JURORS SELECTED FOR TRIAL OF OLYMPIA MACRI

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—Today's proceedings in the selection of the jury for the second Olympia Macri murder trial transferred from New Haven county to Litchfield county on a change of venue were virtually a repitition of yesterday. The same number of talesmen, 32, were examined with the same result; one being accepted as a juror, fifteen being excused by the court, four by the defense and three by the state.

Today was the sixth day of the retrial. At the end of the sixth day of the first trial eleven jurymen were in the box. Only seven had been chosen in the same length of time here.

Examination of veniremen proved to be uninteresting except for an occasional clash of counsel. The spectators included Mrs. Josepha Whitney, New Haven society woman, who has shown an interest in the case since the first trial started in New Haven county last spring. She was accompanied by Mrs. Nelson Luddington, wife of Dr. Luddington of New Haven.

The seventh juror, chosen near the close of the forenoon session, is James H. Dodd, 43, farmer of New Milford. He is 43, married and childless.

When court adjourned this afternoon the state had exercised 17 of its 25 peremptory challenges and the defense sixteen.

Astounding Crash In Prices of Stocks

Fell 5 to 27 Points in the Largest Day's Trading in History of New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(By the A. P.)—The bottom apparently dropped out of today's stock market and prices collapsed 5 to 27 points in the largest day's trading in the history of the New York stock exchange.

Total sales were calculated by Associated Press tabulators at 3,340,600 shares, or 539,000 above the previous 1925 record established on Nov. 4. Today's total also compares with 3,072,000 on December 31, 1916 following the "leak" on President Wilson's peace note to Germany, and with the previous record for all time of 3,270,000 shares of April 30, 1901 just before the "Northern Pacific panic."

Today's decline came with dramatic suddenness after a succession of twenty "two million shares" days of almost steadily rising prices. It was started by professional speculators for the decline, who apparently acted on the theory that the raising of the Boston Federal Reserve rediscount rate forecast an early increase by the New York institution and signalled the approaching end of the "bull market," which has continued, with few interruptions, for about two years.

In many quarters, however, the drastic shake-out was regarded as an over-due correction of a weakened technical condition arising out of recent speculative excesses in a number of motor and high priced industrial stocks. The fact that the sharpest declines took place in these issues seemed to lend color to that theory. While Wall street is sharply divided in opinion as to the future course of prices, it was generally agreed that today's declines will have a sobering effect on small speculators who have been inclined to reckless trading.

Wall street awaits with considerable interest the weekly meeting of the board of governors of the New York Federal Reserve bank on Thursday afternoon. While officials of the bank decline, in accordance with their traditional policy, to make any advance comment about a possible change in rate, they pointed out that credit conditions in New York and Boston were wholly dissimilar.

Rediscounting by the Boston bank has increased nearly one and a half times in volume in the last two months and earning assets have nearly doubled. As a result, the reserve ratio of the Boston bank has decreased 15 points from 82.6 to 67.6 per cent. Somewhat smaller reductions in reserve rations have taken place in Cleveland and Chicago.

Rediscounts of the New York Federal Reserve bank have remained practically stationary for the last two months with only a nominal increase in the volume of federal reserve credit outstanding. The reserve ration here has actually advance from 79.7 to 81.2 per cent. The raising of the Boston rate, however will have a tendency to divert rediscounting business to this center and result in a withdrawal from New York of New England bank funds now employed here in call loans on stocks collateral. The extent to which this takes place undoubtedly will govern the rate policy of the New York institution.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE TO ELECT "DRY" POLITICIANS

CHICAGO, Nov. 10—Intensive organization plans to put the law enforcement activities of the anti-saloon league on the same thorough local basis as the legislative situation were launched today at the conference of several hundred workers following the five day convention. Efforts, of the county and state groups, heretofore concentrated on the election of dry state and national officials, will be turned to local officers, both elected and candidates.

With the saloon wiped out, the supply cut off, the educational battle against the demand, the use of alcohol, must be pressed, league leaders declared.

The extension of the dry movement abroad was another of the principal subjects of the workers' conference, and reports were given on the surveys of the foreign situation by members of the league in work in Europe and South America.

It is easy enough to take things philosophically, but it's hard to part with them that way.

ARMISTICE DAY

Armistice day, when a new sun rose,
And the hate and the horror reached a close.
But here is the slave of a crawling crutch,
So made by the shrapnel's devilish whim,
And our ribbons and trinkets don't mean much
To a man torn limb from limb.
Armistice day! And a peace proclaimed,
But how is it peace to the halt and maimed?

Armistice day, when the curtain dropped
On the fragic field and the strife was stopped.
But there are no fields, nor hills, nor skies
For him whom the noonday lends no light;
For the demon of gas ate out his eyes
And his Armistice day is night.
Armistice day! With the war behind!
But how is it ended for one made blind?

Armistice day! And the wide world cheers
And laughs and forgets its former fears.
But the wooden crosses stand in hordes
And stretch white arms in an endless prayer.
For they who have paid for the broken swords
Hold eternal armistice there.
Armistice day! Oh, forget our pride
And let wars be over—by those who died!

SQUABBLE IN BOSTON OVER THE ARMISTICE DAY PARADE

The Kiwanis, Rotary and Square and Compass Clubs Decline to Parade Because Four So-Called Radical Organizations Are Expected to Be in the Line of March—Character of Parade is Disapproved by American Legion Officials—Governor Fuller Has Refused to Name a Chief Marshal.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—The withdrawal of three prominent organizations, the condemnation of American Legion officials and Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards, wife of the former commander of the Yankee Division, and the refusal of Governor Fuller to name a chief marshal were the eleventh hour developments tonight in a campaign against the Armistice day parade which will be held in this city tomorrow.

The Armistice day committee were informed tonight by representatives of the Kiwanis, Rotary and Square and Compass clubs that those organizations would not parade because their members objected to the presence of four so-called radical organizations which are expected to be in the line of march.

The headquarters of the Greater Boston Council of Boy Scouts announced that none of its units had been granted permission to parade and regular army officers said that all members of the first army corps had been instructed not to parade in army uniform.

The parade was condemned by officers of Roxbury Post 44, American Legion, and by Mrs. Edwards because "peace at any cost" organizations were expected to march.

Reverend George Lyman Paine, chairman of the Armistice day committee conferred with Governor Fuller today about naming a chief marshal to lead the parade. The governor, it was announced at the state house, refused to designate a military man for that post. After the conference with the governor, Chairman Paine announced that Hammond T. Fletcher, once a candidate for mayor of Boston, would act as chief marshal. He will have a number of Boston University students as his aides.

While Mayor Curley and other city officials have officially ignored the parade, Governor Fuller will review it from a stand erected on the state house grounds.

In a statement issued tonight, Chairman Paine predicted that the parade would be a successful demonstration for international peace, defluence the Massachusetts department of the American Legion when it despite the presence of the four so-called radical organizations.

Francis J. Good, state commander, said that the presence of the pacifist element in the parade did not incline an invitation to participate in the demonstration.

A month ago, he said, the Legion made plans for its own observance of the day. These call for an 11 o'clock a. m. observance on Boston Common and for an 8 to 10 radio programme in the evening.

Commander Good, who has accepted Governor Fuller's invitation to view the parade from the state house reviewing stand, said that the Massachusetts Legionnaires would watch th eparade, "with interest and concern."

SENATOR BUTLER'S IDEA OF ARMISTICE DAY

Woburn, Mass., Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—Armistice day belongs to the veterans alone, United States Senator Butler declared today when he commented on the Boston Armistice day parade controversy in his speech to the Woburn Chamber of Commerce.

"Other organizations," he said, "have taken advantage of Armistice day to express their own views. The day belongs to the World war veterans alone and the only views to be expressed should contain evidence of the nation's gratitude to the veterans. No other thoughts should intervene on this sacred day."

Senator Butler expected to be one of the speakers at the Armistice day meeting in Boston tomorrow night intimated that he would again refer to the parade controversy in his address.

ARMISTICE EVE DINNER FOR CHARLES E. HUGHES

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—The chief contribution of the new United States to the peace of the world lies not in "demands for formulas, in resolutions or mass meetings, and in documents and declarations calling for the outlawing of war," former Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes asserted at an Armistice eve dinner in his honor here tonight.

He said it lay rather in the exhibition of a temperate disposition on questions affecting international justice, national self restraint in controversies concerning the United States, and readiness to assist the government in solving difficult problems.

Responding to the tributes of Elihu Root, also former secretary of state, and Irvink T. Bush, toastmaster at the dinner, for his efforts to "promote world peace and international good will," Secretary Hughes declared that "our most important service will be found not so much in any specific act as in the spirit in which we conduct our foreign relations."

"If any nation on earth can conduct its foreign affairs in a spirit of kindliness of esteem, of regard for the feelings of others," he said, "it is the United States. Our greatest interest is international friendships. Indeed our national prestige is inseparably connected with the demonstration of our sense of justice."

OBITUARY

Joseph Randolph Coolidge

BOSTON, Nov. 10—Joseph Randolph Coolidge, oldest graduate of the Harvard law school, died at his home here today at the age of 96. He was a brother of the late T. Jefferson Coolidge, former United States ambassador to France, who died in 1920.

Mr. Coolidge, who took special courses in the Lawrence scientific school from 1848 to 1850, at the age 96 had the distinction of being the oldest Harvard man. He was two years older than George A. Peabody, of Danvers, Mass., oldest Harvard college graduate, who entered as a freshman in 1848, was graduated 1852. Mr. Coolidge received his degree from the law school in 1854. His son and his grandson, J. Randolph, Jr., 3rd, both graduated from Harvard.

George Chandler

GREENWICH, Nov. 10—George Chandler, former vice president of the Connecticut state federation of labor and the state secretary of the carpenters' union, died at his home in Greenwich tonight at 6 o'clock. Mr. Chandler had been in ill health for more than a year, but had been able to attend to his affairs as business agent of the carpenters union in Greenwich until last Thursday, when he collapsed after luncheon with labor officials at his home.

Mr. Chandler was one of the few labor leaders who had been able to keep harmoniously in accord with the employer and the employe. For the past twenty years he had been business agent of the carpenters' union in Greenwich and it was not until last year that he resigned as vice president of the State Federation of Labor.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon from his home.

Arthur E. Bowers

SOUTH MANCHESTER, Nov. 10—Former Senato Arthur E. Bowers, a Yale alumnus and one of the donators of the Yale bowl, died at his home here tonight, pneumonia being the cause of death. He was a selectman for the town of South Manchester for eight years and was a state senator from the fourth district for two terms. Mr. Bowers had just returned from a trip to South America and Panama.

President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth college will soon sail for Europe with Mrs. Hopkins, it was announced today. After seeing the Chicago-Dartmouth game at Chicago next Saturday Mr. Hopkins will go to New York to join his wife and embark. They expect to return to this country shortly before Christmas.

FRENCH FINANCIAL BILL IN CHAMBER THURSDAY

PARIS, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Premier Painleve will submit his proposals in the form of a bill for financial restoration to the chamber of deputies Thursday. The groups composing M. Painleve's majority in the chamber have found it impossible to agree either on the government financial measures or on the socialist plan for a capital levy. It was therefore decided that the situation could be cleared only by a vote of the chamber.

This decision, when it became known in the lobbies was accepted as the death knell of the cabinet. The premier, however, gave no indication of any intention to resign, as was the case when he had disagreed with M. Caillaux. He accepted the challenge of the socialists and will go before the chamber and fight it out.

"The government has taken its position upon the financial measures and is glad that the finance committee has done likewise," he said upon leaving Elysee Palace this evening. "The issue is now clearly up to parliament, and we hope it will be decided before long."

M. Painleve's action is attributed in some quarters to criticisms arising through the changes he made in his cabinet during the parliamentary recess, though those close to him declare that he is thoroughly aroused by the antagonism he has encountered among friends, and proposes to make them show their hands in the open.

The finance committee of the chamber today finally disposed of the socialist capital levy proposal, deciding against it by a vote of 13 to 7, with five abstentions. Because of this vote the socialist leaders announced that their coalition with the radicals and republican Socialists was at an end.

NAVAL COURT OF INQUIRY TO RECALL MRS. LANSDOWNE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of the airship Shenandoah's commander, will be recalled Monday before the naval court of inquiry investigating the wreck of that craft for questioning as to the charge made at the Mitchell court martial that an officer of the navy department sought to have her give false testimony before the naval court.

In the opening of the Mitchell defense yesterday, Rep. Frank R. Reid, asserted that he could produce evidence that Mrs. Lansdowne had been approached by a naval officer in an effort to have her retract before the Shenandoah court her original statement that her husband had been ordered to take the Shenandoah on her fatal flight over his protest to the navy department.

Immediately after the Shenandoah was wrecked Mrs. Lansdowne issued a public statement saying her husband had protested against making the flight because of his apprehension of encountering bad weather. Later, before the court, she reiterated her statement that the commander had made a protest and said the documentary evidence produced at the inquiry and consisting of letters exchanged between her husband and the navy department supported her declaration.

EXPERT TESTIMONY IN TRIAL OF DR. BLAZER

LITTLETON, Colo., Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Although the defense has rested its case in the trial of Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer who is charged with the murder of his 24-year old imbecile daughter, Hazel, the presentation of expert testimony on the questioned insanity of the defendant continued throughout the day with the examination of alienists offered in rebuttal by the state. A brief night session was held in order to speed up the trial.

"He was insane on the day of the homicide."

"He was not insane on the day of homicide."

These were the conflicting differences of opinion parade before the jury by defense and prosecution alienists.

WILLIMANTIC

John Phillips, rural mail carrier from the North Windham post office, received painful injuries and his Ford delivery automobile was wrecked, about 9 o'clock Tuesday forenoon, when it was struck a broadside blow by one of the Tait Brothers ice cream delivery trucks, in front of Hansen's store in North Windham. Phillips had completed the work of arranging his mail for his route through sections of North Windham and Chaplin and was turning his machine around in the road when the truck came along, headed toward this city and ploughed into the side of the mail car. The Ford was pushed back several feet and all four tires were knocked off the rims. Two wheels were smashed and one side crushed in. Phillips sustained a cut over the eye and bled profusely. Constable Wilbur G. Stevens of North Windham conducted a preliminary investigation and later turned the matter over to State Policeman Walter Hardesty of Stafford Springs. According to the officer the measurements showed that the Danielson man was driving the truck on the left side of the road and he notified him to appear in the local police court this Wednesday morning to answer to a charge of reckless driving.

But two of the four cases assigned for the session of the Windham county superior court Tuesday were ready for trial, udge Edwin C. Dickenson opened court at 10 a. m. Attorney for defense in the case of ohn A. Ordway et al vs. William A. Haddad was given permission for a continuance.

In the case of Henry Duplease vs. Charles S Huling, D. A., attorney for the defense stated that his client is 82 years of age and due to illness was unable to attend. Attorney for the plaintiff argued that the deposition of the defendant be taken, which was so ordered by the court and will be presented this Wednesday when it was expected the case could be tried. Henry Duplease, the plaintiff, alleges that he agreed to find a purchaser for property Windham road. He did this and sold the property to Louis Morrissey for $3,500. He states that there was an agreement whereby he was to receive $100 for his services. The sale was made on June 21, 1924. No money was paid him and on August 9, Duplease received judgment from Justice of the Peace Dean to recover $100 with costs of $10.44. The defendant took appeal to this.

STABS SELF WITH KNIFE; CONDITION IS CRITICAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 10.—While creating one of his frequent drunken disturbances at the home of his parents, 62 Milk street, Eddie John, 34, plunged a long bread knife into his stomach about three o'clock Tuesday afternoon. He is in a critical condition at St. Joseph's hospital. John is a well-known character in this city. He has figured in a series of escapades. Up to a few years ago when his driver's license was revoked he was arrested several times for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. One of these escapades was in the vicinity of Danielson where he disappeared into the woods after his machine had collided with another. One of his deplorable habits has been to get intoxicated and disturb the peace of his home. He became boisterous at his home Tuesday afternoon and, relatives requested the police department to cause his arrest. Officer F. Rudolph Laramee was on his way to the place when John attempted suicide. He went into the kitchen, picked up a bread knife with a blade about seven inches long and over one inch wide. Before he could be stopped he had struck at his stomach three times. At the third attempt the blade pierced through his clothing and entered the body several inches. When Officer Laramee arrived, John was weakened but fully conscious. He displayed signs of intoxication. Dr. Charles A. Jenkins was notified and John stated to him that he had stabbed himself to end his life. John has conducted a billiard establishment in the Boston Grain company block on Jackson street. Some of the fixtures in his place were recently attached in a replevin suit.

INSTALLED AS PASTOR OF FIRST CONG'L CHURCH

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 10.—Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, who has been affiliated with the local First Congregational church for about a year, was formally installed as its pastor before a large gathering of members of the congregation and guests Tuesday evening. The ceremonies attending the installation were impressive. An interested spectator was Rev. Albert H. Wheelock, of Auburn, Mass., father of the local pastor. At four o'clock in the afternoon the church council convened and conducted the examination of the candidate who offered a statement of faith and Christian experience. Attending were delegates from the Windham county association of Congregational churches and ministers from several cities.

At 6 o'clock a bountiful supper was served at the church house by a committee with Mrs. Raymond A. Parker as chairman.

The formal installation service behour organ recital by Archibald Seagan at 7:30 o'clock, preceeded by a half hours. As the service proceeded Robert Gordon, noted baritone, rendered selective numbers. Rev. Ashley Day Leavitt of Brookline, Mass., formerly a pastor of the church, preached the sermon of installation. Also participating in the service were Rev. Boynton Merrill of Boston, Mass., and Rev. William S Beard of New York.

At the close of the service Rev. Mr. extended congratulations of his parishioners on his call. Mrs. Wheelock was extended the hearty consuccess as a candidate.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

This year's roll call drive by Danielson chapter, American Red Cross, will open Thursday morning. This year George Stone of Broad street is to be in charge of the effort.

As has been the custof for years, the community will be thoroughly canvassed for subscriptions to this fund. It is significant that Danielson chapter of the Red Cross is very generous in giving from what funds it receives to the Civic federation maintaining a visiting nurse service and free clinics in Danielson. This alone always has proved an impelling factor toward liberal giving by local people.

There is always, too, a measure of satisfaction to those enrolled in the Red Cross to know that one has had a share in the magnificent relief projects this marvelous organization undertakes, and is always prepared to undertake, when some great disaster befalls humanity. Such gigantic catastrophes as the Japanese earthquake of last year brought an illustration of how the Red Cross reaches its helping hands across the oceans to aid the victims of disaster. Each enrolled Red Cross members may feel a glow of pride in the realization of having a share in such relief work, wherever it may be carried on—at home or abroad. Danielson's Red Cross organization is a competent one and recognition of this and assurance that it will remain so may be expressed on and after Thursday by enrolling in its membership. The greater the membership, the greater the efficiency of the local organization.

A communication received here Tuesday by Commander Joseph Burton of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, from Adjutant Kenneth C. Sharpe of Anselm Mayotte post of Putnam, advised that through the courtesy of Cargill council, K. of C., of Putnam, the rooms of that organization in Union street will be open to visiting legionnaires today on the occasion of their visit to Putnam to participate in the Armistice day observance in that city. The K. of C. rooms at Putnam will be legion headquarters for the day.

Adjutant Sharpe also wrote that the town has arranged to serve a dinner to visiting legionnaires and that Putnam will be pleased to welcome the Danielson men at this event.

Members of the local legion post and all other former service men who desire to go to Putnam for parade this afternoon are to assemble in front of the American legion hall here at 12.30 a. m.

An innovation by the agricultural department of Killingly High school will be an agricultural fair to be arranged here for the early days of December. Details for this event are now being worked out by W. G. Bruce of the high school faculty. The fair will run through three days. It will be so arranged as to convey a very general idea of what the agricultural department of the school is accomplishing and the affair is likely to prove pleasantly surprising to the town's people.

Another young man, visiting here from Maine, paid a fine of $200 and costs in the town court Tuesday morning for having operated a motor vehicle within the limits of the town of Killingly while he was under the influence of an intoxicant. His statement that he had not previously taken a drink of liquor in a year and a half was accepted as wholly true by the court, but there was no alternative but to impose the fine.

A juvenile case before the court Tuesday morning had to do with the stealing of a tire and tools from a car left parked one day the past week near the Old Furnace on a country road by A. A. Jacques of South Killingly while he went to inspect some traps he had set in nearby woodland. Mr. Jacques property has been recovered. The boy involved is 15 years of age and lives in the Horse Hill district of the town.

Chief John McFarland has a communication from the state motor vehicle department requesting his cooperation in interesting motorists in promptly taking up the matter of filing applications for renewals of their registrations at the earliest possible date. The communication points out that the department is reserving their old numbers for those who desire them until November 15, this being the final week for those to buy registrations that will bring them the same numbers they are now using.

The letter stresses the fact that those who complain against allowing the state to use their money for six weeks before the new registrations can be used are in each instance giving the state only a few cents bonus, whereas delay in sending for registrations until the great rush may result in inconvenience and expenses running into dollars.

For those who like football, Danelson has an attraction scheduled for this (Wednesday) afternoon. Plainfield High school's team will be here, at the Quinebaug grounds, to try its strength and skill against the prowess of the Killingly High school team. It should be an interesting game, one with a large share of local interest and well worth seeing. Killingly would relish having a big gallery on hand. Heavy attendance and good cheering carries a certain urge to victory that cannot be overlooked.

Out of town friends who came here for the funeral of Mrs. Kate B. Sibley, widow of Preston B. Sibley, included Clinton E. Bingham, Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. F. Edwin Bass, Mrs. Anna Sheldon Theiss, Iva Burley Shahan and son, all of Springfield; Miss Marian A. Sheldon, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Tuttle, Kenneth Tuttle, all of New Britain; Charles Sheldon, Holyoke, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bridgeford, Mrs. Frank L. Vaughan, Mr. and Mrs. Herman S. Rich, Fred C. Hall, Charles E. Hall, Miss Winifred Hall, Ralph Dingee, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Butman, Mrs. Frank Freeman, Miss Dorothy Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Holt, Mrs. O. L. Howland, Mrs. William F. Lthgoe, Charles P. Backus, all of Providence; Mrs. Fanny Phillips and daughter of Webster; Joseph B. Stetson, Mr. and Mrs. Clark G. Lawton; Miss Ella Lawton, Miss Alice Bowles, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Edwin Bennett, all of Brooklyn; Mrs. Marcus Wood, Putnam; Miss Maude Griffiths, Sterling; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tatem, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Snow of Eastford.

A series of revival meetings will open this (Wednesday) evening at the Nazarene church on Academy street, opposite the central fire station, and will extend through two Sundays, ending Sunday, November 22. Rev. Carrie C. Shaw of East Liverpool, O., will be the evangelist. Mrs. Shaw was one of the preachers at the Douglas camp meeting the past summer. Members of the church have extended an invitation to everyone who is interested in old-time preaching to attend the meetings. The Sunday services are to be at 10.45 a. m., at 3.00 and 7 p. m.

Thanksgiving linens, imported pure linens that are really beautiful and low priced. Table sets from $2.25 to $.50 and including cloth with plain, blue, pink or gold border and 6 napkins. Linen bridge sets, cloth and four napkins, hand-embroidered, hand lace-trimmed $4.95. The Alice-Eleanor Shop.—adv.

The Bulletin may assume to say for Killingly this morning that it is ever mindful of the sacrifices made for their country by the service men of this town who went into the World war. There have been times in the past seven years when the former service men have felt that what they did had been forgotten. While Killingly has not always manifested its deep feeling for these soldiers, it does not forget. On days like this—the anniversary of the end of the great war—there are many here who regard with ever-increasing veneration each and every one who served in the name of Killingly, and this feeling seems certain to increase, rather than diminish, as the years come and go.

State officers from the Danielson barracks will be included in the state police detail that will be on duty in Putnam today (Wednesday).

As a remedy for the manner in which street intersections dug out at many points in Danielson, the motor traffic making deep ruts, the use of concrete for a few feet at such points has been suggested.

In observance of Armistice day, the Windham County National bank, Danielson, will close at noon today, Nov. 11.—adv.

Danielson will honor the World war veterans by being particular to fly the national colors today, Armistice day.

Making it still more unanimous as to a suspension of business here in observance of Armistice day, the barber shops are to close.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Jette are planning to spend the winter in Washington, D. C.

W. Irving Bullard of Boston in company with Warden Walter Anderson inspected the field on the borough farm where it is proposed to locate an emergency landing station for air mail planes.

At noon today hundreds of pupils in the schools of this town and Brooklyon will be released from their studies for a half-holiday.

Motorists traveling north to Putnam today for the holiday observance may find it as convenient and as speedy to avoid the detour and make the journey via Maple street or Mashentuck.

A series of motor car accidents on Dark Lantern hill during the rain of Sunday again is centering attention on that section. There were no really serious injuries to people in these wrecks, but cars that figured in them caught Sam Hill.

Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion, has a theatrical production in rehearsal, the cast made up of local people.

Banking business by Danielson's financial institutions will be suspended today (Wednesday) at noon in observance of the holiday.

COLUMBIA

The community was shocked and saddened by the sudden death on Sunday morning of Mrs. Hattie Woodward, wife of Madison Woodward of Merrythought farm. Mrs. Woodward was apparently in her usual health on retiring on Saturday night, but complained of feeling ill during the night. Early Sunday morning her condition became so much worse that a doctor was sent for, but Mrs. Woodward passed away before his arrival. Mrs. Woodward is survived by five children, Hubert Woodward of New Haven, Mrs. George Richard of Perry, N. Y., Harold and Donald Woodward of Georgia, and Jasper Woodward of Columbia. She also leaves three grandchildren. Mrs. Woodward was a willing worker in grange, church and community affairs and will be greatly missed.

A number of young people from this place went to Hebron on Friday evening and gave an entertainment for the benefit of the Hebron Christian Endeavor society. Those taking part were Mr. and Mrs. William Wolff, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hunt, Mrs. Ruth Jacobs, Howard Squier, Raymond Lyman, Lawrence Hutchins, Joseph Hutchins, Mrs. Elsie Collins and Miss Lila Seeley.

RESULTS OF PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS IN PORTUGAL

LISBON, Nov. 9—The government achieved a marked victory in yesterday's parliamentary elections, the returns today show.

The governmental supporters won 85 seats, the nationalists 25, radical democrats 8, monarchists 5 and Catholics 5. The remainder of the 168 seats were scattered.

Former Premier Cunha Leal has resigned the leadership of the nationalist party, owing to differences.

PUTNAM DEDICATES MEMORIAL BRIDGE TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 9.—If the weather dictator will give Putnam for Armistice Day the same brand of weather that prevailed Monday and Tuesday it is believed that the dedication of the Memorial Bridge will be an unqualified success. So far as known the plans printed in the Bulletin will be carried out with but few variations.

Contractor Charles A. Haggerty and his large force of men will work all of tonight and into the first few hours of daylight in order to have the bridge entirely completed before 10 o'clock.

This means a solid concrete covering that although poured tonight will permit its use by marching men tomorrow. This means that the route of march will be altered so that the parade will pass over the structure. Every man on the force is working enthusiastically to this end and it is believed that it will set a new record in state construction work.

Because the time of the arrival of Governor John H. Trumbull will not be until after 12 o'clock, the parade will start at 1.45 o'clock instead of 1.15. His staff is ordered to report here at 12 o'clock, noon.

It is believed that there will be from 60 to 75 distinguished men and women of the state among the guests.

PUTNAM

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Ebenezer Thompson of Sarasota, Florida. She was the wife of the Rev. Ebenezer Thompson and was born in Pomfret, and was a sister of the late Charles O. Thompson of Pomfret. Ebenezer Thompson graduated from Brown University in 1868, was rector of Trinity church in Woburn, Mass., afterwards settled in Florida. Mrs. Thompson leaves two sons, Charles A. and Paul E. Thompson, both of whom live in Sarasota, Florida.

Charles Swain of Pomfret left last week for a two weeks' visit to New York City.

Mrs. Joseph Cardinal of North Grosvenordale, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Louis Pasteur Hospital, in Worcester, has sufficiently recovered to return to her home.

Rev. Suber of Montclair, N. J. is expected at Woodstock soon, where he will conduct a series of meetings at the Swedish church.

Mrs. Arthur Morse and her sister, Mrs. Paul Gifford of North Woodstock have returned from a visit of six weeks to relatives in Ellsworth, Kansas.

Samuel Simmons who has been in the employ of Seder store on Main street has resigned and has gone to Webster, Mass., where he will enter the employ of his father, who has a store of the same kind in that city.

Miss Antoinette Coderre and Miss Anna Mizon, both student nurses at St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester, Mass., have been spending a few days with Miss Coderre's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Coderre at North Grosvenordale.

The members of the Garde Saint Therese of North Grosvenordale are proud as the winners of two beautiful loving cups which they were recently awarded in Webster. As contestants they won the second prize given for best drilling and the first prize for their captain's, Miss A. Harpin, popularity. The cups are on exhibition in one of the store windows at North Grosvendale.

Mrs. Carrie Perrin and son, Frank, have gone to Florida for the winter. They are not yet permanently located.

Miss Dora Bernier is visiting friends in New Hampshire for several weeks.

Mrs. D. A. Sullivan and two children have been recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McDermiott of Danielson.

Putnam High school eleven is still feeling elated over its defeat of Bartlett high at Webster with a score of 13-6. Putnam now has an unbroken string of six victories.

The democratic ward committee of the third ward has been elected as follows: Mrs. Leto Delisle, who is the wife of the republican alderman, Mrs. Ramie Delage, Bidie Lapalme and Edmund Keane.

Armand Valade of Walnut street is the guest of friends and relatives at Manchester, N. H.

After the store clode at 11 o'clock on Armistice day all automobile traffic will be discontinued and forbidden on the following streets: Railroad street to Richmond street on Main street; Church street to Main street on Pomfret street; Front street from South Main street to Main street; Livery and Richmond street.

The Putnam police force will be aided in police duties by ten of the state police from the Danielson barracks.

L. Hector Lucier of Framingham has been the guest of his parents on Chapel street.

An accident happened at the four corners on the Providence pike yesterday afternoon. A sedan driven by Mrs. Vella Cammack of West Hartford and having as occupants E. J. Ripa of Providence and Christopher Cammack, collided with the car of Michael Herungeole of Webster, Mass., occupied by Mrs. John McNamee, Mary and Susan McNamee. No one was hurt but the West Hartford car was overturned and somewhat damaged.

Henry Ernest Burgess will be the new instructor in the machine department of the Putnam Trade school, to replace King Bogardus who recently resigned to accept a position at Taunton, Mass. Mr. Burgess has had eight years of machine work and instruction and received his instruction in the Brown and Sharpe Training school in Providence. He will move his family from Pawtucket as soon as possible.

Ellery Peterson of Thompson was operated on for appendicitis at the Day Kimball hospital and he is making a good recovery.

Franklin Perry has been initiated into the Delta Upsilon fraternity at Amherst College. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Perry of Grove street.

Funeral services for Frank Meehan, 48, a life-long resident of Woodstock, were held Monday morning at St. Mary's church. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. Mr. Meehan died at the Day Kimball hospital after two years of illness due to an attack of pneumonia. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Meehan, both of whom have been dead for several years. Mr. Meehan was a member of Senexet grange, very popular in this town, and his death will be deeply regretted.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Morse, Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Perry, and son Myron Perry motored to Amherst Saturday to attend the Amherst-Springfield Y. M. C. A. college annual football game. Chandler Morse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morse, played an excellent game and was one of the factors that produced the 16 to 15 score. It is his third year at the school and he has been a member of the football squad for three years. Franklin Perry is also a student at the Massachusetts school, matriculating in September.

The republican caucus to nominate a candidate for Mayor, alderman-at-large, treasurer, collector of taxes, candidates for alderman for each ward, and other city officials will be held Monday, November 16.

Miss Nellie Bloxham, superintendent of the Day Kimball hospital has been enjoying a week's vacation.

Charles A. Ryan was nominated as the democratic candidate for alderman from Ward One at the caucus held Barthanamm, the present alderman by a vote of 19 to 16. As there are less than 50 enrolled democrats in this ward the number casting represented strenuous work on the part of booth candidates.

SOMERS

Tax Collector E. P. Russell was at the Town Clerk's office several days last week for the purpose of collecting the personal tax. Mr. Russell has also been at George E. Homer's store in Somerville and at James Threshers in North Somers.

The Woman's club met with Mrs. Peace last Thursday.

Mrs. Worthington, who has been keeping house for her brother in North Somers for several years, until his death this summer and came to live with her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Keery, has been taken ill and is in the Martha Thayer hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pease's small daughter, Helen, is ill again, after having been in school but a few days since her previous sickness.

Today's Leading Value In All Four Ways!

Low Price

A richer, finer Chandler, and reduced $505 in price—that, briefly put, is the two-fold appeal of the new Chandler Twentieth Century Sedan—a magnificent 4-door Sedan priced less than a 2-door coach.

Thus quality now talks price! Chandler has gone considerably farther than the rest of the industry in reducing prices. The average reduction on the new Chandler closed car models is 19%, whereas the average reduction on all other closed cars stands at only 8%.

Chandler's new Metropolitan Sedan De Luxe, now $1795, and the new Seven-Passenger Sedan, now $1895, are both reduced $400. The new Brougham, at $1695, is reduced $350. Chandler open car prices are lower by $100 to $140. All prices f. o. b. Cleveland.

Advanced Body

A typical example of Chandler progress is the new Twentieth Century Sedan. It is an important development in modern coach-building—a distinct attainment of higher ideals in all phases of beauty and comfort.

The lengthy sweep of its lines, its distinguished radiator design, the mellow richness of its finish, the luxury of broadcloth upholstery—attraction upon attraction and advantage upon advantage are making this new Chandler the pronounced favorite of its price class.

Perfected Chassis

Here, too, is a major factor in Chandler value. The Chandler chassis is unique in strength and balance. It has been constantly refined and improved, until today it is recognized as an outstanding accomplishment in chassis engineering.

It is to this exceptional chassis that Chandler owes its road-holding sureness at high speeds, its buoyant riding smoothness, its effortless ease of steering.

Pikes Peak Motor

Great in so many things, Chandler is greatest in performance. Chandler power has won for Chandler a long string of brilliant records—the latest being the recent winning of the annual automobile race to the summit of Pikes Peak, 14,109 feet above the sea—in which race Chandler broke all records on the world's highest automobile climb!

This and many other similar contests have proved again and again the supremacy of Chandler power, carburetion, braking, steering and cooling.

In price, body, chassis, motor—in the four fundamentals of automobile value—Chandler leads its field. Make your own comparisons. Spend an hour examining the new Chandler—and another hour driving it—and you will hardly be content with anything else!

ARMISTICE DAY

In various ways throughout the country Armistice day will be observed today. In schools and veteran organizations there will be special attention given to the day and its significance, quite the same as there will or should be by those organizations which are earnestly striving for world peace.

Seven years ago, Armistice day was an occasion of great rejoicing and thanksgiving. It marked the end of the titanic struggle that was going on for years and did so much to sap the young manhood of the world and wreak disorder in Europe and uncertainty elsewhere.

That first Armistice day celebration may not be taken as the guide for all succeeding ones. Enthusiasm ran high at that time. But the anniversary of that happy day cannot go unnoticed, marking as it did the turning point in world conditions. It is not likely to be forgotten. From then on it is evident that the fight for permanent world peace has gathered speed and it cannot be allowed to slacken.

The lessons of the World war stand out sufficiently vivid to urge that understanding between nations that will make such a conflict impossible in the future. That struggle led to peace, but how much better it would have been to have reached the same goal without the frightful sacrifice that preceded the armistice.

Armistice day likewise stands as a memorial day for those who gave their lives and limbs and those who gave their services that right might prevail. Thus there can be no disposition to forget it as its anniversaries roll around. Because of the many holidays already it is wise not to add to them, but that doesn't mean that Armistice day is going to be or should be forgotten.

It is a day that was earnestly prayed for back in 1918, even though there are those who believe the fighting was stopped too soon, and its significance and its lessons are not going to be lost upon the coming generations.

EARLIER CHRISTMAS MAILING

While the announcement by Postmaster General New to the effect that the Christmas holiday will be broadcasted in the postoffices of the country will doubtless be received by many words of approval, it is to be realized that this will curtail the last minute delivery of Christmas mail and the point to be taken to heart from that is that Chrismas mail must be sent earlier.

"Do your Christmas mailing early" has long since been yoked up with "Do your Christmas shopping early," but more than ever should there be emphasis placed upon this point this season.

The postal service is depended upon to a large extent to distribute Christmas presents. Naturally it is desirable that the presents should reach their destination by the holiday and those for whom they are intended as quite certain that they should arrive on time. While many will agree that they are better late than never, it is even more certain that there is a decided preference that they be not late.

With no Christmas day delivery this means that the users of the mail must govern themselves accordingly. It will be necessary to start the packages on their way a bit earlier, and with the warning not to open until Christmas there's probably no real good reason in the great majority of cases why the Christmas mailing cannot be done sufficiently in advance to not only overcome the effects of the new ruling but to relieve much of the congestion which invariably characterizes the few days before December 25.

It is easy to get into a bad habit. Procrastination is responsible for much of the needless delay, and no thought is given to what is means for someone else. For the accomodation of many in such a class Christmas day deliveries have been regularly made. Now that they are to be stopped it behooves those who have been relying upon it to institute a bit of personal reform and still get the benefit of the service that is desired.

RAISING APPLES

Speaking in regard to the cultivation of apples and the work that has been done by the fruit growers association of Rhode Island, Richard M. Bowen of that organization gave credit to the western apple growers for their enterprise and for the lessons which they have taught the apple growers in the east. But for their effort it is not improbable that the production of apples in this part of the country would have been going on along the same lines established in the distant past, with slight attention to orchards, no spraying and no attempt made to grade and pack the fruit.

Rhode Island has found that it can produce better fruit, fruit that will compare with that brought from other states and other parts of the country. That has also been the experience of Connecticut and other New England states, where the challenge from the west has been accepted and the opportunity for developing the apple industry has been embraced.

Whatever the disposition may have been regarding modern methods in connection with apple growing, with marketing methods and transportation, it is to be realized that it is through just such methods that New England can, if it will, furnish the people of this part of the country with such fruit and get the benefit of the business which others have aimed at from afar.

In every community where there is a modern orchard there is a revelation to those who have a chance to note the contrast with old time methods. They serve, even though that is not the intention, as great demonstration fields and give encouragement to many to take a decidedly different view of the business of raising apples. It makes much difference whether an orchard is set out and allowed to take care of itself, or whether it is given careful and needed treatment, whether efforts are made to prevent disease and apples are raised for the market or whether they are just allowed to grow and be disposed of by chance.

Connecticut and New England are doing better in the production of high grade apples, but they are not supplying the requirements of their apple consumers.

INTERSTATE TRUCKING

Interstate trucking business which expects to take out a license in one state and do business under it in another is likely to encounter opposition. That is at least the outcome in Ohio, where trucks engaged in interstate business are being stopped, arrested and punished. They may claim that all they were trying to do was to serve their customers, but it is to be realized that they were getting special advantages for which they were paying nothing, while those who were doing the same line of business were being taxed for it. It was open to the interpretation of being unfair competition and Ohio decided to put an end to it.

Trucks which do business in two states should bear the licenses of both of the states. When it comes to carrying on a trucking business it is to be realized that it is different situation from the pleasure car which is allowed to operate for a limited time in any state so long as it is licensed in some state. But even with pleasure cars they are expected to take out licenses in any state after it has been there a certain time.

When Ohio insists that trucks from other states doing business in Ohio must bear an Ohio license, meaning that it is paying the same tax as the trucks of that state, it must be regarded as taking the proper stand and one that should iron out all inequalities. With neighboring states doing likewise the situation is completely met in a fair manner. When all are treated alike there is no ground for complaint and certainly unfair competition is not encouraged.

REVISING REVENUE BILL

Whether the house ways and means committee is framing a revised revenue bill that will have the best political effect, whether it is at work on a measure that will impress the senate or throw upon the upper house the burden of putting it into shape to meet conditions will be disclosed before long.

When the committee proceeded to agree upon slashes amounting to $200,000,000 from the reduction of the normal income rates and the cutting in two of the surtax, it exceeded recommendations made to it by the treasury department. If conditions will justify making a tax cut greater than $300,000,000 it is possible that the committee can justify its action, but it is to be realized that it will be impossible to respond to the demands for the elimination of many of the nuisance taxes and not exceed that figure. The fact is that the nuisance taxes in themselves produce yearly as much revenue as it has been figured could be lopped off, so that good business indicates that either all these taxes cannot be removed without facing a miseable deficit, if any other cutting is done.

There is nothing better than a sound, scientific basis of tax reduction. It is a matter which ought not to be used in playing politics. It rests with the house to produce a tax measure and the house should be alive to its responsibility and not, for the sake of politics, pass the buck, as the saying goes, to the senate.

If the senate can be faced with a sound revenue bill there is not the probability that it will proceed to tear it to pieces, though that can be expected if any half hearted and poorly constructed measure is passed along to it.

THE SILENT DRAMA

Scene: The newest movie palace, justly named "The Magnificent."

The lights soften down as the great purple curtain is rolled away to, the opening strains of the orchestra, and "The Magnificent Theatre Gives Voice to the Silent Drama."

Simultaneously:

"Look Corene!" resounds a loud stage whisper from the woman in the center of the audience. "There's that man you introduced me to last week. No, over there on the left. Two rows back of that woman who has just taken off her hat. There! See him? Is that his wife he's with?"

Corene—"Oh, for goodness sake, I must tell Lil about that. He's out with his stenographer!"

Man behind Corene (to himself)—"Drat that woman! What's she want to jump around that way for? I can't see a blamed thing!"

Flapper near front (chewing her gum with loud disgust)—"Aw, it's that old Farina Wheatstalk again. They oughta pension her off the movies. What didja wanta drag me here to see her for?"

Elderly lady, who, after skirmishing around all over her things, discovers that she has left her glasses at home—"Well, you'll just have to read everything off to me. I can't see a thing. There! What did they say now? I wish they wouldn't go so fast!"

Groans from immediate vicinity of old lady's companion, a girl of 12 begins reading the titles in a high, shrill whisper.

Woman in center—"They say his wife goes out with other men, too. I think it's disgraceful the way—"

Little boy (standing up for a moment) —"Mama, what did he say? What did he say, mama?"

Loud whispers from the back of little boy—"Sit down!"

General remarks about the lack of sense in bringing a child to a picture show. Mother maintains straight front gaze, gripping her young son's arm fiercely to keep him down.

Flapper—"Gee, I wish they'd hurry up and show Orlando Tune. Say, he's the gazelle's garter, all right. And you oughta see him conduct that band of his. And his hair—"

Enthusiastic young woman (gripping her escort's arm)—"There! He's going to play the organ now, George. I just love those old-fashioned love songs, don't you?"

George—"Yeah. Oughta put some pep in 'em though. Wait'll that cute little blondy comes on in the next act—"

Young woman (huffily)—"Oh, theres nothing to her. I saw her at the Garfield the other day. She can't sing a note. Just hops around——"

Little boy—"But, mother, I wanta drink, I wanta——"

Flapper—"Gee, what d'they have these crazy organ things for? Poe and Peasant," reading from screen announcement. "That's the bunk."

Man behind flappers—"Wish these kids would stay home if they can't shut up." Hums a few strands from the music. Finds the organist doesn't play it as he does at home, one-fingered piano style, and gives up in contempt of organist.

Organist ends with a dash and receives loud applause. Great enthusiasm comes from a woman near the front, who has been describing her new dress to woman friend throughout entire performance.

Flapper—(suddenly electrified into attention by the appearance of handsome orchestra conductor, attired in Indian costume)—"There he is, what did I tell ya, kid?"

Young woman (a trifle maliciously)—"He's the best number on the program George. He——"

George—"Aw, you women give me a pain. Always falling for——"

Orchestra conductor makes little speech of gratitude. Three hundred girls all over the theatre are secretly convinced that he's looking at them.

Little boy and old lady, simultaneously—"What did he say?"

Woman in center—"There they go, Corene. Oh, if his wife only knew——"

Performance ends amid much laughter and the slapping of powder puffs. Lights stay for repetition of picture and again:

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Anna Katherine Green, who today enters her eightieth year, has written some of the most famous mystery stories in the English language. Her earliest novels still are in great demand, and her new ones are "best sellers" from the moment they leave the presses. Her novels have thrilled readers for nearly 60 years. "The Leavenworth Case," her first mystery story, astonished a nation that had been led to believe that the French were the only writers capable of making literature out of the fascinating problems of the detection of crime. Anna Katherine Green (who in private life is Mrs. Rohlfs) lives in a quaint home in Buffalo, where she spends much of her time working in her garden of old-fashioned flowers. In her spare moments she writes stories of dark mystery, the breathless kind that keeps the reader poring on into the early morning hours.

Stories That Recall Others

Like Dice

Darting in and out of the early morning traffic was an old rambly Ford of ancient vintage. Printed on a label tackled to its rear curtain were the words: "Our Lizzie is Like Dice-Shakes, Rattles and Rolls."

Definition of Gentleman

Being asked to write an essay on "The Definition of a Gentleman" the teacher received the following:

The word gentleman seems to have disappeared completely from the vocabularly of the young people of today. Unless a woman is very old, or a cripple, she has ceased to expect a man to give her a seat on the street car, and if he should remove his hat in the presence of the "weaker sex" in an elevator, she considers him extremely "nice." Such friendships as exist between boys and girls today would once have been considered scandalous.

"For instance, it is not unusual for a girl to share the expense of an evening's entertainment, or to provide a car if a boy has none. Many modern mothers are up in arms about the way the young man comes calling on daughter. He rarely ever leaves the machine, and has but to honk the horn and daughter comes running out to the sidewalk. He invites her to get in, but if she declines he never thinks of offering to stand with her. It is certainly bad manners but girls have grown accustomed to such practices and do not see the wrong in it that older people do. In fact, the gentleman in the old sense of the word, is entirely extinct."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

KASHMIR

News of the death of the Maharajah of Kashmir recently directs attention to one of the wealthiest thrones in India. The country famous as the "land of nightingales and roses" is said to bring an income to its ruler in excess of $5,000,000 yearly.

"Kashmir's real wealth, however, cannot be measured in terms of money," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Anyone making a list of the ten most richly endowed of nature's beauty spots would have to include, in a representative list, this vale set amidst the towering Himalayas. One traveler asserts 'it is impossible to know what color and depth and proportion are until one has visited this Happy Valley in the Himalayas.'

"The state of Kashmir in India spreads over an area equal to that of Minnesota, but it is usually the so-called 'Happy Valley' that is associated with the name of Kashmir. Not on the slopes of the Himalayas, but set down deep among them, is the vale that has inspired so many writers of poetry, prose, and music, and which, in former years, gave to the world one of the most beautiful and delicate of all fabrics made by human hands—the Kashmir (or cashmere) shawl.

"The Vale of Kashmir, a wide, level plain 84 miles long and 20 to 25 miles wide, has been compared to a transplanted, peaceful Thames valley, with a girdle of high, snow-capped mountains. Its charming combinations of lake and mountain scenery, wooden chalets and winding roads, are much like those of Switzerland except that there is always a white horizon, a complete circle of snowy peaks. On a clear day, the mountains glisten in the sunshine like the battlements and towers of some fairy city of purest marble.

"These mountains, the highest in the world, have helped to make Kashmir the primitive beauty spot it is today. They are Kashmir's strongest battlements against the encroachments of the white man's civilization—which has so greatly altered the more accessible parts of India. No railroad enters Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir, because the loose rocks in the mountain passes carry away everything along the mountain sides—and not infrequently take a toll of human life.

"With a latitude about that of Damascus, or of the Carolinas in the United States, and a protecting wall of mountains, the Vale of Kashmir has none of those extremes of heat and cold which make the districts to the north and to the south so uncomfortable at times. Flowers and trees of many varieties grow in profusion. Sometimes a sudden change in temperature nearby will result in a snowstorm on the surrounding mountain peaks, a vivid and interesting spectacle from the valley. In the winter the mercury drops a little below freezing. During the summer the thermometer sometimes shows a temperature of 105 degrees.

"The weaving of shawls used to be the main industry, but those who made them were practically slaves, who were never allowed to leave Kashmir. It has been said that every shawl cost the eyesight of one or more persons. The shawl industry was brought to an end by the Franco-Prussian war in 1870. France had been the largest buyer of Kashmir shawls, but the indemnity imposed upon her by Germany left little money for foreign trade. About the same time famine wrought havoc among the weavers. The industry never recovered in Kashmir, although good imitations are made elsewhere.

"A treaty between the state of Kashmir and the British government, by which six shawls of fine quality must be paid yearly, is said to be the only thing that prevents the knowledge of the art from dying out among the natives. One of the most beautiful designs is the 'cone' pattern; another favorite is the 'ring' shawl, which, though not transparent, is so soft that it can be easily drawn through a finger ring. American whalers and sailing vessels plowing the Pacific 50 years ago invariably made their way into the port of India, to obtain one of these prized light wraps as a gift for the women waiting at home.

"The main surprise and the delight of this romantic valley today is Srinagar, the capital, the Venice of the East. Through the vale winds the Jhelum river, fed by the icy Himalayan springs, occasionally forming beautiful lakes of sky-blue water. The 'Main street' of Srinagar is this river, and facing the river are the palace of the Maharjah, the government buildings, and dwellings. On the river, and the numerous canals that intersect it, live 15,000 people in boats. Over the Jhelum are many large bridges of wood, built on piers of crossed horizontal logs. What the little chalet-like houses lack in architectural elegance, they make up in picturesqueness, and in the spring their sod-covered roofs blossom forth with fresh green grass, delicate mauve irises, and in some cases with gorgeous scarlet Kashmir tulips.

"Near the capital, and gracing the shores of the lakes of the Jhelum, are the beautiful summer gardens of many of the former rulers of the country. Some of them, such as the Shalimar, where the Aryan youth name of the pale hands he loved, are in ruins, but nature has been kind and even in ruins they possess a dreamy loveliness that puts man's handiwork to shame. On an autumn evening, when the avenues of Chenar trees are flagged with gold and russet, when the lofty mountains behind them take on every shade of blue and purple, and the long lines of fountains sparkle in the rays of the setting sun, it would be difficult to find a match for them elsewhere."

From Small Beginnings

John D. Rockefeller, the Oil Magnate

It is hard to believe that the man who now has the reputation of being the richest man in the world was once a boy who tramped the streets day after day asking storekeepers if they wanted a boy to work for them. Young John D. Rockefeller had looked so long and so unsuccessfully for work that when at last he found a job he did not even ask what wages he was to get. As a matter of fact, he was paid less than $4.25 a week.

Young Rockefeller's father had moved from Richford, N. Y., to Ohio, and had sent the boy to school until he was 16. When the lad was almost ready to graduate from high school the father sent him to a commercial school, where he learned the first principles of business. After only a few weeks of this study the 16-year-old boy began a long hunt for a job. He had always been a thrifty boy, keeping a careful record of his expenditures, and rejoicing in profits that he made in small transactions like the sale of turkeys that he had raised himself.

In his first position as an assistant bookkeeper he worked most conscientiously and was painstakingly accurate. Conscientious work, accuracy, thrift and foresight have marked Mr. Rockefeller all his long life. He was promoted to $25 a month, and then to $500 a year. Then, his worth fully established, he was offered much more, but he declined it, and at 19, entered into partnership with a young man named Clark, borrowing money in order to do so. At first the new enterprise was an ordinary commission house, but very shortly it interested itself in the oil business. Seeing the rich opportunities in that product, young Rockefeller, now 36, formed a new partnership, prospered greatly, and at 31 established the great organization known as the Standard Oil Company. Then, year by year, through keen watchfulness of opportunities, he brought about the expansion of the company, and gained control of most of the oil business in the United States, gaining a fortune said to be the largest in the world.

In 1895, at the age of 56, Mr. Rockefeller gave up all active business and has since then led a retired life. He has given away something like $100,000,000 to purposes of education, charity and public good. In particular he has established funds for medical research that are of vast importance to the United States. Mr. Rockefeller carried into life the principles of his boyhood—conscientious work, accuracy, and watchfulness of opportunities.

Balkans Favor Rose Growing

Rose growing is a big industry in the Balkan countries where the roses are the basis of the large perfume-making industry. The cultivation of attar of roses, the basis of all perfumes, was introduced into Bulgaria about two centuries ago. The climate and agricultural conditions in the valleys of the Kazanlik and Karlova districts make a natural garden for rose growing. Naturally the rose is the national flower.

Bright November Days

November has the honor of presenting those delectable days which, next to June's are the most poetic of the year. There may be two or three spells of this warm, dreamy, second-summer weather, one of which is likely to occur some about the twentieth of the month, just before winter sets in for good, and after frost has blighted green vegetation. The cause of the hazy condition of the atmosphere so characteristic of Indian summer, is variously given. The early settlers connected both the haze and the name with the Indians, variously giving the following reasons: The haze was due to the smoke from Indian campfires, the Indians predicted such weather at stated times; as it always followed "squaw winter," it therefore must be Indian summer; it was the last period in the year to be chosen by the Indian in his raid upon white settlements; like the Indian himself, they said, it is deceptive. In these days the cause of the haze is attributed to the smoke from forest fires and burning leaves, combined with dust and particles of drying vegetation contained in the atmosphere. Nothing in the Indian language corresponds to the name Indian summer. Similar weather in England and in Germany is known as St. Martin's summer. All Hallow summer and old woman's summer. Horace Walpole, as early as 1778, used the term, in reference to weather in the tropics.

Spiders Catch Small Birds

In New Guinea and Australia are spiders with a leg spread of fully 4 inches that make nets so strong that small birds caught in them are held fast and helpless, says the Golden Age. The natives use them to catch fish that weigh up to a pound. Some of these nets are stretched 12 to 15 feet, with centers 6 feet high. Florida has an equally large spider that builds a golden yellow net, of almost equal size.

HUNGARIAN PARLIAMENT FACED WITH CREATING NEW CURRENCY

GOTHENBURG, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Of a new currency, the establishment of a federal budget on a gold basis and the adjustment in reevaluation, are three problems to occupy the attention of the Hungarian parliament when it reconvenes this fall.

Decision as to what shall be the unit of currency must be made first. Some favor the shilling, now used by both Danzig and Austria, as the monetary unit. Others believe that the crown should be brought back to its pre-war value.

The budget question will be easily satisfied after the new currency has been selected. For the present the budget, while balanced, is still on a paper crown basis.

In reevaluating the war loans and other securities in which the people invested before and during the war, the Hungarians will be guided in a great measure by the experience of Germany with her speculation loans.

Swedish Marine Earnings Off

BUDAPEST, Nov. 10—Creation There was a decrease of 1.8 per cent. in earnings of the Swedish merchant marine last year, compared with the previous year. The time charter income, however, showed a gain of 70 per cent. The marine earnings reached $63,569,600.

OBITUARY

Andrew Clendennin

Andrew Clendennin, well known Norwich business man of 643 North Main street, died suddenly Tuesday morning about 8:30 o'clock as the result of a shock. This was the second shock he had suffered within the past ten days. Mr. Clendennin was born in Norwich May 26, 1859, and was the son of Andrew and Bridget Williams Clendennin. He received his education in the Norwich schools and had passed all his life in this city.

For years Mr. Clendennin had been engaged in the trucking business and had conducted a filling station at what is known as the Old Point Saloon location at No. 643 North Main street, where he had his residence. Mr. Clendennin was thrice married, his first two wives, sisters, Mary and Julia Morrin, having died a number of years ago. In 1912 he was united in marriage with Bridget O'Connell who survives him. Mr. Clendennin was a member of St. Mary's parish and belonged to the Foresters of America.

Surviving him besides his wife are five sons and daughters, Annie J., Frank H., Andrew J., May and George Clendennin, all of Norwich. There is also one sister, Mrs. James Morrison of Greeneville.

Charles W. Baker.

Word has been received in Pine Grove, Niantic, by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Dorman of the death at the Hartford hospital of Charles W. Baker, 54, for many years a summer resident of Pine Grove. Mr. Baker was agent and telegraph operator of the State street depot, Hartford, for over 30 years. He had been a patient at the hospital only a short time. His wife passed away last spring. Burial was in Thompsonville. Mr. Baker is survived by a sister, Mrs. Mary Kane, of Springfield, Mass.

Hugh F. McLaughlin, Jr.

Hugh F. McLaughlin Jr., died at St. Lukes hospital, New York city on Nov. 9th. He was a bright boy, 15 years old, in his second year at high school and had won high honors as a student. He visited Norwich every summer with his parents, who are both natives of Norwich, and much enjoyed his vacationing here. He is survived by his parents and one sister.

Theodore E. Menard

Following a short illness Theodore E. Menard, son of Edmund and Louise Lenoue Menard of Providence, died in this city Monday. He was born in Holyoke and was 34 years old. The body was prepared for burial by Undertaker C. E. Gager and was taken by Mr. Gager to Chicopee Falls, Mass., burial taking place in that city Tuesday.

FUNERALS

Fred Rogers

Fred Rogers, 73, formerly of Hartford, died Monday afternoon at the State Odd Fellows' home in Fairview, Groton after an extended illness. He had been a resident of the home for nearly a year and was a member of the Hartford lodge of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Rogers was born in England and came to this country when he was a young man. He had made his home in Hartford until he came to Fairview. He leaves relatives in England.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon with the Odd Fellows ritual at Fairview. Burial was in the Odd Fellows' burying ground near the home.

Helena Clementine Love.

The funeral of Helena Clementine Love, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Love, was held Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the home of her parents on Church Hill, Baltic, with relatives and friends of the family in attendance. At 2.45 o'clock a service was held at St. Mary's church, Baltic, Rev. A. A. Jalbert officiating.

The bearers were Joseph Brennan, Henry Cote, Thomas Sullivan, and Arthur Deschamps and burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery, Rev. A. A. Jalbert conducting the committal service. Among those in attendance were relatives from New Haven and Providence. Undertakers Cummings & Ring had charge of the funeral arrangements.

William H. Denison.

The funeral of William H. Denison was held Tuesday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock from his home, No. 75 Lafayette street with a large attendance of relatives and friends. The funeral service was held at the rooms of Henry Allen and Son at 2 o'clock and was conducted by Rev. C. Montgomery Budlong, rector of Christ church. The bearers were Tyler D. Gus, George Linton, Marshall Jewett, William S. Fletcher, Perry Byrnes and Raymond Byrnes. Burial took place in Maplewood cemetery, and a committal service was conducted at the grave by Rev. Mr. Budlong. Among those present were relatives from Croton and Hartford.

ANNUAL BANQUET BY BOY SCOUT TROOP

A writer from Noank states that Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Fish and son, Chester, are in New York attending the graduating exercises of the New York Nautical school, their son, Warren, being an honor member of the class.

CONGREGATIONALISTS OF COUNTY MET AT NORWICH TOWN CHURCH

The glorious weather which prevailed on Tuesday, brought together a large assemblage of ministers and delegates for the semi-annual meeting of the New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers, held at the First Congregational church, Norwich Town. The many interesting reports, eloquent addresses, and the general spirit of good fellowship and inspiration marked the general observance as a gala day in the history of this association.

The meeting opened at 9:30 o'clock with the moderator, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church, presiding. Following prayer, the minutes of the last meeting were submitted by the scribe James H. Weeks, M. D., of Stonington. After reading the treasurer's report, the registrar, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey read reports from the following churches: Bozrah, Franklin, Griswold, Groton, Third Church of Greeneville, Hanover, Lebanon, Ledyard, Lisbon, Montville Center, Mystic, New London First New London Second, Swedish Congregational church of New London, Norwich Town, North Stonington and Preston City.

There are 234 Congregational churches in Connecticut, 29 of which are represented in this association.

A report of the Northfield Conference on Evangelism, by Rev. H. W. Hulbert, D. D., of Groton was followed by an impressive devotional period by Rev. Stanley Sellick, of Lebanon, who read the Scripture lesson from Exodus 31 He took for his text Galatians 6:17. "It Pays to Serve Jesus." was sung in pleasing voice by Rev. Mr. Sellick during this service.

"Our Opportunities at Storrs." was the stirring address by Rev. Morris Ailing of Storrs. This was followed by open forum, when Rev. Dr. Hulbert and Rev. Edward P. Ayers, took opportunity to speak words of praise for this worthy project. Dr. Samuel H. Howe D. D., of Park church pronounced the benediction, which brought the morning session to a close.

Rev. Mr. Bailey cordially invited the entire congregation to partake of an elaborate dinner in the chapel, served under direction of Mrs. Herbert L. Verrington, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Clyde M. Beebe, Mrs. Charles Reeves, Mrs. Orrin F. Merry and Miss M. Jennie Case. The waitresses were, Mrs. Sarah W. Chapin, Mrs. Earl Browning, Mrs. Henry F. Frasier, Mrs. Ruby Jordan, Mrs. Michael Buckley, and Miss Ida Beebe. Rev. A. N. Foster, of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) said grace, after which the nearly 100 guests were served the following menu: Beef pot-roast with gravy, mashed potato, mashed turnip, cabbage salad, pickles, rolls, jelly, squash pie with cheese and coffee.

Dr. J. Selkridge Lee, D. D., of New London in commendatory words, extended a vote of thanks to the company of women who served the dinner.

After a brief time given over to fellowship, the programme of the afternoon opened with an organ selection by L. Yerrington, organist of the entertaining church, and the hymn, Faith of Our Fathers.

Reports From Washington

A very interesting feature of the day, was the report of the National Council held in Washington, D. C., the latter part of October, as given by the three official delegates. The Setting of the Council was the topic of Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, who said: It was significant that all New England went through Hell-gate to get to the council; not a bad place to go through but one would not want to be dumped off there. The diamond in the ring will be given later by the delegates who follow. Shall the setting be gold or platinum? In regard to the council, it was a matter of interest as to where it was held and circumstances surrounding it. The National Capitol at Washington, is especially beautiful for its construction of streets, parks, etc. Spacious and magnificent buildings of antiquity for westerners, more than from the point of view of those who live in New England. Washington as a city, has nothing back of George Washington. People on their first visit to this historical city, had to know avenues, streets and numbers, to find a location, as the city in itself is very systematically laid out. Some of the more recent additions to the city are: The original copy of the Declaration of Independence, in the library of congress, the Lincoln Memorial, which stands in line with the Capitol and Washington monument, and directly across the Potomac from Lee's mansion the amphitheatre at Arlington, together with acres of new markers of World War dead, and the new auditorium in which the council was held.

In speaking of our greatness of government, this national city with all its beautiful structures is the center of education, teeming with young life for Protestants and Catholics, as well as our colored brethren. It is a city of churches, nearly every faith being represented among which are seven Congregational churches. The speaker was especially impressed with the beautiful bronze statuary, those in particular which displayed horses.

The council was not set only in the National Capitol, but within seven minutes' walk of the White House. One felt the nearness of President Coolidge and the First Lady of the Land. It was especially fortunate to hold the convention there, because the president is a Congregationalist and a Christian, as well as his good wife. They were with us in person and in spirit the speaker said. The president, not only addressed the council one evening, but extended his hand to the great body gathered at the White House, where a photograph was taken and Mrs. Coolidge opened the doors to the women delegates. President and Mrs. Coolidge are members of the First Congregational church of Washington. Nothing ever before was known when the White House was thrown open to such a vast body. No convention is successful unless you have housing facilities in which speakers can be heard. The splendid auditorium where this body of more than 3,500 delegates etc., assembled for the eight days' session is shaped like a flat iron. The stage on one end 60 feet, at the other end 152 feet, with seating capacity for 6,000 people. Decidedly comfortable, only two pillars to obstruct observation, all at a cost of $500,000. The council was set in the midst of beautiful music. Inspirational singing of old hymns, with Percy Foster as leader was a feature long to be remembered, together with elaborate music from other sources. On one occasion a choir of 60 voices from the First Congregational church, a colored choir of thirty young people from Akron, Ohio, which conducted a half hour responsive service with its pastor on Sunday afternoon. In the midst of this meeting, came this great meeting, something to make us serious as Christians and Congregationalists, the speaker said in closing.

Forward Steps Internationally

Forward Steps in International Relations was the topic treated by Rev. Mr. Ricketts, who said: Some forward steps have been brought out by prominent speakers. This was the 21st meeting of the council, with 21 moderators. The first was held in Boston in 1865. At this there was considerable opposition. The general assembly of the Presbyterian church speaks with authority, hence fear of New England Congregationalists becoming Presbyterians. It was simply to bring about fellowship. The famous war governor, Governor Buckingham, was the first moderator having held office six years. From 1913 to the present year the council has met once in two years. Lafayette Foster also of Norwich was also one of the early moderators. Of the 21 meetings, Norwich has furnished two moderators. Connecticut has had in all seven governors, Lorin A. Cook, Frederick A. Noble, Dean Brown of Yale, William H. Day of Bridgeport, and Rev. Harmon Potter of Hartford. The speaker then said: Connecticut leads the country in Congregationalism; and Norwich leads Connecticut.

Not so many speakers had to do with Internationalism. A digest of one special speech by Miss Laura Wild of Mount Holyoke college, was given by the speaker. Have we an International gospel? Miss Wild gave a very fine illustration in answer to this question. Her words were all so true. India, China, Japan send their people to America to enter our colleges and become educated students. We think we have an International gospel; how do these people think and look upon it? It must be that everybody believes in that gospel, until they visit America. They find many unfortunate things in America, the same as in foreign countries. The gospel is adapted to every people, why is not America entirely gospel. Miss Wild said: So many identify western civilization with Christianity. She sought to convey the impression that throughout the world the gospel of Jesus Christ as preached in America, is international in its inception. Nothing in the Kingdom of Jesus Christ is lost. Seed sown in prayer and nurtured in tears, is not lost. The religion of Jesus Christ sown in tears, is being reaped in joy. This International movement in its interpretation is victory. Here is a world consolidated for Jesus Christ. The headlines are seeing that we have an international gospel. The modernism of India shows the effect of this kind of gospel. In India they say they want American philanthropy, instead of European, because America sends bread and Europe sends bullets. This statement was made by a religious leader in India.

At this point the speaker took up in detail the fourteen points of Rev. James L. Barton's address as follows: First: The sudden deposition of the Sultan from a long succession of six centuries. Second—The assembly chafing under the religious influence and authority of the Caliph, deposed the Caliph, and abolished the Caliphate which was of their own creation. Third—Turkey, freed from the presence and domination of the official spokesman of the Moslem religion, proceeded to separate church and state, something never before contemplated or attempted by the Mohammedan state. Fourth—Religious questions have been ruled out of the civil courts. Religion is not recognized as coming under the jurisdiction of the courts, and no religious tribunal has been set up. Fifth—Turkey has declared for religious liberty for all its subjects. The point is fixed in the treaties ratified with England, France and other countries. This is an act of great international importance. Sixth—Religion and education have been separated. Under the old order they were essentially one. Large numbers of Moslem school boys have left the mosque and entered the school house. Seventh—The Dervish sects have been abolished throughout Turkey, and their properties taken by the government, based not upon the traditions of the East but upon the educational systems of the West. Ninth—The women have been emancipated from the age long custom of being veiled in public, as taught by the Keran, or to be longer segregated in the woman's department of the home, or to longer occupy only secluded places set apart for them in public conveyances. Tenth—Women are demanding, and leading men ar edvocating a law against polygamy. All this in direct opposition to the teaching of the Koran. Eleventh—A movement started to abolish Friday as sacred day, and putting Sunday in its place. Twelfth—The abolition or discard of the fez and the adoption of the western hat. Thirteenth—Fifty thousand Moslem children in the Near East are being educated under American leadership. No objection being made to their instruction in the principles of American philanthropy. (Europe sends them bullets.) Fourteenth—The entire fredom of the press in Turkey. Hitherto there has been strict censorship, but now the press is free to criticise the government.

Meeting the Missionary Task.

Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, D. D., spoke on Our Missionary Task and How to Meet It. He said that this was a great meeting. The Congregational council differs from a Presbyterian general assembly. Meetings all devotion, a spirit of worship, nothing could be superior. It was a place to secure a great amount of information, a place to study church work and how to do it. Dr. Lee said he was deeply impressed with some of the speakers. Dr. Lee saide he was deply impressed with some of the speakers. One negro, secretary of the National Federation of Churches, whose intellect was very keen, gave as eloquent a speech as any one at the council. This was a splendid tribute from this courtepus person, what the Congregational church is doing in the southland. Mention was made by him of the negroes who went with Washington that year to Valley Forge. Another who impressed me much, said Dr. Lee, was Rev. William Horace Day, who was chairman of the council of twelve, and who presided over the hearing on discussions of the committee's report. Dr. Day has given weeks and months of labor to this report and it shows the marks of his brain, hand and heart, yet in all the discussion he exhibited the supremest patience and utmost fairness to every debate. The spirit of th ediscussion was in a most friendly manner, and even opponents to the committee's report paid tribute to the statesmanlike character of the report itself. Dr. Day is one of the finest types of our Congregational brotherhood. Another speaker who drew the admiration of the speaker he said, was Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, because of his genuine democratic spirit. Notwithstanding that Dr. Potter came from another denomination, the Congregational fellowship was broad enough to make him not only moderator of the National Council in 1922, but has now placed him at the head of the American Board of Foreign Missions, one of the most important of the Congregational societies.

Dr. Moore, th eretiring president of the American Board, who has served with fidelity and ability for several years made a splendid address upon his retirement, and thrilled his audience with his words of blessing upon his successor.

In referring to th ereport of Social Ideals, Dr. Lee advised the ministers to secure copies of this report from Boston and make a thorough study of the same. He characterized these ideals as a summary of the work of statesmen.

Dr. Lee paid high tribute to the womens part in the council and referred especially to the address of Mrs. Frederick Warner in favor of the merger of the missionary societies. It was this address, which tipped the scales in favor of the merger, according to Dr. Lee.

The hymn—The Church's One Foundation is Jesus Christ Her Lord, and benediction by Rev. Edwin Crowdis of Taftville brought the conference to a close.

YOUNG LADIES SODALITY ENTERTAINS AT CARDS

The second in a series of card parties given by the Young Ladies Sodality of St. Mary's Memorial church was held in the parish memorial hall Tuesday evening and, like its predecessor, proved very successful. There were 20 tables of whist and bridge, play lasting two hours. These parties arranged by the Sodality for the winter period are creating much interest and the officers in charge feel highly elated over requests from the parishioners and friends to have the card parties continued.

Those who acted as scorers for the evening were the Misses Mary Kirby, Marion Shea, Mary Geagan, Mary Roberts, Alice White, Catherine Brennan and Florence Gagnon.

The winner at the bridge table was Joseph E. Burns, score 1692, and the prize was a hand painted picture. A Song of Spring. The winners at whist were Ladies—First, Miss Agnes Dennis (38), picture of the Assumption; second, Mrs. John D. Kennedy (36), pack of playing cards; Men, first, Patrick Kirby (87), box of silk hosiery; second, Anthony O'Connell (37) a leather belt. The winners were tied for first place. Mr. Kirby winning first prize on the cut off.

Among those present were Rev. William A. Keefe, Rev. Frederick M. Coholan, priests of the parish and Rev. William H. Kennedy, former curate at St. Mary's church, now pastor at St. Rose's church, Newton, Ct.

The committee worked under the direction of the president, Miss Margaret C. Counihan, and were Misses Hannah O'Donnell, Mollie Driscoll, Margaret Condon and Teresa Leonard, Joseph A. Donnelly serving in the ticket office.

The sale was in charge of Mrs. Herbert W. Gallup and Mrs. Albert J. Sinay who was assisted by the following committee: Mrs. Philip Roberts, Mrs. Harold Nichols, Mrs. Herbert R. Kind, Mrs. Harvey M. Brigss, Mrs. Clarence A. Spear and Mrs. Herbert W. Gallup.

Wentworth-Yuhas Wedding

The marriage of Miss Anna Yuhas of East Lyme and Franklin C. Wentworth of New London took place in Guilford Saturday. The marriage was performed by the Rev. Frederick E. Snow, pastor emeritus of the First Congregational church of Guilford. Mr. Wentworth gave his occupation as a mechanic.

Advise Women

to discard old hygienic methods and retain freshness every day

LARGELY on medical advice women are abandoning the old-time "sanitary-pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends ALL fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. 8 in 10 better class women employ it. Proves the folly of old ways.

PIMPLES WERE VERY PAINFUL

On Face. Hard and Red. Healed by Cuticura.

"About a year ago my face broke out with hard, red, very itchy pimples. They were very painful and bothered me when I tried to shave. It was useless to try to sleep. I tried other remedies but they only made the trouble worse. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it I got relief. I purchased more, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) William G. Smith, 5 Walls Pl., Providence, R. I., Feb. 2, 1925.

Use Cuticura for every-day toilet purposes. Bathe with Soap, soothe with Ointment, dust with Talcum.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. X, Malden, Mass." Cuticura Shaving Stick 25c.

YOUNG COULON KNOCKS OUT HORSBURG IN SECOND ROUND AT NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—Tony Travers, of New Haven, and Bobby Risden, of New York, fought a six round draw in the star bout of the Nutmeg A. C. card here tonight. Mickey Travers, of New Haven, won on a technical knockout from Phil Richards, of England in the second round. The referee stopped the bout. Richards claimed that he was fouled but the referee did not accept the claim.

Georgie Day, of New Haven, and Joey Kaufman, of New York, fought a fast six round draw.

Young Coulon, of Taftville, knocked out Scotty Horsburg of Ansonia in the second round of a scheduled six round bout.

Sammy Cooper, of New Haven, knocked out Arthur Slim Pewterse, of Newark, N. J., in the third round of a scheduled six round bout.

SEVEN DATES ON AGGIE SCHEDULE FOR 1926

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 10.—With both Wesleyan and Trinity appearing on the Connecticut Aggie grid slate for 1926, which was made public today, an interesting "little three" series will be staged within the borders of the state next fall. Trinity appears on the Aggies' slate after the lapse of one year and will meet the State College eleven next season at Storrs on October 23. Like this year, the Aggies will meet Wesleyan in what will be the opening game of the season for both elevens, playing at Middletown, October 2.

Seven games have been arranged, and one open date has yet to be filled according to Manager John R. Kuhl, '26, of Mansfield. Thus far, only Trinity and Rhode Island have been definitely signed up to play at Storrs, though possibly the Rensellaer game, and the open date yet to be filled will be played at home.

New York University and Manhattan, two Gotham elevens played this year do not appear on next season's slate. Tufts, a team the Aggies have played for the past four years will not be met in 1926, though negotiations are under way for a contest at Storrs in 1927.

As in the past, all teams in the New England conference, of which the Aggies are a charter member, will be played. Maine, Massachusetts Aggies and New Hampshire will be met away, while Rhode Island will be played at Storrs.

Next year the Aggies will play their first game a week later than usual, starting off with Wesleyan at Middletown, October 2. A New England conference rule, stating that "no member of the conference shall start preliminary practice sooner than ten days before the opening of college," is the reason for this. Following the making up of the 1925 schedule last year, the faculty at Storrs decided to delay the opening of college for one week, setting September 25 as registration day. This unexpected change caught the athletic authorities at Storrs flatfooted, working to the disadvantage of early season plans. The first game was already with Wesleyan for September 24, one day after college was due to open. As a result of the conference rule regulating the start of preliminary practice, this meant the Aggies had but ten days in which to prepare for their first game, which was hardly enough under the circumstances. No spring practice is held at Storrs, and ten days is not enough time to whip a team into shape for its first encounter of a stiff schedule. At least that is the sentiment of Coach Sumner Dole, and a change has been made in order to give more time to develop the team for its first contest.

The return of Trinity to the Aggie schedule will be welcomed at Storrs, and by Connecticut's alumni. Trinity-Aggie clashes are always good contests due to the natural rivalry existing between the two institutions.

The schedule: October 2, Wesleyan at Middletown; October 9, Massachusetts Aggies at Amherst; October 16, Maine at Orono; October 23, Trinity at Storrs; October 30, New Hampshire at Manchester, N. H.; Nov. 6, open; November 13, Rhode Island at Storrs; November 21, Rensellaer, (place pending).

LIVELY COMPETITION IN "Y" OLYMPIC GAMES

The liveliest competition thus far this season took place in the Y gym last night when the young men's division held forth. Following the regular classwork consisting of drill apparatus work the rope vault was conducted as the Olympic game event for the evening, with the result that Milton Adnopos established a new record at the local association with a vault of 7 feet 10 inches. Closely following tied for second place were Fred Handy, Ed. Ludlow and B. Kenig.

The team standing in the senior division is as follows:

U. S., 1,727 points; Sweden, 1,350 points; Finland, 1,223 points; England, 1,175 points.

Individuals leading are F. Handy, O. Mosessian, P. Plante, A. Brauman, A. Pineault and D. Parsons.

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is dignified combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drug-store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy lustrous hair.

O'NEIL IS RE-ELECTED HEAD OF EASTERN LEAGUE

WATERBURY, Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—Dan O'Neil, of Holyoke, was re-elected president and secretary of the Eastern Baseball League for another five-year term at the annual meeting of the league directors here today. Dennis di Huylon, of Pittsfield, was re-elected treasurer for a one year term. The league directors also rescinded two rules which were voted into the league by-laws last year. One was the rule permitting each club to carry not more than two players received on option from leagues of the same or higher classification. The other was the regulation that required each club to carry two colass or "rookie" players. The question of restoring the player limit to sixteen players where it had been up until the 1925 season was also considered but definite action on this matter will be taken at the next meeting of the league, some time in January. It was voted to hold the annual meeting in November instead of December in the city which wins the pennant. The 1925 pennant was officially awarded the Waterbury club this being the second consecutive championship for the local club. Recommendations for the improvement of scoring conditions were received from the Eastern League Baseball Writers' association and President O'Neil was delegated to meet with a committe from the association and settle upon the matter. After the meeting the visiting directors and newspapermen were the guests of Owner John T. Sullivan, of the Waterbury club at a banquet in the Hotel Elton.

John M. Greene, of the Hartford Courant was today re-elected president of the Eastern League Baseball Writers' association at a meeting here. The other officers elected were: Vice president, Clarence J. Cassin, Waterbury Democrat; secretary-treasurer, Victor N. Wall, Springfield Union; members of the executive committee, Arthur B. McGinley, Hartford Times; John M. Flynn, Berkshire Eagle, and Milan O. Weirh, Bridgeport Herald. It was voted to hold the annual midsummer golf tournament and meeting in this city on July 12, 1926.

JONES DEVOTING ATTENTION TO HIS BACKFIELD

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10—(A. P.)—In the second day of the Yale football team's intensive training for the battle with Princeton in the bowl here Saturday, Gus Cutler, left halfback who has been out since the Brown contest, was shifted back to the varsity. This change, it was said by the coaches, will give the heavy plunging Kline, right halfback, a speedy and efficient running mate. With Allen at left halfback and Bunnell at quarter, it was pointed out Yale will be able to present the cream of her offensive material against the Tiger.

Another shift in the right end position today moved Eastman back to the second team and restored Fred Potts to the varsity. Coach Comerford is trying all available candidates in an effort to bolster up the Eli wings before they are called upon to face the end runs of Sickle and Lignanan.

A witness at center appeared today when it developed that Sturhahn had broken his hand. Sturhahn holds down the right guard post, but he is considered a possible relief man for first at center in the latter is unable to play the entire game. Harvey from last years freshman team, was given a chance "breaking up" as a relief center.

AGGIE SQUAD HAS STIFF PRACTICE FOR R. I. STATE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 10.—With the Rhode Island and Rensellaer games as the only remaining contests on the Connecticut Aggie slate, Coach Dole's squad returned to work today, starting off with a light workout in preparation for the game with Rhode Island at Kingston next Saturday.

The varsity took things fairly easy, no heavy work being attempted. The second team marrimmaged with the freshmen, however, putting in a strenuous forty-five minutes.

Work with the varsity was devoted mainly to signals and work on new plays which will be uncovered against Rhode Island. The Aggie forward pass defense, which worked none too well in the New Hampshire game, received some attention today. Rhode Island will no doubt use many forwards against the Aggies, and Dole intends to have his men well prepared to stop this attack.

Coach Alexander's freshman team will close its season on Friday, when the Massachusetts Aggie two-year school is met at Storrs. The Bay State Farmers have lost only one game to date, and they will give the Aggie yearlings a battle all the way.

O'CONNOR LEADS N. E. CONFERENCE POINT SCORERS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 10.—Eddie O'Connor, captain of the University of New Hampshire eleven is the leading scorer in the New England conference with a total of 58 points to his credit. Against the Connecticut Aggies last Saturday O'Connor made a touchdown, kicked a field goal, and made two successful attempts for the point after the touchdown, gathering 11 points for his afternoon's work.

Barrows of Maine leads in the number of touchdowns made, having crossed opponents' goal lines 7 times. O'Connor leads in field goals, with 4 to his credit. Peakes of Maine has a wide margin in making extra points after touchdowns, connecting for 13 to date.

Leading scorers in the New England conference are as follows:

RADICAL CHANGES MADE IN HARVARD LINEUP

BOSTON, Nov. 10—Radical changes in the Harvard varsity football lineup were revealed when the men went into practice today, with strengthening of the line the apparent object. Clement Coady was transferred from fullback to left tackle, Captain Cheek from quarterback to left half back with Stafford succeeding him at the pilot position, and Al Miller, who was a substitute half back against Princeton last Saturday, played fullback.

Izzy Zarakov was placed at left half back, where Crosby has been playing this season, the latter's injuries preventing him from attending practice though the team physician predicted his presence in the game with Brown next Saturday. Macomber, who has been at center on the second team, was at that position on the varsity, and Ralph Turner, who played center in yesterday's practice, replaced Gordon Tripp at left tackle.

The varsity defeated the scrubs 39 to 15 today, Zarakov making a touchdown on the first play and Lords of the second team running 98 yards for a touchdown.

PRINCETON TEAM GIVEN NO REST BEFORE YALE GAME

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10—Coach Bill Roper put his Princeton football varsity team through another hard workout today in preparation for the game with Yale at New Haven Saturday. Linemen throughout the afternoon were drilled in recovering fumbles and intercepting passes, while the backs were given intensive drill in defensive tactcis. Defense for a forward passing game was stressed.

Prior to the reporting of the full squad today Coach Roper had Sam Ewing and Jake Slagle doing drop-kicking under his personal direction. Slagle bettered Ewing in the trial, four out of five attempts from the 35-yard line, crossing the cross-bar.

In punting Slagle also led the competition, and passing, running and drop-kicking centered largely around him. Princeton men expect him to star against Yale.

ACADEMY AFTER GAME WITH BULKELEY FOR THANKSGIVING

Coach Courtland O. Whitney of the Academy football squad was in conference with Coach William A. Canty of the Bulkeley team at New London on Tuesday evening in an effort to arrange a game in Norwich on Thanksgiving Day with the Bulkeley team. Coach Whitney made the Bulkeley coach a very attractive offer to bring the Bulkeley team to Norwich but as Bulkeley has two games pending for that day Coach Canty was unable to give a definite answer.

The game would draw one of the biggest crowds that ever witnessed an Academy-Bulkeley classic owing to the very unsatisfactory results of last Saturday's game. The general opinion in Norwich and New London is that the game was not decided on the merits of the two teams but rather on the inefficiency of the referee and umpire.

GOLEMBESKI DOES NOT FAVOR 40-PLAY GAME

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Coach Archie Golembeski, of Providence college said tonight that he did not favor the 40-play period system used for the first time last week in the Brown-Boston university game here and had not agreed to its use in the Providence college-Boston university game in Boston Saturday. Head Coach Whelan, of Boston, had expressed a desire to use it.

"While the system may produce approximately the same results as the customary timing method so far as the elapsed time of periods and the number of plays per period are concerned," Coach Golembeskie said, "I believe it tends ot devitalize the game by eliminating an element of suspense which is essential to football."

YOUNG IS OPPOSED TO THE 40-PLAY SYSTEM

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10—Head Coach Lou Young, of the University of Pennsylvania football team, is opposed to the forty plays a period plan for gridiron contests as tried out last Saturday by Brown and Boston University.

"I think that instead of speeding up the game," said Young, "it wastes much time. I'll grant you it puts a halt to stalling, which a team is apt to do when there is a few minutes remaining to play. But that does not help any. To complete the forty plays would bring the game into darkness long before it is over. It is bad enough now. A team can take as much time as it wants to complete a play. I cannot see any advantage in the plan."

BATTLING SIKI APPEARS FOR CITIZENS PAPERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Louis Phal, better known as "Battling Siki", the conqueror of Georges Carpentier, the French light heavyweight, appeared today at the naturalization bureau in the federal building and made application for his first citizens papers. He said he was 24 years old, a native of French West Africa and a boxer by profession.

Siki was ordered deported within seven days last August but on direction of the secretary of labor was permitted to extend his visit in this country until next February.

ILLINOIS NOT TO PLAY A POST SEASON GAME

CHAMPAIGN, Ills., Nov. 10.—(AP)—The University football team will not play a post-season game in either the east or the west. Replying to reports that Illinois would be invited to play an after-season contest with an eastern team, George Huff, director of physical welfare, said today: "There is absolutely no chance for Illinois to play anywhere after the Ohio State game."

WOULD ELECT GRANGE AS A CONGRESSMAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 10—Admirers of Harold E. (Red) Grange tonight circulated petitions here to put his name on the ballot as a candidate for the republican nomination for congressman-at-large at the primary election of next April 14.

DARTMOUTH TO UPHOLD HONOR OF EAST IN GAME AT CHICAGO SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(By the A. P.)—The east's hopes of pulling the major portion of intersectional football irons out of the fire rest this week on the capable shoulders of Dartmouth's unbeaten eleven as the green invades the middle west to clash with Chicago.

This battle will hold the main intersectional interest next Saturday while such traditional rivals as Yale-Princeton, Syracuse-Colgate, Pittsburgh-Pennsylvania, West Virginia-Penn State, Williams-Amherst, Ohio State-Michigan, Minnesota-Iowa, Georgia Tech-Georgia, Alabama-Florida and California-Stanford are having it out among themselves in various sectors of the gridiron map.

So far the east has run up a big lead in intersectional fray but the thorn in the side of this showing is that the middle west has triumphed in three out of five clashes between "big ten" outfits and major eastern teams.

Illinois and Michigan, with smashing victories over Pennsylvania and the Navy, lifted high the middle west's prestige but the eastern partisans are hoping that Dartmouth's forward passing attack will engulf Chicago as it did Harvard and Cornell, thus squaring a few accounts on behalf of the realm along the Atlantic seaboard.

The Dartmouth-Chicago battle looms as the most important intersectional contest yet to be played. A victory for the green would go far toward establishing its claims to national championship recognition.

Earlier in the campaign, with Iowa and Southern California booming along at a great rate, the clash between these two at Los Angeles, November 21 loomed all important on the horizon. It still holds a high place but Iowa's defeat last week at the hands of Wisconsin, following U. S. C.'s downfall before Stanford has taken some of the edge off this fray.

Three other international contests hold interest this week. While Georgetown is entertaining Center College at Washington, Washington and Jefferson goes west for its annual encounter with Detroit and Carnegie invades South Bend to meet Notre Dame.

The east still is well in front of sectional rivals to date, with 22 victories as the following table reveals:

	East	Middle West	West	Far West	Total Won
East	x	15	x	x	22
Middle West	6	x	x	x	4
South	2	1	x	x	3
Far West	0	0	0	x	0
Total Lost	8	16	9	1	x

ICE SKATING TOURNAMENT SLATED FOR NEW GARDEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—The 1926 international indoor ice skating championships will be held in the New Madison Square Garden February 25 to March 1 and 2, if the application filed with the international skating union is ratified. This was revealed today by James M. Savage, president of the Middle Atlantic Skating association.

This blue ribbon indoor skating meet of the season, would bring to New York the outstanding amateurs of the United States and Canada.

The present champion is Joe Moore of New York.

BARROW DENIES SALE OF WARD AND PIPP

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Returning here today from a hunting trip, Edward Barrow, secretary of the New York Yankees, denied rumors that infielders Aaron Ward, and Wally Pipp might be traded to Cleveland for Outfielder Charley Jamieson.

Barrow also said he knew nothing about stories that First Baseman Gehrig of the Yanks might go to Washington in a three-cornered deal involving the Senators' first baseman, Joe Judge. Neither had he heard that Rigney, Detroit shortstop, might wear a New York uniform next season, he said.

ACADEMY JUNIORS BADLY BEATEN BY WHEELER

The Academy Juniors were completely outclassed by the heavier and more experienced Wheeler High eleven in their game at North Stonington yesterday. Although the local boys fought hard they were unable to stop the rushes of their heavier opponents. The Juniors completed several forward passes that netted them considerable ground.

The Academy boys will meet Wheeler again next Tuesday on the local campus and it is expected that the game will end with a different score and one that will be decidedly in favor of the Juniors. The final score of the game Tuesday was 59 to 0.

INDOOR LEAGUE MEETING SCHEDULED FOR MONDAY

There is to be a meeting of all four teams interested in the forming of the Indoor Baseball League at the Armory Monday evening, Nov. 16, at 8 p. m. sharp. Manager and captan of each of the four teams of the league are rpquested to report at this meeting. The four teams scheduled to enter the league are Battery B, Nutmegs, Tigers and Faber's All-Stars.

PRINCETON SQUAD TO STAY AT SAYBROOK

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 10.—(A. P.)—Information has been here that the Princeton football team will stop Friday night at a tavern in Saybrook on the Connecticut river and not at a hotel in Derby as in recent years. The team will arrive there on Friday.

Athletes want games in Norwich

The Athletes' football team of New London, challenges any team their size and weight. The Athletes have lost two games in two years and are out to take on Norwich.

The average weight of the team is 138. The ages run from 16 to 18 years.

Any team in Norwich wishing to accept this challenge may make arrangements with George Daniels, P. O. Box 49, New London.

A Challenge

The Aces of New London would like the chance to play any team in or around Norwich, average weight one hundred and fifty pounds.

They would like to get a game for any Sunday or Thanksgiving day.

For particulars insert answer in Bulletin or write to Richard Lynch, 23 Williams street, New London, Conn.

Princess Doreen Wins

PIMLICO RACETRACK, Baltimore, Nov. 10—(A. P.)—Princess Doreen won the Bower Handicap mile and a half for three year olds and up, $10,000 added, today. Aga Khan was second and My Own third. Time was 2:34 2-5. A $2 pari-mutuel ticket on the winner paid $7.50 straight, $3.70 to place, and $3.60 to show.

Battery B Accepts Challenge.

Battery B wishes to announce that they accept the Nutmegs challenge for an exhibition game to be played Monday evening after the meeting. The Nutmegs challenged the Battery to an indoor baseball game last week.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

New York state has more than 850 public playgrounds.

Wesley Fry, the famous University of Iowa fullback, was a professional hockey in his early youth.

Philadelphia expects to be awarded the national indoor swimming championships of the A. A. U. the coming season.

Live pigeon shooting as a sport is said to have been first practiced about the middle of the nineteenth century.

The largest artificial swimming pool in the world, measuring 1,300 feet long by 1,000 feet wide, is to be constructed near Kissimmee, Fla.

A season's schedule of 90 games, starting on November 23, has been arranged by the new Western Canada Hockey League, formerly the Western Canada Hockey Association.

It is said that the pugilistic expression "knockout" was first used by Billy Madden, Sullivan's trainer, on the occasion of Paddy Ryan's defeat by Sullivan at Mississippi City in 1882.

In receiving $500 each and their expenses, Umpires Casey and Chill appeared to have fared better than did the players in the recent post-season series between the Louisville Colonels and San Francisco Seals.

A furniture dealer of Hudson, Kas., bet a coffin against a shave with the village barber that the Washington Senators would win the World Series. The barber is converting the coffin into a boat in which to hunt ducks.

Southern California, with 359 points, leads the country's football teams in scoring. Dartmouth holds second place at 307 and Cornell is third with 225.

Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion, has volunteered to coach the new light-heavyweight champion, Paul Berlenbach, for a drive to the heavyweight peak. If Berlenbach's management is willing, Johnson says he will train Berlenbach for the champion's approaching bout with Jack Delaney.

Fordham, encouraged by victory over Holy Cross hopes for games with several formidable elevens next year. Efforts for a contest with Princeton have been hit by word, however, that the Tiger schedule is already complete.

Georgetti and Belloni, Italian riders will team up in the six-day grind which will mark the opening of the new Madison Square Garden, November 28. Belloni won one of these races with Alf Goullet in 1922.

Yale is the champion come-back eleven among the east's major teams. The Elis, almost outstripped Pennsylvania in a last half rush, bowled over the Army with three touchdowns in the final quarter and crushed Maryland last Saturday with four touchdowns in the last period.

First Baseman Joe Hauser of the Philadelphia Americans, who was on the voluntary retired list because of an injury to his leg has been reinstated by Commissioner Landis.

The Chicago Cubs will leave for their spring training camp on Catalina Island February 11, with a squad of 35. Training will start February 15. Enroute home exhibition games will be played at Kansas City.

More than half of the $50,000 he has earned by bringing his mounts home in front has been invested by Jockey Arthur Mortensen, 17 year old 98 pounder, in a ranch in Idaho, his home state. The rest went into bonds, he said, on passing through Chicago yesterday en route to visit his mother in Homedale, Idaho.

The fight fans of New Orleans are looking forward to a treat on the night of November 13, when Champion Harry Greb and Tony Marullo are to come together for a 15-round bout before one of the Crescent City clubs. It will be the second time the two have met.

In the last 13 football games played by Cornell and Columbia the Ithicans have ten victories to their credit. The last time that Columbia won against Cornell was twenty years ago, and the game this season was the first time that the Morningside Heights eleven has been able to score since 1921.

Some physical training experts attribute the wonderful playing of Harold Grange, the University of Illinois gridiron star, to the fact that he possesses the ideal football physique: Stocky thighs, long-muscled calves, and a man-sized foot that enables him to keep his balance even when he is hit hard.

John McGraw of the New York Nationals continues to lead all managers in both major leagues in the number of league championships won. The leader of the Giants has won 16 pennants. Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia American league club, ranks second, with six championships to his credit.

Small Westerly Fire

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 10—Fire alarm box 73, Canal and Pleasant streets, called out three pieces of apparatus tonight at 7:45 for a fire in the junk shop of Natale Bonvenute formerly the "Tin Tub" when occupied as a saloon on Canal street from which place it was removed to Pleasant street and Shady lane. One hydrant stream was sufficient to put out the fire which had started in a barrel inside the building unoccupied. The contents being waste

Drive a Chrysler Four and You Will Want To Own It

A ride in a Chrysler Four goes beyond all previous conception of what a car of this price should be and do.

Its quiet engine, with all sense of vibration eradicated, gives a flow of power that is continuous and dependable.

Its smooth and flexible pick-up takes you through traffic with consummate ease.

A new degree of riding and driving comfort results from Chrysler-designed spring suspension, low center of gravity, full balloon tires and pivotal steering. Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes are available at slight extra cost.

These are exclusively the results of Chrysler advanced engineering, combined with prodigal use of the finest alloy steels, and a precision of workmanship heretofore unknown in cars anywhere near the Chrysler Four price.

Only a demonstration can do justice to the unexcelled performance which these Chrysler qualities assure.

Only by driving it can you fully realize the Chrysler Four's true worth. Only by a personal experience can you know beyond doubt the supreme quality and extra value it gives in results not even remotely approached by cars of any type near it in price.

We are eager to place a Chrysler Four at your disposal to test in the manner you choose.

CHRYSLER FOUR—Roadster Cpe., Phaet., Club Cabriolet, Royal Coupe, Sport Coupe, Sedan, Imperial Sedan, Brougham, Landau Sedan, Limousine, Limousine-Landau, Sedan-Limousine, Town Sedan, Town Limousine, Town Landau, Crown Imperial. All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to Current Federal excise tax.

WESTERLY

Today, Armistice day, Wednesday, Nov. 11th, this year, which made its first appearance in the list among legal holidays of Rhode Island in the state manual of 1923-1924, as the ninth legal holiday of the eleven during the year, does not appear as such among the ten "Legal Holidays in this State," of the Connecticut Register and Manual. However, Westerly, R. I., and Pawcatuck, Conn., unite this year in the observance of Armistice day, as the governors of both states have proclaimed that the day be given over to reverencing the memory of the dead.

At 12:30 p. m. and for the remainder of the day, the Westerly Chamber of Commerce and the Pawcatuck Board of Trade recommends that business activities cease, and accordingly retail stores and manufacturing plants will close. The Westerly town hall and banks will be closed all day and the Westerly post office will observe holiday hours.

The formal observance of Armistice day this year was undertaken by Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion which invited representatives of Harley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the British-Colonial Great War Veterans to meet at their rooms to consider plans for the day. As a result an Armistice day committee was named, George Kemp, chairman, Legion; Lawrence Rook, secretary, Foreign Wars and John Whitaker, treas., British-Colonials. The committee decided to hold a street parade at 2 p. m., and for speaker of the day, at the conclusion of the parade, Col. Cyril L. D. Wells, commanding officer of the 243rd R. I. C. A. C. regiment of Providence was extended an invitation and accepted. As a part of the program Commander George Kemp will present to a representative of the new Westerly hospital, Thomas McKenzie, a trustee, making the speech of acceptance and Edgar P. Maxson, secretary, as a gift from the legion post two American flags, to be used on a pole which the legion men have had erected on the hospital grounds.

At 11 o'clock a. m. many will observe the two minutes of silence recommended by President Coolidge, Christ Episcopal church, corner of Broad and Elm street will be open for all who care to enter and a short prayer service will follow the interval of silence.

At 2 o'clock from the Westerly Athletic field will start the two-mile cross country run in which have entered teams of seven men from the Westerly High school, Stonington High school, Chapman Technical High school of New London and possibly from Norwich Free academy, to finish at the east goal post line of the Athletic field.

This afternoon there will be played on the Westerly Athletic field the annual football game between Westerly High school eleven and Stonington High school players, which from the rivalry of the teams will be certain to draw a large gallery of football fans.

At its conclusion, the British-Colonial Great War Veterans will hold a family party at their rooms in Caledonian hall on Main street, at which refreshments will be served and a social time spent by the members' families.

At 7:30 o'clock in the evening, Rev. Orlo M. Breed, pastor of the Baptist church at Bradford, will preach an Armistice day sermon at Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Westerly.

The annual ball of Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion will be held in the evening with music by the Crandall-Sutcliff orchestra and will be in charge of the entertainment committee of the legion.

The annual dinner and entertainment of Harley P. Chase Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars will take place in Vets hall, Pawcatuck, the entertainers coming from Hartford. The committee in charge is George W. Andrews, Lawrence Rook, E. George Marr and James Reale.

Marshal of the street parade, which will form in three divisions at the junction of Elm and Broad streets, will be Sergt. Maj. Robert Atkins of Bradford, who was chosen by the members of the British-Colonial veterans, who have the right of line this year, with the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the second division and the American Legion in the third division.

Sergt. Maj. Robert Atkins has had enviable military service in the British army, in which he enlisted at the age of 18 years and 10 months and saw service in the Duke of Wellington West Riding Regiment. His term of service took him to Bermuda, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Jamaica, Barbadoes, St. Lucia, Trinidad, St. Helena, Cape Town, South Africa, Eshowe, Zulu Land, Pittsmaritzburg, Natal, Rhodesia, East Indies, Ragoon, Burmah, Fort Blair, Yorkshire, as Staff Company Major, in Ardaman Island and ending at Halifax, 1908 with 21 years 11 days of service. This covered nearly half of the globe and about equally divided service in parts of Africa and India and 12 months of duty each in the East Indies and West Indies. During the World war, debarred from foreign active service by age limit, Sergt. Atkins saw duty from Aug. 1917 to April 1919 with Corps of Commissionaires, part of the defense corps, posted at the munition factory, Wakefield, Yorkshire, England. Sergt. Maj. Atkins is night foreman at the Bradford Dyeing plant, at Bradford, R. I.

On the marshal's staff in the parade will be James Rose of the American Legion and James J. Keane of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The formation will be as follows:

First Division: Kiltie band, Battery E, British and Canadian veterans, Branford Boy Scouts, Sons of Veterans, Sons of Veterans' auxiliary.

Second division: St. Michael's fife and drum corps, Veterans of Foreign Wars, St. Michael's Boy Scouts, St. Michael's Girl Scout buglers, St. Michael's Girl Scouts, Spanish War Veterans.

Third division: Ashaway Boy Scout band, American Legion, Ashaway Boy Scouts, Westerly Boy Scouts, G. A. R. and auxiliaries.

All ex-service men in Westerly and vicinity have been invited to participate in these exercises.

Outstanding in the recent improvements about the Westerly station of the New Haven road is the completion of the $10,000 cement drive in the freight yard, the last load of surplus material having been carted away Monday. It will be several days before this driveway is put in operation, depending to a great extent on the weather, for, given bright sunlight and absence of moisture, the completed drivewav will dry out rapidly. When it is in use for motor trucks and all kinds of vehicles employed in the loading and unloading of freight cars, the hub-deep mud which has many a time slowed down and at times stopped entirely trans-shipments, will be a thing of the past. Westerly Station Agent Earl S. Bavier has been a hard worker for the building of this drive and to him Westerly shippers give full credit for its installation, completed at a time of the year just before the frost would hold it up and when winter storms with resultant mud furnishes fruitful sources for delayed freight shipments.

Known as "Scheme A" to railroad engineering plans, the driveway of cement extends from freight yard drive on the west in an easterly direction a distance of 780 feet to an easterly point at the entrance of the Westerly freight yard, with an average width of 34.75 feet. At the west entrance is a flare 36 feet wide, which makes it much easier for loaded vehicles to swing upon it. At the east end the width is 33 feet. Altogether there are 3,296 square yards of surface built under contract with the New Haven railroad by a firm from New Haven. The drive was laid in two long sections divided in the center from east to west. The southern half was laid first and when completed the northern stretch was laid. Rough milling on the slight grade at the Freight Yard drive entrance will prevent a slippery smooth surface when wet and horses drawing vehicles will find good footing, for the stretch is nearly level.

This new driveway has been laid between freight yard siding tracks Nos. 13 and 15, as they are known to railroad men, or "bulk yard delivery tracks," which means more to shippers. To the northward of these siding tracks No. 19 or "House track," alongside of the freight house, and between this track and No. 15 is track No. 17, "make-up" where freight trains assemble their freight cars, while switching. Next year it is planned to complete a shorter $8,000 driveway of cement between tracks Nos. 9 and 11, which sidings are nearer the westbound train shelter of the Westerly passenger station. Track No. 10 leads to the Armour beef house and No. 5 is known as "subway siding" which ends at the east of the train shelter. Tracks Nos. 4 and 3 are the present west and east main line tracks.

"Fresh paint" will be the sign which will be read by New Haven road commuters soon, for a gang of railroad painters and interior decorators will start work on the interior of the station between the 10th and 15th of December. That will be the first time the interior of the station has been gone over since the Westerly station was built, in 1913. A painters' train will be sidetracked at the Westerly station where the railroad painters will live during painting campaign.

Financial inducements are not lacking at this time for the New Haven railroad management to continue improvements. Reports show an increase at the present time from $5,000 to $6,000 over corresponding periods while the increased passenger receipts at the Westerly station have been over $1,000 more than in same previous periods.

At the end of the summer season a new penetration drive for passenger vehicles was constructed from Freight Yard drive across the freight yard to the west-bound train shelter, so that patrons of trains to New London or New York could drive up and wait for those trains and not be compelled to use the Canal street stairway of the subway from the main waiting station. The center of the oval drive was seeded for grass and many flowering shrubs, tobe in bloom from early spring to late fall have been set out, as well as on the west border of the drive.

Holes which have been worn in driveways on both sides of the station by the heavy traffic have been patched with hot-mix, eliminating many disagreeable mud puddles. About two weeks ago a painting gang completed the work of painting the exterior of the freight house building.

Westerly grand jurors, to report at West Kingstown, Monday, November 16th, Joseph J. Dowd, W. Sherman Eaton, Fayette F. Freeman, Robert Roan and H. Russell Burdick and for petit jury duty to report on Wednesday, November 18th, Shelby C. Nicholas, Paul W. Munsell, Edwin A. Hall, Ernest H. Saunders, Cleveland H. Clarke, William P. Dodge, Ernest A. Thorpe and Dwight M. Cornell, are being summoned by Constable Russell M. Slocum in the absence of Town Sergeant George L. Madison, of Westerly, who is on his vacation.

Westerly Masonic club members will begin a bridge whist tournament in their club rooms on High street starting Nov. 19 and continuing eight Thursday evenings exclusive of Thanksgiving and Christmas eve. Henry A. Stahle is the committee in charge.

OLD MYSTIC

Old Mystic Social circle met in the Methodist Episcopal parish house Monday evening. The room was artistically decorated with cornstalks and Jack-o'-lanterns. On entering it was total darkness and a ghost greeted each one. The meeting was called to order by the president, J. D. Austin. Very little business appearing it adjourned for games. A tub with water and apples in it furnished fun as members tried to catch an apple with their teeth. A line was formed to march to a corner, get your fortune told and to get refreshments consisting of sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee. A peanut hunt between J. W. Pollard and Ellen Stedman was won by Mr. Pollard. A program was given as follows: Reading, Clifford Holmes; reading, Miss Sarah Stedman; two ghosts playing a harmonica and a reading by Miss Florence Johnson.

The United Workers met Wednesday afternoon in the parish house.

The Ladies' Aid society met in the conference room Wednesday. A dinner was served at noon.

Mrs. Harold Williams entertained relatives from Middletown, N. Y., last week.

New books have been added recently to the Mystic-Noank library, as follows: Aesop's Fables, Rev. G. F. Townsend, gift of C. B. Heydecker: Arrow Smith, Lewis Sinclair, presented by Miss Annie C. Spicer. The following were presented with compliments of the author: An Art Philosopher's Cabinet, The Azter God and Other Dramas, Ballads and Other Poems, Dante and Collected Poems, Ethics and Natural Law, The Essentials of Aesthetics, A Life in Long, A Poet Cabinet, Poetry as a Representative Art, Polaris, The Story of an Eskimo Dog, given in memory of Ernest Howard Baynes the author.

In June, 1890, in a neighboring town, a man died, aged eighty years lacking twelve days, leaving an estate of over $100,000. He was considered a man of good judgment and fine executive ability and well informed on law. He has grandchildren living in Mystic, one grandson bearing his name being engaged in several business enterprises that are proving a success and he is surpassing his grandfather in business. One reason may be that the elder continued on the farm during his entire life, while the younger left farming coming to Mystic to amass his wealth. Items from that inventory of thirty five years ago show a great change in values. More than one half of this estate was in notes, exactly one hundred in all. The smallest was $5.88 while the largest was $5,183.33. In the stock items are found 1 pair of steers, $55; 1 cow, $20; 1 black cow, $15; (perhaps the color made the decrease in value), 9 sheep at $3.37 apiece; 5 fat hogs, $40; 7 old hen turkeys $1.00 apiece; 13 hens at 40 cents apiece; 2 1-2 tons of hay for $32.50; 800 feet spruce lumber for $11.65; 8,000 cedar shingles at $3.25 per thousand. According to those prices any one could eat turkey and chicken and buy lumber to build with. This inventory of ten pages is worth reading and has been carefully kept in the family of one of the appraisers, who passed on several years ago.

Mrs. Walter Morgan of Stonington was a visitor here Monday.

The house for William Noyes at Industrial place is progressing rapidly.

In the absence of Rollin Burrows, Tuesday, W. A. Phillips substituted for him.

Ernest Lebeau was home for the week end.

Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Congdon, Misses Florence Johnson, Louise Schroder, and Mrs. Wallace Phillips attended the Hallowe'en social of Old Mystic Social circle Monday evening.

Paul Wilhelm, Jr., 42, died suddenly on Saturday in South Manchester, where he was employed. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilhelm, 34 Greenmanville avenue. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery. Mr. Wilhelm is survived by a wife, formerly Elsie Schramm; six children, Elsie, Edna, Ida, Alfred and Whiter; four brothers, Herman Fritz, Charles and Otto Wilhelm, and four sisters are Mrs. Mary Duerr, Mrs. James Pinkman, Mrs. Henry Menger and Miss Agnes Wilhelm.

NOANK

Miss Ethel Wood Latham, past grand matron and David H. Seamon, past grand patron of the O. E. S. presided over Charity chapter, No. 61, O. E. S. of Mystic while the degrees were conferred on Tuesday evening. The meeting was designated as past matrons and past patrons night at Charity Chapter, No. 61, O. E. S.

Miss Abbie Gillis of Groton has been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hunter.

Mrs. August Johnson is entertaining her mother, Mrs. Emma Millett of Chester, N. H., and her sister, Miss Ada Millett, for a few months.

Funeral services for Paul Wilhelm, Jr., 42, were held Tuesday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilhelm of Mystic. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Elsie Schram, two sons, three daughters; his parents and four brothers, Herman and Fritz of Noank, Charles and Otto Wilhelm; also four sisters, Mrs. Mary Duerr, Mrs. James Pinkman, Mrs. Henry Menger, and Miss Agnes Wilhelm.

The trolley bridge is getting a coat of paint.

A new danger light has been installed at the corner of Pearl and Main streets.

Clayton Chappell has gone to New York on business.

Rollin Rathbun has brought home the largest catch of smelts this season, landing 125 smelts weighing 38 pounds. It took four hours to land them at Brook street dock.

Leon Weaver is ill at his home on East Main street.

George Devein has gone to Providence for a few days.

Mrs. Catherine De Carlo has returned from a visit to Philadelphia.

The fishing fleet came home from Block Island with a big catch of flat fish.

WESTERLY WILL BEGIN "BOOSTING" ADVERTISING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 9—The Westerly Chamber of Commerce held its November meeting at the Colonial club Tuesday evening with President Lewis Stanton in the chair. Frank A. Sullivan, Harry R. Milner and Horace A. Litchfield were voted to chamber membership.

A formal vote of appreciation was passed to be sent to Traffic Agent F. C. Coley of Boston, Mass., of the New Haven railroad, for the work of the road in the installing of a drive to the west bound passenger shelter and also for the new cement freight yard drive between the track siding. A description of the drives is printed in another part of the paper. The garbage disposal committee's report showed some progress had been made. Discussion of the $1,000 Westerly advertising fund disposition was reported as having been arranged in a conference between the town of Westerly committee and the Shore Development committee, in which it was decided that $750 would be available for advertising Westerly and its shore resorts with the approval of the town's committee. Two hundred and fifty dollars of the original $1,000 has already been appropriated for a bulletin board or sign board advertising Westerly, to be erected at some point on the Boston Post road. It was also suggested to have a smaller board bearing the greeting, "Welcome to Westerly, Westerly Chamber of Commerce" and also signboard directions for reaching Weekapaug, Shelter Harbor, Narragansett Pier, etc., at various highway intersections. The entire matter was referred to the committee on municipal improvements and they were directed to make action.

Secretary Hawke reported that in letter sent to ascertain the number of night messages filed with the Western Union Telegraph company, the Providence office had reported the number from Westerly "few and far between." From New London came the reply that the executive office in New York was making a study of the situation and the request there for the number of messages was referred to the New York office from which no reply had been received up to Oct. 24.

Receipt of a list of manufacturers in Westerly was reported as received by the United States census authorities having been sent by the chamber secretary and a request made to appoint a Westerly man to follow up when returns were not received by the federal census authorities from the listed manufacturers reported. It was voted to refer to the river and harbor committee of the Westerly chamber the request from Washington for the Westerly chamber to name delegates to the 21st convocation to be held in Washington Dec. 5 and 10.

A vote was passed to ask the Pullman Car company to name a car "Westerly" or "Watch Hill," or both, this being left to the printing and publicity committee.

At the next chamber meeting the speaker will be the manager of the New England Affairs bureau, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, who will speak on the subject "The Westerly Chamber of Commerce and what it means to Westerly."

The action of President Stanton, in naming Frank A. Sullivan and himself as delegates to the New England conference at Worcester, Mass., on next Thursday and Friday was approved.

At the request of Frank A. Sullivan the Westerly chamber voted an adoption of a resolution to the federal trade commission at Washington, D. C., to restrain granite producers from using the name "Westerly Granite," in the disposal of stone which did not come from Westerly, R. I.

Stylish "Bobs"

Easy to Keep Thick, Wavy, Lustrous

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparably soft, fresh, youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine, act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Doe With Horns Found

BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 4. (AP)—A remarkable caprice of nature, a doe with horns, was shot recently and has been turned over to the museum of vertebrate zoology at the University of California. Prof. J. Grinnell of the zoology department said an examination showed that the animal was sterile, which probably accounted for the unusual growth of horns.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Danny and Nanny Reach the Barn

Excitement gives to life its spice,
But too much ceases to be nice.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

It wasn't a great distance from the strawstack in Farmer Brown's barnyard to the barn itself. It wouldn't have seemed far to you. But to little folks like Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse it seemed a great distance because there was little or nothing under which to hide. You see, when they lived on the Green Meadows always they were more or less hidden by the grass. But here they must run across open spaces which seemed very terrible. They had the feeling that a thousand eyes were watching them.

As a matter of fact, sharp eyes did watch around Farmer Brown's barnyard much of the time. Spooky the Screech Owl learned long ago that now and then he could pick up a young rat around Farmer Brown's barnyard. Of a venturesome Mouse running across from the barn to the house, Black Pussy the Cat delighted to hunt in that barnyard. Jimmy Skunk, Reddy Fox, even Old Man Coyote occasionally visited there in the night. All this Danny Meadow Mouse knew. But Danny Meadow Mouse, knew also that if they once reached that barn he and Nanny would be quite safe, for there were many hiding places there into which no one bigger than themselves could possibly get. The chief thing was to reach that barn.

Now it happened that Farmer Brown's boy had been at work in the barnyard one afternoon and he had thrown an old coat down by the strawstack. It lay there all the afternoon. Danny Meadow Mouse, poking his nose out from underneath the straw, discovered the coat. It was just like the old coat in which he and Nanny had once made their home when it was used on a scarecrow. Danny crept into a pocket. There were some crumbs in that pocket. He had smelled them before he had crept in there. He squeaked a shrill little squeak, for Nanny. Nanny heard him and came hurrying to see what Danny had found. She, too crept into the pocket. That was a nice pocket. It was so nice there that they were in no hurry to leave. They curled up there and went to sleep. Yes, sir. Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse went to sleep in the pocket of Farmer Brown's boy's old coat lying on the ground by the strawstack. They slept so soundly that they didn't hear Farmer Brown's boy when he arrived. They knew nothing until he had picked up that old coat. Then they were afraid to come out.

Farmer Brown's boy went whistling on his way to the barn. In the barn he had his evening work to do. He tossed the coat down on the floor. No sooner did it touch the floor than out ran Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse. Farmer Brown's boy didn't see them, but Black Pussy did. She happened to be there in the barn. She always went over to the barn just before milking time because she had some nice, fresh milk then. So it was that she saw Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse run from the old coat. My, you should have seen Black Pussy, bound after those Meadow Mice! But she was just too late. Yes, sir, she was just too late. In the very nick of time Danny and Nanny found a hole just big enough for them to slip through.

My, you should have seen Black Pussy bound after those Meadow Mice!

Danny drew a long breath. "My!" said he. "Black Pussy almost got us that time. But here we are in his barn, and here we are going to spend a comfortable winter. There will be plenty of grass seed and there will be corn and oats and wheat and sweet hay. It won't matter how much snow there is. Nothing that can happen will matter. All we have to do is to watch out for Robber the Rat and Black Pussy. Aren't you glad you are here, Nanny Meadow Mouse?"

"Indeed I am!" cried Nanny. "Now let old Jack Frost come whenever he gets ready."

PARK TO SHOW PRE-HISTORIC NEIGHBORHOOD OF HOLLYWOOD

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10 (AP)—The saber-toothed tiger and the imperial-tusked elephant once roamed through a jungle just south of what is now Hollywood. A glimpse of southern California as it was then will be afforded when the prehistoric park planned by the Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art becomes a reality.

Years ago scientists found in some asphalt beds on the Rancho La Brea, fossil bones of animals of the pleistocene period. Exploration indicated that probably hundreds of thousands of years ago these jungle inhabitants had blundered into the sticky asphalt. Unable to extricate themselves they had died. Other victims followed them.

The bones of these animals were pressed into the clutching pits until the passage of many centuries built up a veritable storehouse of fossil skeletons. Here the scientists have found the bones of many prehistoric jungle animals, skeletons of which may be seen at the museum.

Twenty-seven acres in which the pits were found were donated for a public park. The park plans call for the planting of trees and shrubbery as nearly as possible like those which existed at the time of the saber-toothed tiger and his contemporaries. Reproduction of the animals in stone will be mounted and placed in the reconstructed jungle.

COLCHESTER

Mrs. David Elgart, who has been an invalid for the past few years died at her home on Linwood avenue, on Tuesday morning, at 7 o'clock. She was stricken with a shock about two years ago and has not recovered so she could get around and it was thought that she suffered a second shock last week, from which she did not rally. She is survived by nine sons, Samuel, Harry, Abraham, Benjamin and Ernest of New York, Arthur of New London, Nathan of Deep River, Barney and Jacob of this place and one daughter, Mrs. Mintz of New York. She was a woman who was respected by all.

Attorney J. D. Shea of New Haven was the guest of his parents on Lebanon avenue over Sunday.

VARIETY OF CORKS AFFECTS LONDON'S CHAMPAGNE MARKET

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Used champagne bottle corks are collected by waiters in large restaurants here as eagerly as are tips. The corks are worth money and figure strongly in the quotations on the champagne market.

Wine merchants established a cork clearing house that is known to all city cafe waiters. It is designed to boom the particular brands of champagne which the wholesalers or retailers want to "unload."

Waiters in all the large restaurants where champagne is served receive daily quotations on the clearing house rates, the cork prices varying from two pence to six pence each. The price of corks fluctuate weekly according to the brand of the wine and its popularity.

At times when sales of any brand shows signs of falling off the price of its corks rises, as an incentive to waiters to aid in stimulating the sale of this particular kind. Waiters everywhere here now collect champagne bottle corks as eagerly as they do tips.

CANADIAN "WHISKEY" MOSTLY DENATURED ALCOHOL AND "MOON"

CHICAGO, Nov. 10. (AP)—The flood of Canadian whiskey which spilled over the border during the first years of prohibition, has largely been dammed up and the thirsty get only "moonshine" and "cut" whiskey with Canadian labels, reports from St. Paul, Detroit and Chicago indicate.

Prohibition authorities in the St. Paul area say that 55 per cent of the liquor sold there is redistilled alcohol. Rum running over the Minnesota line, they say, has been "well in hand for two and a half years."

Even the anti-prohibitionists admit little Canadian liquor is available. What there is comes in by automobile, generally run at night on non-stop trips from the border to the Twin Cities. The alcohol used in concocting fake liquor comes in from the east under false consignment and many large seizures have been made.

There are 16,000 "blind pigs" in Detroit, estimates Frank H. Croul, commissioner of police, which would indicate a large and steadily flowing supply of alcoholic drinks. Before prohibition there were 1,300 licensed saloons. Some genuine liquor escapes the blockade on the Detroit river and on Lakes St. Clair, Huron and Erie, but federal agents assert that most of the Canadian labelled whiskey is spurious, some of it poisonous and most of it green and unfit for consumption.

Rum runners in the Detroit area get a comparatively small return for the chances they take, the rate of pay being 50 cents a case foe beer and $1 a case for whiskey. Most wholesalers, however, pay the runners a flat salary, generally $80 a week.

"Cutting" has become more and more profitable. It is a process of making green moonshine or water and alcohol taste like genuine whiskey by the addition of a small amount of a recognized brand. So great has become the demand for good whiskey for "cutting" purposes that this liquor itself is watered and is often merely a skilfully blended "cut" whiskey.

An effort to stifle river running at Detroit is now being made by Carey D. Ferguson, collector of customs, who has become "admiral" of a fleet of nine fast boats, with 200 agents concentrating on the liquor traffic.

The liquor business in and around Cleveland consist almost entirely in the manufacture and sale of corn whiskey with a sideline on the importation of Canadian beer, declared Thomas Stone, former prohibition chief. Much home made wine, is sold, as is synthetic gin made from alcohol.

Whiskey running and importation of bonded liquor into Cleveland is a rarity. Beer is brought in carload lots from Canada, billed as cast iron, concentrated lye and other merchandise. Beer formerly was brought across Lake Erie in small boats but since the government rum chasers became active, this mode of transportation has decreased.

Official confirmation is lacking of reported aerial bootlegging in the Chicago district, but it agreed that automobile, rail and water transportation are about equally popular among rum runners in this territory.

New processes have been developed in the manufacture of intoxicants in this area which are known as "cleaning" denatured alcohol. Just what processes are used, besides redistillation, is a mystery which federal sleuths and chemists are trying to solve. They suspect the moonshine magnates have in their pay chemists as clever as any in government employ.

In striking at this particular source, prohibition field agents raided a Chicago drug store where the principal stock was body-rub alcohol. Much of it still was in cartons but some had been poured into two-gallon jugs. In these floated a liver-like substance which resembled the "mother" of vinegar. The druggist explained that this substance was Russian mineral oil, which had been put into the alcohol to consume its "denatures." As to whether he disclosed his real secret, prohibition agents are uncertain.

Thus far the department has unearthed fewer "cleaning plants" handling industrial alcohol in Chicago than on farms; in out-of-the-way rural places, and in small towns.

13 HORSES AND FOUR FALSE STARTS KILL THE STARTER

MARSEILLES, Nov. 10 (AP)—Thirteen horses and four false starts in the same race killed Marcel Blinou, for more than 20 years official starter at the Marseilles racetrack.

The "Palm-tree Stakes," one of the features of the season here and always heavily bet upon, was being run off before an excited and nervous crowd. One, two, three, false starts. The crowd began to protest and to hiss the starter. Blinou turned red in the face, and called the horses back for a fourth start.

Again, it was a false start. Blinou swayed on his feet for a moment, then fell to the ground. He had died of heart disease.

Idaho Claims Many Jockeys

Idaho has been cited as the state from which more famous jockey talent has come in recent years than any other state. Among the riders now in the public eye are Sande, LaVerne, Fator, M. Fator, Dickie Johnson and Arthur Mortenson, who at one time or another were claimed by Idaho. Ivan Parke is also from that state.

TAX ON FORGETFULNESS LATEST OF FRENCH FINANCE FASHIONS

PARIS, Nov. 10. (AP)—A tax on forgetfulness is the most up-to-date thing in French revenue novelties.

The gentleman who leaves stock certificates in his taxicab and madame who forgets everything from her cigarette case to her pocket-book will now pay rather heavily when they claim their belongings at the Lost quarters.

Property Office in the Police Headquarters.

Money and securities will be returned to their owners at a charge of 4 per cent of their value. Jewelry, "except anything having no instrinsic value," is redeemable on the same terms. The "no instrinsic value" clause is expected to kill a very promising publicity field in the matter of lost jewelry. For every other article, new or nearly new, two francs will be charged; for everything else, one franc.

Howard's Buttermilk Cream Best for Freckles, Sunburn and Tan

Old Time Recipe of Buttermilk Cream In a New Way—A Gentle Massage with Fingers Before Retiring is All That is Necessary

The old-time application of Buttermilk and Cream to whiten and preserve the skin and remove harsh little wrinkles and ugly sallowness is grandmother's recipe and women throughout the country are again using it to ensure a beautiful complexion and snow-white hands and arms.

Buttermilk, however, is not always obtainable, but a specialist has at last perfected a method of concentrating buttermilk and combining it with a perfect cream, which you can buy in small quantities ready to use at any first class drug store by simply asking for "Howard's" Buttermilk Cream.

There is no secret about it nor is there any doubt about the result—it's just a common ordinary buttermilk in the form of a wonderful cream gently massaged with the finger tips around the corners of the eyes and mouth.

To get the best effect, be sure to follow the simple directions. Lee & Osgood Co., and all good druggists guarantee a noticeable improvement after the first application or they will refund the money.

PENDLETON HILL

George Malcom Coffrell was so unfortunate as to be kicked in the chest by a strange horse on Monday of this week. Dr. Thurman Maine was called and reported no broken bones. The child has been confined to the house this week.

Friends sorrow to learn that Mrs. Homer Kinney is in fast failing health. Her present condition is still more unfavorable.

The Hallowe'en dance at White birch pavillion was a successful event. The costumes were fantastic, unique and most fun provoking. There was a large attendance.

Thermometers here registered fourteen degrees above zero Sunday morning and Friday's snow remained with us a long time.

Charles H. Rood and Delanois Rood, his son, are employed at the Glasgo mill.

Miss Bertha Lewis spent Tuesday night with Mrs. Charles Coffrell and family.

Richard Ray Palmer is improving somewhat, and it is hoped that he will be able to sit up next week. Birdsey Dale Palmer, Jr., is better; but not yet able to attend school.

The Ladies Sewing society met at the parsonage Wednesday. This was the annual meeting and officers were chosen for the ensuing year as follows: President, Mrs. Annie Ryder Cook; vice presidents, Mrs. Winnifred Palmer Cottrell, Mrs. Helen Miner Palmer, Mrs. Marcia Bently Thompson, Mrs. Charles H. Rood; directors, Mrs. Mary Chapman Johnson, Mrs. Bessie Gatchell Almy, Mrs. Clara Maine Geer, Mrs. Rose Putger Gladfellow, Miss Carrie A. Ryder; solicitors, Mrs. Winnifred Palmer Cottrell, Miss Amelia Miner Palmer, Miss Iva Rood, Miss Pearl Tennant; secretary and treasurer, Miss Mary Christine Palmer. The society most reluctantly accepted the resignation of Mrs. George Palmer, who has served so ably as its president for the past four years. During this period, and through her energetic and efficient management, a large sum of money has been earned and expended on the church property, which is now in excellent condition. While the society accepted her resignation, it feels she has more than earned a respite from her labors.

Birdsey G. Palmer was summoned to attend court as juror on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Birdsey G. Palmer have installed a radio for the benefit of their invalid son, Richard.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Hale of Springfield spent Hallowe'en at their summer home here.

Mrs. Harris Boardman of Montclair, N. J. and Pendleton Hill is spending some time at her summer home here.

Mrs. Winnifred Palmer, chairman North Stonington school board attended a meeting of that board Monday evening.

Miss Amelia Palmer of the Westerly high school has been out of school for a week with a severe attack of grippe.

IT IS BETTER TO BE SAFE WITH ONE SOAP THAN WORRIED WITH FIVE

Purity and safety in soap are as good for clothes as for complexions

Do you really believe that pure soap should be used only for toilet and bath, and that humbler tasks must be done with harsher soaps?

If harsh soaps hurt your hands, do they not also hurt your clothes, and the other things you clean?

If only for the sake of your hands, purity and safety are as important in the soap you use for household tasks as they are in a soap for toilet and bath.

Lotions and creams can soothe, but never prevent the cruelties of hours of cleaning and washing with harsh soaps. Whereas, if you use Ivory for everything, you are as merciful to your hands as if you merely washed them in Ivory and lukewarm water so many times a day—which of course can do them no injury.

And even the sturdiest and heaviest household linens respond gratefully to purity like Ivory's—not only are they clean, but they never smell "soapy" and they wear ever so much longer.

So though you may have thought Ivory too pure and too good to use for ordinary household tasks, you will really find it in the end such thorough economy that, like many women, you will probably never use anything else!

It pays to give everything you wash the protection you ordinarily give only to finer things.

What more could you ask of soap than Ivory can give for any purpose? Why bother with a different soap for each of the half-dozen soap-and-water tasks in your home, when Ivory can do them all so well?

A conclusive safety test for garment soaps

IT is easy to determine whether or not a soap is gentle enough to be used for delicate garments.

Simply ask yourself this question:

"Would I use this soap on my face?"

In the case of Ivory and Ivory Flakes your answer is instantly "Yes," because you know that for forty-five years women have protected lovely complexions by the use of Ivory Soap.

Here is a fine, simple treatment for your complexion

WASH your face once or twice daily with warm water and Ivory Soap. Rinse in warm water and follow with a dash of cold. Dry thoroughly by patting with a soft towel. If your skin needs it, rub in a little pure cold cream. Guest Ivory, the dainty new cake of Ivory made especially for face and hands, costs but 5 cents.

Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight

The loss of as much as a pound of excess fat a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which will quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Dept. B-1.

Mrs. Ella Massey of Windsor is a guest of Mrs. Elizabeth Loomis.

JEWETT CITY

It was learned here Tuesday that a month more will wind up the trolley service for Jewett City, then, at once, the bus schedule will become effective. Residents agree that probably no town on the line has received greater benefit than this, and there is very little fault to find with the safe and dependable service that the Connecticut Co. has given.

It is hoped by local people that when the trolleys go, the company will as faithfully operate its line of local busses. They claim that revenue received from Jewett City people has been a paying factor in the operation of the local service, and it feels reasonably certain that there will be no disposition on the part of the Connecticut Co. to let go of any part of it.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST BAPTISMS SET NEW EVANGELISTIC MARK

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP)—General Per-With the administering of 1,087,550 baptisms by the Southern Baptist church during the last five years, a new evangelistic record for all evangelical denominations has been established, said Dr. E. P. Alldredge, statistical secretary.

Dr. Alldredge said this is an average of 207,510 baptisms annually for the five years of 1920-24, inclusive, and 23 baptisms for every daylight hour.

The highest previous record of Southern Baptists in baptisms was 714,322 for the five-year period of 1915-19, inclusive.

A buck deer with a flour barrel fastened to its antlers startled Plainfield, Conn. The animal had evidently been eating from the barrel, was suddenly frightened and not being able to shake off the barrel, went through the rural districts with a wild rush that drove all traffic from the road. The last seen of the deer was when it jumped into the Quinebaug river, still wearing its wooden bonnet.

OUR NATION'S PRAYER.

O Lord, a sacred peace we crave;
For this, with all our leaders brave
We pray that Thy Almighty Hand
Will guard and guide our wondrous land.
We'll chalk with love the swords of men
To make of them the noblest pen,
With this, dear God, our hope and aim,
Let us enshrine Old Glody's fame.

For us our Fathers died by sword,
And loved ones spent their lives, Oh Lord.
Give us unselfish hearts like theirs
To prove our thanks as worthy heirs.
Direct our thoughts to holy deeds;
Let love abide amongst the creeds.
Pray, send Thy blessings ev'ry day;
Forgive the wrong we do or say.

The Flag of Young America
With spirit of Columbia
Reflects of Thee, Oh Lord, a light
That fills our veins and souls with might.
To keep this emblem ever free,
A guiding star to Liberty,
We place it in Thy watchful care
And humbly end our nation's pray'r.

THE SOUL OF A FLOWER.

Where wends the Rose's fragrance,
That little blossom soul,
After a wind-waft vagrance
What is its final goal?
I'd like to think, by hill or glen,
Lovelier yet 'twill bloom again.

If we poor sinful mortals
May hope some Power will give Beyond death's fearful portals
A fairer life to live,
Why should the purest things on earth
Upon it die nor know new birth?

Through such a sad reflection
My heart declines to grope;
Better a resurrection
Of earthly grace to hope.
Who knows? In heaven may reappear
The loveliness we so loved here.
—Samuel Minturn Peck, in Boston Transcript.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

She—Why does your wife look so happy?

He—She has something to worry about again. — University of Georgia Cracker.

What's the matter?
I have lost my dog.
Why not advertise for it?
It can't read!—Kasper, Stockholm.

Returning Reveler—Ah, I have found the key. Now comes the most difficult part—to find the keyhole!—Liverpool Express.

Frosh (just after his first shave)—Er, how much do you charge?

Barber—A dollar and a half.

Frosh—What? How's that?

Barber—I had to hunt for the beard. —Princeton Tiger.

I am the life of this party, remarked the keeper of the morgue.—Exchange.

Noah may have organized the first stock company, but one thing sure, he never tried to float alone.—Judge.

Hired Girl—Shall I dust off the brickybrac in the drawing room, madam?

Mistress—Not today, Nora, I don't think we can afford it.—Boston Transcript.

Eastern Tourist—So this is Grand Canyon.

Antelope Andy—Yuh!

Eastern Tourist—How was it formed?

Antelope Andy—One year there was an oversupply of post holes in the west and so they piled 'em up here.—California Pelican.

"I am seven years old," said Jean.

"Oh, I am nine," said Doris.

But I shall be nine too.

Yes, but then, I'll be eleven." Doris returned with a triumphant little laugh. "You'll never be able to catch up with me—never!"

"Well, I don't care!" replied Jean vigorously. "You'll be an old woman before I am, anyway."—Twice Told Tales.

To stimulate secondary industries in the smaller centers of New South Wales and to popularize the products of home industry, several organizations are combining to promote an exhibition train which will carry its displays to 100 country towns throughout the state.

A recent cloudburst on the land of L. L. Loony, of Rochester, Nev., had a literal silver lining for him. The rain washed away a good part of the ground around his house. When the storm was spent, a vein of mineral was exposed. He started to dig. At a depth of 20 feet he opened up a vein of ore assaying $50 to the ton. He was soon on his way to the smelter with the first carload.

In an effort to solve the congested traffic problem, the Paris police are planning a laboratory street. This novel idea was suggested by M. Roetland, a city councillor, and M. Marain, prefect of police, is heartily in accord with the experiment. The laboratory street will provide all sorts of tests for motor traffic to determine the cause of accidents. Various surface materials and safety devices will be tested, as well as mistakes in driving and the most efficient control of traffic.

Minnehaha Falls, scene of the romance of Longfellows' gallant Hiawatha, is hardly a ripple now, and the bronze statue of Hiawatha, carrying the dainty Indian maid in his arms, stands high and dry on the island in Minnehaha creek which is no longer the gurgling stream it once was. Minnehaha park, visited by thousands of tourists is disappointing in its main attraction. The drainage of lakes that fed the stream, and extremely dry weather, has virtually ended the flow of water over the falls.

A pen point picture of a scene at old Monticello, pioneer settlement of the Cowlitz river, near Kelso, Wash., has been completed by D. W. Bowman, of Echo, Ore., after five months' work. The picture, 25 by 40 inches, was made without a stroke of line, every detail being made by pen-point dots, of which tens of thousands were required. The scene shows the old priest house, where the first convention at which Washington territory petitioned for separation from Oregon, was held, and two granaries, from which grain was loaded into ocean schooners.

SERMON ON FAITH AT ENGLISH SERVICE

Sunday evening at the English service at the German Lutheran church the sermon by the pastor, Rev. Herman Hunsinger was upon Faith. In part he said:

Scientists tell us, that the whole universe would fall to pieces, if it was not for the continuous action of a mysterious power penetrating all things and keeping them in their due balance. They call this power, the law of gravitation. We are absolutely unable at present to explain the nature of this gravitation and its last cause, but it's there just the same and it works in the very same way on that remote star, which we only can perceive through a good telescope as well as in our own bodies. We may well say, that gravitation is the constituent power of the universe. But we, who have not devoted ourselves to the studies of astronomy or natural history are very little concerned about gravitation. For us it is enough to know that a stone thrown into the air by our hand—will come back the same way and possibly smash our head if we don't look out.—Our personal life is performed in the world of the spirit, which, invisible but powerful, reaches far into the visible world. We are members of this invisible spiritual world, we are personalities and therefore we are most deeply concerned in the question: Is there a constituent power, is there a law of gravitation, that binds and holds together the beings in the spiritual world? Yes, there is, friends yes there is! The constituent power in the spiritual world is faith. "That is the word of faith, which we preach." As in the natural world gravitation establishes the right relation between things and so effects the wondrous harmony of the universe, so faith in the unseen world establishes the right relation between the spirits and brings about that wondrous harmony of personal life. Without the constituent power of faith there is no personal life. But now, there is a difference between the blind mechanical law of gravitation and faith. Gravitation keeps the world going like a merry-go-round in the same condition like it was many thousand years ago. Faith is a creative power and it carries in itself the tendency of progress. Gravitation does not reveal to us the last cause of its power. But faith has a mouth. It talks through our conscience. It tells us that the living God is the last cause of all, the last cause of the universe and of the spiritual world. Faith is God's builder. It builds the world of a perfect humanity on the great scheme of God's love. From God it builds a bridge to your soul, and from your soul it builds another bridge to the soul of your brother, and again by connecting your brother's soul with God—it teaches you, that your brothers soul is the first station on your way to God. By faith God's love invades sinful humanity. Faith is the open window, through which God's light falls into the dark midnight of our soul. Faith is the outstretched hand of the poor sinner, which receives and holds fast the greatest of all blessings, the forgiveness of our sins through the blood of Jesus. Faith is the seal of the new convenant at Mount Calvery the performance of which made the earth shake, the angels rejoice in triumphant gladness and the devil and all his evil spirits sit up and take notice. O my dear friends, we cannot praise enough the glorious power of faith. Open your eyes and see how it works, how it overcomes the obstacles placed in its way by the evil one. The more it is resisted, reproached and contradicted the stronger it grows. There is not a wall in this world so high, but faith will jump over it soon. There is not a cloud on the sky so dark but faith will soon crown it with a silver lining. It is the greatest moment in the life of a Christian, when faith conquers the heart when you like a little child with a trembling heart doubtful and reluctant lean against the table of God's promises and you hear the sweet voice of faith: Walk up to your father my dear child, walk up to Him who loves you so dearly. What will you do? Use your feet and walk, always looking right into his face. Soon your arms will feel and embrace his knees. Then you are at rest. That is the work of faith. His nature and work is wonderfully expressed by the words of the old Latin church father Augustine: Thou O God hast made us toward Thee, and our hearts will stay without rest until they find their peace in Thee.

But how does faith start to work in your soul? My dear friends, may I tell you a short story. It will not be a bed-time story to rock you to sleep. It will be a story that will awaken you. Let us draw back the curtain of the silent night. There we find him tossing himself hither and thither in his bed. The poor sinner, his eyes cannot find sleep. We look into his pale face. It is so familiar to us. May be it is our own. He always sits up and stares around: There they come again in the moonlight the black shadows of his evil deeds. He knows them all too well. Around his bedside they gather and suddenly they all grow together into a big black mountain. This mountain will fall over him and—"O God, be gracious to me a sinner." The poor soul cries out in agony. There! What is that? A light comes up in the darkness and in the light a book can clearly be seen and a hand appears, which turns the pages.—Now it stops. And a finger points to one word, and that word grows bigger and bigger until it fills the whole room with its glorious light. "Jesus"—The blank shadows of sin yield to His light and peace flows from his holy name into the heart of the poor sinner. Faith and faith alone gives him that wonderful assurance that the blood of Jesus Christ, the son of God, cleanses him from all his sins. How doth faith, come to you and to me? It does not come to us through a miracle from outside: it is not in us by our inner light or vision. Faith enters into our soul through the door of God's word and promise. This is the word of faith which we preach.

SHORT SKIRTS ONLY MODERN FASHION TO SHOCK WOMAN RULER

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Of all the ultra modernism about the English girls of 1925 only the short skirts are a shock to the orthodox sensibilities of the Begum of Bhopal, the only woman ruler of the 700 potentates of India, who is in London taking in western civilization through her Mohammedan veil.

The most advanced woman of her race and among the most progressive of the Indian rulers, the Begum, despite her 67 years, has come to London with her son and heir to learn the ways and manners of the land of her suzerain.

Her Royal Highness wants her granddaughters to learn a woman's work but she would not think of sending them to universities. Such institutions are a good place for boys but not for girls.

"I don't think women need to know as much as a man," she added, in dismissing the subject of women's place in the sun.

The Begum has established herself in an English mansion in the heart of Mayfair which contains nothing more suggestive of her native land than an axminster carpet. Her household of 32 members are mostly court officials and personal maids, and it is an English butler who opens the pretentious door and a Cockney maid who pours out afternoon tea. The Begum is in purdah, all the times as the laws of her religion demand and it is only a pair of sparkling eyes that one is permitted to address.

But the Begum is not travelling in state. Quite the contrary, for the representative of The Associated Press who called upon her was taken without ceremony into her private sitting room and presented to the Begum as she threw aside a piece of highly colored embroidery upon which she had been working.

"I am quite attracted to English girls but I cannot believe they should go about in such short skirts and or without guardians," the Begum told her interviewer. "But I suppose short skirts are the fashion."

The two sons of the Begum have several daughters and in the rearing of these children the Begum takes a personal interest.

"I want my grand-daughters to learn a woman's work," she asserted. "They must learn to run a household, expertise cooking and know needlework but I would not think of sending them to universities. That's a good place for boys but not for girls."

Her Royal Highness herself received a part of her education from tutors sent to her parents by the British government. From them she learned English, French and elementary mathematics. But for other subjects this powerful ruler has a natural dislike.

The heir to the throne, who accompanied his mother, has spent most of his time in driving through the downtown street and marvelling at the shop windows.

GOVERNOR'S ROOM WILL SHOW HUMAN VIRTUES IN MURALS

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 5 (AP)—Virtues of the human race will be exemplified in mural decorations which will adorn the governor's reception room of Nebraska's new $9,000,000 statehouse.

Augustus Vincent Tack, New York artist, has in mind the wish of the late Bertram G. Goodhue, architect, who designed both the capitol and grounds, that the governor's official room be made "the most beautiful room in the world."

The side and end walls will express the virtues of the state. The end wall at which is the fireplace will represent the state on the right as the provider of learning in its universities and schools and on the left as the protector of the sick and helpless in its hospitals and asylums. The opposite wall will represent the idea of equality before the law in which will be seen all sorts of men. In this panel the law itself is represented by the seven ancients of the law, who stand as judges before the procession of human beings.

The same processional passes around the whole first plane of the decoration and is divided into three groups. These represent the liberty of speech, liberty of religious observance and liberty of the electorate or political freedom.

Opposite these panels will be balancing groups expressive of contentment and happiness, symbolizing prosperity.

In the next section are represented the virtues of citizenship—Courage, Magnanimity, Perseverance, Vision, Enterprise, Hospitality, Righteousness and Understanding.

The ceiling proper represents the virtues of life. This is divided into seven panels, in one of these will be Agriculture in the person of Ceres. She is attended by the favoring winds which bring the rains and produce abundant crops. Opposite this panel and balancing it, is represented Industry in the person of Vulcan. Between these panels is a circular panel in which a figure representing life giving energy, like a sun is the center of the universe.

At the extreme end of the ceiling panels is a representation of the tree of life, signifying the successive generations of men.

The German birth-rate has gone down steadily since the war, and was at the lowest point in five years in 1924, according to the latest German census figures. The number of births for every 1,000 inhabitants was 21.1, or 25 per cent. less than in 1913. These fewer births were partly offset, however, by lower death rates, although these latter did not go down equally fast. In Berlin, where conditions are abnormal, deaths exceeded births by 1.5 in 1,000 population.

Black soil, and areas covered with pine and spruce forests reflect practically no sunlight; grassland and growing crops reflect as much as 15 per cent.; dry and light colored rocks 30 per cent., while fresh snow reflects over 70 per cent.

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced at Home

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice that anyone in this world can give you is to ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that even Piles are quickly absorbed. Lee & Osgood sells lots of it.

JOHN QUINN, N. LONDON BOOTLEGGER, ATTEMPTS SUICIDE WITH RAZOR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 10—John Quinn, a cripple, residing at 699 Bank street, where he has continued several years to dispense liquor, attempted self-destruction following his having been fined $50 and having received a sentence of 30 days in jail, meted out by Judge Charles B. Waller in the criminal court of common pleas. Quinn slashed his throat with a razor, which he had about his person when he appeared at the court house. The wound Quinn inflicted, however, is not of a serious nature as it was superficial and was dressed later at the county jail by a physician.

Deputy Sheriff William Bull, of Kingston, R. I., who was in the building when Quinn attempted suicide, suffered a severe cut of the right hand in wresting the weapon from Quinn's grasp.

Quinn has been arrested more times than any other man in the state for violation of the liquor law, having been apprehended no less than 10 times, but until today he never had a jail sentence put into effect.

Quinn was included in the 19 arrests made last month by state and local police, who conducted a city-wide raid in an effort to put an end to the dispensing of liquor. When presented in the police court Quinn was fined $200 and costs, also received a suspended sentence of 10 days in jail, the suspension being for a year.

A short time later Quinn caused Clarence Canta, a youth residing on Shaw street to bring a quantity of alcohol to the Quinn residence. Canta sister tipped the police off that the alcohol was being brought to the Quinn place and upon its arrival there both Quinn and the youth were taken into custody. Today Quinn was in court on the revocation of the jail sentence and received the new sentence and fine. Quinn was taken from the court room immediately upon being fined and sentenced, and was taken to the office of Sheriff Sidney A. Brown to await being escorted to jail by Deputy Sheriff F. H. Tubbs. In the office were several persons, including Deputy Sheriff Bull, who had come to New London to take charge of an automobile stolen by thugs in West Kingston last Sunday and abandoned at East Lyme. While Deputy Sheriff Tubbs was engaged at a telephone, Quinn suddenly pulled the razor from his vest pocket and slashed it across his throat. His act was observed by one of the women who let forth a scream that was heard throughout the building. Deputy Sheriff Bull rushed at Quinn, who was seated on a bench and seizing Quinn's right hand, he managed to relieve the would-be suicide of the weapon, but in the struggle for the razor the officer's right thumb was terribly lacerated. Bull was taken to the office of a physician where the wound was sewed up. Quinn is about 35, and was formerly a taxicab driver, but he has been engaged in the liquor traffic about six years.

The case of Charles Yankowski, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law was concluded, the bond being forfeited.

The case of Attorney George Crocerelia, of Waterbury, formerly of New London, charged with violation of the automobile law, was nolled.

Philipe Gormier, of Norwich, charged with violation of the automobile law was fined $100.

The case of John Leman, charged with breach of the peace, was nolled upon the payment of $25.

The case of Mary Cutler, of Colchester, charged with violation of the motor vehicle laws, was nolled upon payment of $25.

The case of Stanley Stephanski, of East Lyme, charged with violation of the dog law, was nolled upon payment of $10.

Continuances were ordered in the cases of Daniel Finn, Jr., of Norwich, charged with non-support; George Rule, this city, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law; Elmer Woodward, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law; and George E. Kelley, Stonington, charged with non-support.

Samuel A. Siller, of this city, charged with non-support, pleaded not guilty and the 23rd inst. was set as the date of the trial.

Rock Zekos, an employe of the New England Carpet Lining company, was sent to jail this morning by Judge Reiner when Zekos appeared in the police court charged with abuse of his wife. Rock pleaded not guilty as he has a dozen times before when charged with the same offense, but the evidence was against him and he had to take a ride. Mrs. Zekos is an industrious worker and Rock is also, when not drinking from liquor, but when he is under the influence of liquor he is as difficult to manage as an electric wire. He was under a suspended sentence when he was presented today, for on the 12th of August he was sentenced to jail for a stay of ten days. Then the execution of the sentence was suspended, that he might have a chance to get himself together and return to his work. He did that, but broke out again yesterday. Today he was sentenced to jail for thirty days, but the execution of that sentence was suspended and he was sent to jail on the prior sentence.

William Dooley, as unfortunate as one finds them, was today committed to the workhouse as a vagrant. Billy has probably lived the best half of his life and finds himself without a home and with no family that connects him by ties of blood. In his poverty he is a harmless fellow and gets a good deal of sunshine out of life. But a home he has not known about in recent years, so he resorts to the meagre comforts the lodging room in the police station affords. He has been there so frequently that it was deemed to be charitable and for his own comfort to send him to jail where he will be well fed and where he will not experience cold and privations during the winter weather that is right ahead. He can now laugh at the coal strikers and ponder over ways and means of obtaining a livelihood when the sunny days of spring shall come again.

Mrs. W. J. Bolkman, residing on Faye street, communicated by telephone with the police this forenoon, stating that Mrs. May Gammons, who occupies a tenement in the same house as does Mrs. Bolkman, was in the Bolkman apartments and refused to leave. Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith went to the Faye street house, but when the officers arrived there Mrs. Gammons had returned to her apartment, Mrs. Bolkman stated that she did not desire Mrs. Gammons arrested in view of the fact that the former was planning to vacate her apartment in order to avoid future conflicts with the Gammons' woman if Mrs. Bolkman continued to reside in the house.

The big Seagrave aerial fire truck which was recently delivered to the city and is to be stationed at the central fire station, Union street, will be given a test tomorrow afternoon when the operation of the truck will be publicly demonstrated. The truck will be operated to the corner of State and Union streets at 2:30 o'clock and will battle a mimic fire at the Crocker house, which was attacked by flames several months ago. It was this fire that caused city officials to bring about the purchase of the truck. The truck will be given a thorough working in the operation of ladders and tower and upon the conclusion of the demonstration, the truck will be taken to the municipal pier where the pumper will be tested. The truck will then be formally turned over to the city.

John Lablak, a soldier, stationed at Fort Wright, N. Y., was found loitering about the Fort Neck yard of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad this afternoon by Sergeant Edward McGrath, of the railroad's force of special agents. Lablak was taken into custody and at the police station it was learned that Lablak was absent from Fort Wright without leave. He was delivered to a provost guard and taken back to the fort on one of the afternoon transports.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of Bernard Fabricant, 18 Crouch street, to be suspended. Commissioner Stoeckel also caused the operator's license of Miss Mary Sullivan, 38 Alger street, a Hartford school teacher, to be returned to the owner. The license was suspended several weeks ago, after the automobile which Miss Sullivan was driving crashed against a tree on Williams street. In the car were two young ladies, students at Willimantic Normal school and to which institution the car was bound when the crash occurred. All three occupants of the automobile were injured, two of them seriously.

Gretta Keefe Dunn has sold a dwelling at the corner of Cedar Grove avenue and Ledyard street, to Lucy B. DeWolf.

George G. Avery, 241 Broad street, complained to the police last evening that an automobile bearing registration N-1114, had collided with the former's automobile on the approach of the Thames river highway bridge and that the driver of the colliding car was guilty of evasion of responsibility for he failed to stop to determine the extent of the damage he had caused. It was later revealed that the colliding automobile is owned by F. C. Thurber, 39 Thames street. Sergeant Samuel Rick went to the Thurber residence where Thurber informed the officer that the collision was trivial and that no damage had been occasioned other than the slight bending of a bumper on the Avery car. Thurber declared that he was not guilty of evasion of responsibility for he brought his car to a stop as soon as Mr. Avery had been guilty of violation of the motor vehicle law, claiming that Mr. Avery was responsible for the collision because of the suddenness with which he brought his car to a stop, without giving a signal that he intended to do so.

The police report the quietest times of the year at present. Up to 9 o'clock this evening there was not a prisoner in the station.

Brainard Masonic lodge is holding a meeting this evening to decide whether the lodge will erect a new temple. The matter has been given every attention by the members and a committee and every detail has been worked out so that the matter was presented intelligently at the meeting this evening. The officers of the Brainard Lodge corporation have massed all the details that are necessary and have tentative plans for proceeding with a scheme for financing the undertaking, and erecting and maintaining the structure that shall be built. Frederick Mercer made the lodge and corporation an offer some time ago and that is the one that has received the attention since then. The site for the temple is that next south of the county court house on which the residence of Mr. Mercer stands. Brainard lodge members are possessed of the means for taking care of their project and they are enthusiastic for the plan that is in hand. The present temple has been outgrown and sooner or later the lodge with the commandery, the council and affiliated bodies must secure larger quarters.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, Hartford, formerly of New London are spending a few days with Mrs. Miller's mother, Mrs. Mary E. Kelley, 25 Pearl street.

The condition of Mrs. John P. Murphy, who has been seriously ill nine weeks at her home, Franklin street, is now much improved.

The police received complaint this afternoon that a salesman had visited the home of the complainant and that after he had departed a sum of money was found to be missing. Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh were assigned to the complaint and a half hour later they rounded up five canvassers for the sale of ironing boards and electrical furnishings. Hardly had the quintette been brought to the police station that a telephone report was received of the money had been found, it having been mislaid and not stolen.

It was revealed today that the crooks who burglarized the home of Mrs. Bertha Utley, Buddington road, Poquonoc Bridge, Sunday evening when $100 and two revolvers were stolen, are of the juvenile type for this morning a trio of youths were apprehended by State Police Officer Bernard Kenerson and arraigned before Judge Cornelius C. Costello in juvenile court. The boys admitted the burglary and were placed in the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

Miss Darlene Gurney, Ann street; Mrs. Bernard Glassman, 123 Colver street, and Mrs. Darrow Gurney and infant daughter, Ann street, were patients discharged today at Home Memorial hospital.

Another arrest was made today in connection with the recent robbery of the cottage of Ralph Patrick, Norwich, at Gardiner's farm, Groton, when State Police Officers Frank Schweikert and Arthur Whitmarsh, Groton barracks, took into custody Earl Smith, South road, Poquonoc Bridge. Smith was unable to furnish a surety on his bond of $1500 and was remanded to jail to await trial in the Groton town court next Monday morning.

Joseph Oddo, Eastern avenue, was arrigned in the Groton court yesterday and pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the Patrick cottage and he also admitted to having taken plunder of the approximate value of $2200. He turned over these goods to the state police officers upon being arrainged in court. Dodo implicated Smith in the robbery and his arrest followed. Dodo is also a prison at the county jail in default of bail of $1500 to his appearance at the next session of the superior court.

Franklin C. Wentworth, this city, and Miss Anna Yukas, East Lyme were married at Guilford last Saturday, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Frederick E. Snow, pastor of the Guilford First Congregational church.

August F. Krup, New Rochelle, N. Y., gunners' mate, third class and Miss Mabel L. Zinck, this city, were married at the parsonage of the First Baptist church the 2nd inst., by Rev. Chester E. Howe.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Max Johl, son of Herman Johl, Groton, and the president of the Max Pollack Co., and Miss Janet Lambert Pagter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Pagter, New Haven. Mr. Johl is employed in the New York office of the Max Pollack company.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

A corn crop of 3,013,390,000 bushels was estimated by the department of agriculture.

A programme for limiting the number of radio broadcasting stations was approved by Secretary Hoover.

President Coolidge recommended a brief cessation of business activities at 11 o'clock Armistice day.

Defense witnesses assailed many features of the government's air policies at the Mitchell courtmartial.

Tax reduction on motor vehicles and various other articles was approved by the house ways and means committee.

For seventy-seven years Edward Miller, a farmer living near Tivoli, Penn., has done his work and kept all appointments without carrying a watch. He relies entirely upon the sun as his timepiece, and can tell the time of the day to within a few minutes when the sun is shining. As to times when the sun is hidden by clouds, Mr. Miller said that this did not inconvenience him as he has no desire to go anywhere when it is cloudy or dreary.

DEMAND "PHILLIPS" MILK OF MAGNESIA

Accept only genuine "Phillips," the original Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years as an antacid, laxative, corrective.

25-cent bottles, also 50-cent bottles, contain directions—any drug store.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Armistice day—the anniversary of the end of hostilities in the World war.

Throughout a large part of the British empire the day is observed as Remembrance day.

In many places the day is observed with one minute of silent prayer as a tribute to the memory of heroes of the World war.

Reverence will be paid to the Unknown Soldier by President Coolidge who will visit Arlington National cemetery today a wreath on the tomb.

The annual Red Cross roll-call campaign for funds will begin throughout the United States today and will be continued until Thanksgiving.

King Victor Emmanuel III., of Italy, who has become little more than a figurehead through Premier Mussolini's usurpation of power, celebrates his 56th birthday today.

Law observance and enforcement is to be the chief topic of consideration at the 51st annual convention of the National W. C. T. U., which is to begin its sessions today in Detroit.

Problems of special importance to the future of the structural steel industry are to be discussed by the American Institute of Steel Construction at a three-day meeting to be opened today at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Old District Skule

How dear to our hearts are the memories of our schooldays. When fond recollections presents them to view.

Come and spend an enjoyable evening at the "Old District Skule." Hear Ezekiel Simpkins instruct his scholars in the 3 R's. See Daniel Webster, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Lydia Pinkham graduate. Ben Butler the village cut-up is a source of never ending laughter. The Spanking Machine caps the climax. Don't fail to see it.

One hundred hits on our well known citizens. Anything that's put on by The West End Community association deserves your patronage. You always get more than your money's worth.

Grotto Prepares for Circus

Another enthusiastic meeting of the committee in charge of the circus and freak city to be put on at the armory on McKinley avenue, Dec. 8, 9, 10, by the prophets of Nemrod Grotto of this city, was held Monday night at Grotto Hall.

All members of the general committee of which Prophet Britin is chairman and about fifty prophets who will serve as barkers and attendants were present. It was a rousing session, full of enthusiasm. Everything points toward a highly successful affair. The people of Norwich and vicinity are to have a real treat in the line of shows, and it is expected there will be record breaking crowds each night. The armory will be transformed into a big circus lot with the "big top" and "side shows" complete, also there will be hot dogs, peanuts, pop corn and lemonade, etc., to please the old and young. See Mary Wilson, the fat lady who tips the scales at 700, Martha the armless girl who sews and writes with her feet, also the 17 year old girl with a beautiful long beard, the envy of every man, and many other freaks too numerous to mention, every one an honest to goodness freak.

HERMAN STELZNER

In the line of vaudeville, there are acts which will make you sit up and take notice, all the acts have been on Keith's circuit, and are top notchers, a quartet of beautiful girls do a dancing act, that is full of grace and beauty. This one act alone, should draw a crowd. Another high class act is Alexander Patti, the world's greatest juggler and tumbler. He is sure to please you. The other acts are sure to please you also.

Watch the store windows for "Neva" the sleeping beauty, who is awake only long enough to take a little nourishment.

The opening night there will be a big parade led by Nemrod Grotto's Drum Corps. Some of the freaks will be in line. Prophet Harberg has this in charge so "nuff sed". Don't forget the dates Dec. 8, 9, 10 at the Armory on McKinley avenue. Dancing every evening from 8 to 11. The price of admission is only a thin little dime.

Phonofilms Continuous at The Palace

The DeForest phonofilms, which are a perfection of sound photography and its transmission, have created such a sensation at the Palace theatre that Manager McEvoy has decided to run continuous Armistice day performances today. The first show starts at 1:30 and the presentation of the DeForest triumph will continue until 10:30 o'clock tonight.

The Norwich Radio club, led by Jean Kieffer, the secretary, will attend the show in a body tonight, having postponed a meeting of the organization in order to do so. Prior to the start of the evening presentation of the sound pictures, which go on the screen at 2, 5 and 8 p. m., the Radio club members will be taken into the projection room of the Palace and the DeForest process of sound photography thoroughly explained by a representative of the famous inventor, known as "the father of radio broadcasting."

Dr. DeForest, who was a pioneer in research work for wireless telegraphy and simultaneous discoverer with Marconi, of the wireless method of communication, is the inventor of a device which made long distance telephony practical and also gave to the world the Audion tube which made radio broadcasting possible. He has combined the underlying principles of both these inventions in phonofilms, in addition to producing a process by which sound of every description is actually photographed on motion picture film while action also is being photographed on the same film surface.

His invention has been proclaimed one of the scientific marvels of history, even surpassing radio in importance as a contribution to the record of civilization's accomplishments.

Those who have heard and seen the phonofilms at the Palace have been charmed and mystified by the novelty and many have assumed that a phonograph was used. This is entirely in error, as no phonograph is used and the music and voices come from the film phonofilms engagement at the Palace itself. Today is the last day of the

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

Starting Thursday, there will be a completely new program at the Broadway theater. The popular prize night will take place Thursday.

The management has also been able to secure a special E. F. Keith vaudeville program to make a splendid ending of the Jubilee week attractions.

In keeping with its usual policy of providing the finest photoplay entertainment available for its patrons, the Broadway theater announces that Lionel Barrymore in A Man of Iron, will be its feature attraction for three days beginning tomorrow.

A Man of Iron, which was written especially for Mr. Barrymore by Lawrence Marston, is said to be one of the finest photoplays in which this distinguished star has appeared. The story, which is a tense drama of domestic strife, is laid in the stern background of a great steel mill, which has been developed to its tremendous proportions by Philip Durban (Lionel Barrymore), whose stern ruggedness has won him the title, A Man of Iron.

The climax of this drama is reached in a pistol duel that is unique in motion pictures. To disclose the exact nature of this life and death struggle for a man's honor would be to detract from the thrill that it will provide on the screen.

Isa Kremer Coming Here

No matter to what country a man immigrates he still thinks of home and boyhood days. The American boy from the west or south who comes east to make his home never forgets the scenes and joys of childhood.

Isa Kremer, the [illegible] Russian singer of ballads, who comes to the Broadway theatre, Monday, Nov. 16, for a concert, was giving a concert in St. Paul. She sang many Russian folk songs to the delight of the audience. At the close of the concert she was besieged by [illegible] Russians who heard her [illegible] years ago in their native land.

They told her that they had traveled many, many miles by sleigh to hear her, and what a great joy it was to have heard their beloved songs again. Everyone was glad he had made America his home, but it was certainly a real treat to hear in America, their "Iisitenka" as all Russians call Isa Kremer.

Moosup Well Child Conference

The mothers in Connecticut who have been taking advantage of the Well Child conferences have learned the value of giving their little children the right food. They have even had it brought to their notice that adult food, such as fried food, rich pastries, tea and coffee, partaken of by their little children, will keep them underweight, in a highly nervous condition, fretful and unmanageable.

It has also been called to their attention that they should watch for the development of the six year molar, as this is the best of the permanent teeth. By cleaning the teeth thoroughly each day and by choosing foods which are rich in vitamines and mineral elements such as are found in whole milk and in vegetables and by the use of whole bread which must be chewed thoroughly, children will soon develop sound teeth.

All these aids to health are valuable to mothers who live near any one of the 42 well child conferences. The next conference in Moosup will be held on Friday afternoon, Nov. 20th, in Franco-American hall, from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Breed Theater

Agnes Ayres, blonde and beautiful as ever, heads the double feature bill at the Breed theater today and tomorrow. The story is an adaptation of Frances Nordstrom's brilliant stage success which for more than a year has been the attraction at one of the leading theaters in London. Included in Miss Ayres' support are such well known and thoroughly capable players as Anders Randolf, Taylor Holmes, Hedda Hopper, Edward Earle, Gertrude Short, Sidney Bracy and George Irving.

On the Threshold, the Renaud Hoffman picturization of Wilbur Hall's Saturday Evening Post story, is the second feature and evinces a daring deviation from the beaten path of motion picture production. The story has been acclaimed one of the most unique ever filmed, and it is said Mr. Hoffman's novel execution results in a screen drama whose power lies largely in its simplicity. On the Threshold is interpreted by a remarkable cast, including Henry B. Walthall, Gladys Hulette, Willis Marks, Robert Gordon, Sam DeGrasse, Margaret Seddon and Charles Sellon.

After Woman Governor Of Texas

Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

Balked in an attempt to bring about a special session of the Legislature to investigate charges against Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, opponents of Texas woman Chief Executive have announced their intention of forcing the call. The declared intention of the session would be to seek impeachment of Governor Ferguson for failure to function as Governor and would also call for impeachment of three highway officials and the ousting of "Jim" Ferguson as "the real Governor."

Abbe Face Residence Sold

Through the Archa W. Coit Real Estate Agency, Mrs. Agnes C. Warwick has sold her fine modern residence on Bliss Place to Earl G. Taggert of this city. The property consists of an attractive seven room house, garage and large lot with vegetable and flower gardens. Mr. Taggart will occupy the property for his residence. Mrs. Warwick leaves Norwich to make her home with her sons in California.

There were 4,978 hospitals in the United States at the beginning of 1923 with beds for 373,475 patients at that time, or 3.5 beds for every thousand people in the United States.

POULTRY
PAN-A-CE-A
Puts hens in laying trim

You can feed as you will, care for as you may, but until your flock is in trim to lay, eggs will be scarce.

Just add Poultry Pan-a-ce-a with every 50 pounds of mash or one tablespoonful to every 20 hens once a day.

Then watch the change come over your flock, see the combs and wattles begin to turn red. Listen to the song, scratch and cackle.

That's a sign of getting ready for business.

Remember, you buy Pan-a-ce-a like this: for 100 hens, the 12-pound package; 60 hens, the 5-pound package; 200 hens, the 25-pound pail; 500 hens, the 100-pound drum.

You feed that package, all of it, on the more-eggs-or-no-pay way.

For Lice—Use Dr. Hess Louse Killer.

For Roupu—Use Dr. Hess Roup Tablets.

PERSHING'S SON AS A MOTOR MECHANIC IN PARIS GARAGE

PARIS, Nov. 5 (AP)—General Pershing's son Warren may be in training to follow the footsteps of his illustrious father, but he has shown a fancy for greasy overalls, the steering wheel of a motor car and the repair bench in the garage.

One of the conditions upon which the general permitted Warren to prolong his vacation period in Paris was that he work. He obtained a job in a garage and the motor repair bench at which he labored for six weeks is open to him should he return for another spell during his Switzerland school days. From that it is assumed that Warren was worth his salt as a mechanic.

It may be was General Pershing's war brought him no favors. The first day he got a mild "bawling out" from the foreman, who, seeing the boy tackling at a motor, woke him up with "Wot, you're not here to look, but to work." Warren was far from workshy, however, and the 16-year-old lad who arrived at 8:30 each morning was unrecognizably covered with dirt and grease less than two hours later.

When it became known that General Pershing's son was working in a motor shop, the premises were soon besieged by reporters and cameramen. It was impossible to get him to pose for his picture and most of the cameramen had to be contented with views of Warren's back or his legs sticking out from beneath a car. The onslaught came from the women writers. The repair pit was an ideal refuge.

"If you come out and talk to many of them coaxed.

I'm sorry, Miss, really, but my boss told me to work and I'm here to work."

Of all tasks at the shop Warren enjoyed none so much as getting the cars into the garage at 5:30 each evening. One after another he would roudoy mount and drive into their parking places—small cars, big ones and lorries.

Warren's boss promised to get him a real French driving license as a souvenir of his experience in a Paris garage.

In the matrimonial game the man who weds an heiress, expects to be beckmated.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

STOCK PRICES COLLAPSED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 (By the Associated Press)—With the volume of trading breaking all records in the history of the stock exchange, stock prices collapsed with dramatic suddenness today in reflection of speculative fears that the raising of the Boston Federal Reserve rediscount rate marked the beginning of the end of the "bull market" which has been under way, with few interruptions, for over two years. Total sales of 3,300,000 shares were nearly half a million above the previous year's record established on Nov. 4, and compared with 3,270,000, the previous record for all time, established on April 29, 1901.

Selling embraced practically the entire list of stocks with the extreme declines in the active issues ranging from 5 to 27 points. Closing quotations were generally at, or near the day's lowest figures. Motors and the hardest hit.

Despite the assurance of bankers that credit conditions in Boston and New York were wholly dissimilar, the stock market acted "nervous" from the start, opening quotations disclosing many losses of 1 to 4 points. The market rallied when the first batch of selling orders had been disposed of but the recovery which continued intermittently, through the morning was not very convincing.

Shortly after midday bear traders, sensing the uneasiness of operators on the long side, threw tens of thousands of shares of all kinds into the market, which was unable to absorb them except at material concessions in quoted values.

The rapidity of the decline and the seeming lack of support brought out an enormous volume of profit-taking and thousands of "stop loss" orders were touched off. A lowering of the call money rate temporarily checked the reaction in mid-afternoon but a fresh wave of selling broke out in the last hour with the market apparently demoralized at the close.

Stocks in which speculative excesses apparently have been carried to extremes were the hardest hit. Du Pont and Chrysler each broke about 27 points to 227 and 207, respectively, each closing within a few points of the bottom. Hudson fell over 16 points to 107 and then rallied to 110, and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe dropped 16 points to 204. U. S. Steel common, which established a record high for all time at 139 1-4, last Saturday, collapsed to 128 and then rallied to 130 5-8, where it was off nearly five points on the day.

American Can, American Car and Foundry, American Chicle, American Ice, American Locomotive, Baldwin, California Packing, Coca Cola, Fisher Body, General Electric, General Motors, Gulf States Steel, Jordan Motors, Mack Trucks, National Lead, Pathe, Pullman, Stewart Warner, United Cigar Stores, U. S. Realty, White Motors, and Woolworth were among the many issues to show net declines of 5 to 15 points.

Rails yielded in sympathy with the industrials although except in the case of Atlantic Coast Line, which dropped nearly 9 points to 215, the losses were on a much smaller scale. Oils developed a temporary burst of strength around midday, but support later was withdrawn and they yielded with the rest of the list.

Call money renewed at 5 per cent and then dropped to 4 1-2 closing at the low figure. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges displayed a somewhat better tone. Speculation in French francs quieted down, pending the French parliament's action on the new taxation program of Premier Painleve. Demand bills on Paris ruled slightly firmer just under 4.00 cents. Demand sterling held steady at $4.84 5-15, and other European rates showed only nominal changes.

TAFTVILLE

Miss Dorothy Hunt was the leader of the meeting of the Young Peoples Society of Christian Endeavor held evening at the Taftville Congregational church.

Miss Nellie Unsworth of North B street entertained a number of friends at supper Saturday evening in observance of her birthday.

John Lebreque, young son of Mrs. Mary Lebreque of Norwich avenue broke his leg while on his way to school Monday noon. He was taken to the William W. Backus hospital.

Mrs. Daniel McSheffery of Taftville has gone to Hartford for a few years.

At a meeting of Ponemah Council No. 24, Knights of Columbus, held Monday evening in the council rooms on Providence street, the first degree was conferred on four candidates, and two applications for membership were received. Grand Knight John J. Exley presided.

Ovila Paul of South A street shot a large gray fox recently.

Striking posters in conspicuous places about the town announce the opening of the American Red Cross membership roll call.

STUDY OF DISEASE THAT IS KILLING GROUSE

Superintendent John W. Titcomb of the state board of fisheries and game is distributing a circular of the Massachusetts fish and game protective association which gives information about the grouse situation which is very serious. Because of this the commission is asking hunters to send in the carcases of birds which they find dead from a disease which it is desired to study. The state commission is asking all sportsmen to go slow in the hunting of grouse and devote their efforts more to the woodcocks, pheasants and ducks for bird hunting.

The state commission will act as agent for the reception of specimens of the viscera or entire carcasses. It has been found very desirable to obtain entire carcasses where possible. If thoroughly rolled in fine salt so as to get it into the feathers, the birds can be mailed without spoiling. The post office department at Washington has issued an order permitting shipments of this character, originating in the New England states, to be mailed to Dr. Alfred O. Gross, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine. Care should be taken to label all specimens showing when and where obtained and by whom shipped, in accordance with instructions contained in the circular. This circular supersedes an earlier one which had been mailed to a limited number of persons who will receive this one.

Reports on two of the dead birds mailed to Dr. Gross by the state commission show that they are very badly infected with the disease which is proving so destructive throughout the country.

Toward the close of the season the commission will appreciate it very much if grouse hunters will make a report to the office as to the comparative abundance or scarcity of grouse in their hunting territory, indicating at the same time the towns in which they hunted.

GAVE HIS REPORT ON SCOUT EXECUTIVES' CONVENTION

A large number of the executive committee of the Norwich Scout council met at Scout headquarters Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock and took up routine matters. A committee of three consisting of E. A. Harris, Henry D. Johnson and Frederick A. Benton, the scout executive, was appointed to represent the scout council at the community chest meeting held by the Norwich Chamber of Commerce and the committee was instructed to support the community chest plan.

Scout Executive Benton read a detailed report of the recent convention of Scout executives in Vermont and gave the scouting objectives adopted by the executives at that conference for the next two years.

Banquet for Patrol Leaders

The local Scout patrol leaders who took the training course last spring will meet for a banquet Thursday night at the home of Scout Executive Frederick A. Benton. The second meeting of the Scoutmasters' training course will be held Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock at the Scout headquarters.

SUPERIOR COURT HEARING SUIT FOR BIG DAMAGES FOR AUTO ACCIDENT

The first of three suits in which aggregate damages of $40,000 are sought from Albert S. Hoffman of New Britain came up for trial in the superior court here Tuesday afternoon before Judge C. L. Avery and a jury. This is the suit of Mary Gunning of Groton for $10,000 damages because of injuries she received when riding in the automobile of Patrick F. Gunning which was in collision, Aug. 31, 1924, on the New London-Hartford turnpike with the defendant's machine which was operated by Raymond Hoffman.

The Gunning machine was operated at the time by Miss Florence Terry, who was under the instruction of Patrick F. Gunning, and it is alleged in the complaint that the accident was caused by the operator of the Hoffman car attempting to pass a car ahead of him while going up hill and on a curve resulting in running into the Gunning machine that was coming downhill in the opposite direction.

All the persons in the Gunning machine were injured and Miss Terry has brought suit for $20,000 and Mr. Gunning for $10,000.

The plaintiff in the suit on trial was a patient at the Backus hospital after the accident, suffering a broken collar bone, a deep cut in the upper lip and nose, all her lower teeth knocked out, cuts on the body, neck and face and ligaments and muscles of her leg twisted and wrenched.

Clerk George E. Parsons drew the following jury for the case when the trial opened Tuesday afternoon: Frank W. Brewster, Henry Gebrath, Norwich; James T. Shea, Charles Latham, Griswold; Otto D. Fuller, Lebanon; Jabez L. Bailey, Jerome Taylor, Bozrah; John Morrison, George W. Cole, Sprague; Paul Geist, Lisbon; Birdsey G. Palmer, George W. Hatch, Voluntown.

Attorneys Frank L. McGuire and C. Hadlai Hull are counsel for the plaintiff. Arthur M. Brown and Charles V. James for the defendant.

Civil Engineer George E. Pitcher was the first witness called by attorneys for the plaintiff explaining a plan of the road at the point of the accident which is about half a mile southerly from where the Airline railroad crosses the highway north of Colchester. On the curve, the witnesses testified, the cement roadway is 20 1-2 feet wide and 18 feet wide north and south of the curve. Mr. Pitcher also explained seven or eight pictures of the location which he had taken. His cross examination had not concluded when court adjourned for the day to continue the trial the next morning.

Verdict Against Klingon

At the morning session of court, a continuation of the trial of the case of John A. Moran, Norwich real estate agent, against Moses Klingon of Colchester was taken up, Mr. Moran suing for a 3 per cent commission for finding a customer for Mr. Klingon for the so-called Shields property on Broadway for $42,500.

Evidence for the defendant was concluded at the morning session of court by the testimony of Mortimer L. Klingon, son of the defendant, Frank A. Bill, Norwich real estate agent, and Anna L. Klingon.

Attorney E. W. Perkins argued a motion to have a verdict directed for the defendant, but the motion was denied by Judge Avery, after which the arguments were made before the jury, C. V. James opening for the plaintiff. He was followed by Attorney Perkins for the defendant and Attorney Arthur M. Brown closed for the defendant. Judge Avery gave the charge to the jury just before court adjourned for the noon recess until 2:30.

The jury came in with a verdict for the plaintiff at 3:10, reporting through Foreman Everett P. Barnes that he should recover damages of $1,140. The court accepted the verdict and then proceeded to the trial of the Gunning case.

CRIMINAL COMMON PLEAS DISPOSES OF CASES

Several cases were disposed of in the court of common pleas at New London, Tuesday after which Judge Charles B. Waller declared a recess until Nov. 23. The cases cleared the criminal docket with the exception of one which may be heard on the adjournment date.

A nolle was entered in the case of the state of Connecticut against George J. Croccichia charged with violating the motor vehicle laws.

Bond was called in in the case of the state against Charles Yankowski charged with violating the motor vehicle law. The defendant was upon a sea voyage and when he returns the case will be settled.

Upon the recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Charles B. Whittlesey, Philip Cormier, charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor in Lyme, was fined $100 flat.

The case of Samuel A. Siller, charged with non-support, was continued until Nov. 23.

The jury did not sit Tuesday and was excused.

The case of John Leman, charged with breach of the peace was nolled upon the payment of $25.

The case of Daniel Finn, Jr., was continued. Prosecuting Attorney Charles B. Whittlesey stated that Finn who was charged with non-support was now making weekly payments to his wife.

ARRESTED AS ACCOMPLICE IN GROTON THEFT CASE

Earl Smith of South road, Poquonoc Bridge, Groton, believed to be implicated in the theft of household goods from a cottage at Gardners Farm in Groton, was located and arrested Tuesday morning by State Policemen Frank Schwekert and Arthur Whitmarsh of the Groton barracks. Smith was locked up in the Groton jail being unable to furnish security on a bond of $1,500. His case will be heard by Judge C. E. Costello in Groton town court next Monday morning.

Smith was named as an accomplice Monday by Joseph Dodo of Eastern avenue New London, who pleaded guilty to a charge of entering the cottage owned by Ralph Patrick of Norwich, on the night of Nov. 2. Dodo admitted taking from the Patrick cottage goods valued at about $200 which were found Sunday night at his home in New London by Sergt. Clifford N. Gorgas and State Policemen Schwekert and Joseph Bobnick of the Groton barracks. Dodo was bound over to the January term of the superior court, his bond was fixed at $1,500, which he was unable to furnish and he is in jail.

SIX AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS TO BE GIVEN HEARING

Six automobile operators are to be given hearings here Friday, Nov. 20, at 1 p. m. in the common pleas court room before a representative of the motor vehicle department. The following is the list with the charges against them:

Austin DeWolf, R. F. D., No. 7, Norwich, evading responsibility. Clifford L. Norman, 842 Boswell avenue, Norwich, reckless driving. William Walden, R. F. D., No. 2, Fitchville, operating under influence. Vernon Herbert, Pawcatuck, defective brakes. Joseph Gelinas, 17 Church street, Moosup, complaint reckless driving. Tony Pizzitala, North Westchester, complaint in Rhode Island.

EMPLOYMENT SITUATION IN STATE NOT SO GOOD

The employment situation in the state is considerably worse than during September, according to the October report of the five free employment bureaus conducted by the state department of labor. With 5,062 applications for employment, these numbered 770 more than during the previous month. Of this increase in applicants, 137 were registered at the Hartford bureau, where a total of 1,434 applied for work.

Norwich had 513 applications.

BUSINESS AS USUAL ON ARMISTICE DAY

Business in Norwich will be as usual on Armistice Day. The banks will be open, the stores will have their usual hours and the manufacturing industries will operate as usual. There will be no observance of the day in this city.

Freeze Caught Cranberries

Norwich housewives were dismayed Tuesday to find that, as a result of the crop in some places having been caught in the big freeze, the price of cranberries had taken a jump to 25 cents the quart. Earlier in the season it was 15.

DR. JULES JORDAN SETS GARRISON POEM TO MUSIC

Dr. Jules Jordan, of Providence, a native of Windham and a member of a prominent musical family has again demonstrated his cleverness.

Recently Dr. Jordan set to music the three stanzas of the poem by Theodosia Garrison, "Pierrot at Fifty." How much of this compliment was appreciated is indicated by the following letter. Dr. Jordan by the way, entitled the composition "Pierrot at Fifty—by Jules Jordan at 75. Nov. 10th, 1925."

Short Hills, N. J.,
Sunday, Nov. 1, 1925.

My dear Dr. Jordan: Thank you for your charming song and for the pretty compliment you pay me in making Pierrot your birthday present to your friends.

I am glad that you have placed me among them.

Strangely enough, just as your letter arrived I was giving my father his seventy-eighth birthday party and your song delighted us all.

May I offer you my very best wishes and my hope that your birthday may be full of happiness and music and content.

Believe me, my dear Dr. Jordan,
Most cordially yours,
THEODOSIA FAULKS.

MEMORIAL LECTURE FOR REV. JOSEPH H. SELDEN

The first annual lecture in remembrance of the late Rev. Dr. Joseph Henry Selden of this city is to be given at Connecticut college on Friday evening by Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y., who will speak upon Imagination.

Dr. Selden, whose early home was in Norwich, after a severe illness from which he never fully recovered, was obliged to give up the pastorate and return to his home. After a period of rest he was able, however, to assist the United Church in Norwich, when for 18 months it was without a pastor. He also served as chairman of the Red Cross during the war. He died on Oct. 9, 1923.

Dr. Cadman is a preacher of international reputation. He has recently returned from Stockholm, Sweden, where as president of the Federal Council of Protestant Churches, he represented 45,000,000 church members at the World Conference of Protestant churches a meeting at which for the first time in history all Protestant denominations gathered to discuss religious problems. He spoke last week at the Unitarian conference on Tuesday at the laying of the cornerstone of the cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York.

Dr. Cadman is author of several books, is a member of the Brooklyn Academy of Arts and Sciences and a trustee of various institutions.

GROTON SCHOOL TAX FIRST IN FOUR YEARS

The first school tax in four years will be levied in the eighth school district, Eastern Point, this year. The district will be taxed for the next three years, to pay the indebtedness incurred by the erection of a second story on the Eastern Point school.

Construction of the new second story, estimated at about $25,000 cost, was completed and opened for use Monday. However, there are still a few minor construction details which will require attention for several days, but which will not interfere with holding sessions in the new classrooms.

Classes at the school have been held as usual since the beginning of the fall term in the other rooms of the building. The addition of the upper story provides two more classrooms and a large room for an auditorium which may be converted into two class rooms by the erection of a partition.

MISS ELOISE SMITH WINS PLAY PRIZE AT WELLESLEY

At Wellesley college, Miss Eloise Smith of Norwich, Conn., has won a prize of $50 offered by The Barnswallows for the best one-act play submitted. The play, "Horns of the Moon," is being coached by the author, and will be given, with three other plays, for the entertainment of the annual meeting of the College Governments association, held at Wellesley this week.

The other plays to be given include Dunsany's "Golden Doom" and a recently translated French farce, "The Pie and the Tart."

Miss Smith, a very gifted young writer, is the elder daughter of Mrs. Smith and the late Leonard O. Smith, of Oldelms, Washington street.

THREE IMPORTANT TOPICS FOR NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE

Power, agriculture and marketing are to be the three main topics for the New England conference that is to be held at Worcester, Nov. 12-13, one entire session being devoted to each of these major New England problems.

The chief importance of the Worcester meeting lies in its functions as a creative body. It will not only bring into being the New England Conference, the common court of assembly of New England organizations, but it will also create the permanent body through which the will of the New England Conference will find its ultimate expression. This body will be the New England Council.

This council will be a body of 72 men—twelve from each of the six New England states, to be chosen by the delegates from each state at Worcester. Its creation will give New England, for the first time in its history, a representative and co-ordinated group of tried and proved men.

The conference programme will be as follows:

Thursday morning, Nov. 12—Arrival at Worcester, take up hotel reservations; registration at Conference headquarters, Hotel Bancroft; get acquainted; meeting of governors; joint committee, 10.30.

Thursday noon—Luncheon.

Thursday afternoon, 1.45 — New England Conference called to order by John S. Lawrence, chairman, Governors' Joint committee; address by His Excellency, Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts; appointment of committee on organization; session topic: Power: A New England Problem, chairman, Samuel Ferguson, president, Hartford Electric Light Co., Hartford, Conn.; chairman's address: Mr. Ferguson; New England Power in Relation to Wages and Standard of Living, Owen D. Young, chairman of the board, The General Electric Co.; Why We Have Entered the New England Power Field, Martin J. Insull, president, Middle West Utilities Co., Chicago, Ill.; Electric Power from the Tides, Dexter Cooper, author of the Passamaquoddy Project; discussion, questions, answers.

Thursday evening, 8.00—Report of committee on organization; Future of the New England Conference; five-minute talks by delegates who arrange for time in advance.

Thursday evening, 9.00 —Meetings of state delegations to elect members (13 from each state) of the New England Council.

Friday morning, 8.00—Agricultural breakfast—New England Style.

Friday morning, 9.00—Session topic, Agriculture: A New England Problem, chairman, Horace A. Moses, president of the Eastern States League, Springfield, Mass.; chairman's address: Mr. Moses; Co-operative Marketing, Joseph W. Alsop, president, Connecticut Valley Tobacco Growers' Association; The Package Idea Applied to Selling Farm Products, Julian A. Dimock, manager Dimock Orchard Seed Potato Corporation, East Cornith, Vt.; The Aroostook Potato and Other Profitable Crops in New England, Charles M. White, chief bureau of markets, Department of Agriculture, Augusta, Me. The Commission Man's Viewpoint in Relation to New England Agriculture, A. E. Briggs, secretary of Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange; discussions, questions, answers.

Friday noon—Luncheon.

Friday afternoon, 2.00 p. m. Session topic: Marketing: A New England Problem, chairman Louis K. Liggett, president, United Drug Co., Boston; chairman's address: Mr. Liggett; address by Hon. Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce of the United States; Selling New England Products in New England, Louis E. Kirstein, vice president, Wm. Filene's Sons Company, Boston; Sound Marketing as a Basis of Credit, Frederick A. Carroll, vice president, National Shawmut Bank, Boston; The Farmer's Willingness and Ability to Co-operate, Roy D. Hunter, chairman, executive committee, Eastern States Exchange, West Claremont, N. H.; Marketing New England's Recreational Facilities, Arthur G. Staples, editor, The Lewiston Journal, Lewiston, Me.; Advertising As an Aid to Marketing New England Products, P. F. O'Keefe, president, P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston; discussion, questions, answers.

C. L. CLASS MEETING HELD AT METHODIST PARSONAGE

The Costello Lippitt class of Trinity Methodist church met Monday evening with Mrs. J. Harlow Graham, at the parsonage on Williams street. There were fifteen present, the president, Mrs. Andrew Crowe, presiding.

The usual business session was held and it was planned that the December meeting should be a Christmas party, to be held at the home of Edwin Floyd, at East Great Plain. At this time each member is to bring a toy and these will be sent to Silver Lake Settlement, Fall River.

Later in the evening Mrs. Graham served sandwiches, olives, cake and cocoa.

SIX NORWICH EMPLOYES TO GET W. U. T. SALARY RAISE

Although they have been expecting the good news since October 1st, the six employes of the Western Union Telegraph company in the Norwich office were well pleased Tuesday to read that the 7 per cent. increase in salary is to go into effect January 1. Manager C. Edward Case stated on Tuesday evening that no formal announcement of the salary raise had been received by him yet.

The company plans to distribute $3,000,000 in salary increases based on merit to its land-line employes earning less than $3,000 a year. The increases, which are equal to 7 per cent. of the aggregate salary ratings of the eligible employes, will become effective January 1.

The action announced is regarded in the financial district as a partial answer to the question, "What will the Western Union do with its surplus profits?" The earnings of the company have been increasing steadily in spite of threatened competition from air mail and wireless.

The increase has come from the reduction of the time required to transmit a message.

PRINCE PAUL FINALLY ARRIVED AT WEBSTER

Prince Paul, son of King Constantine of Greece finally arrived in Webster, Mass., Monday. Although hard luck with his automobile prevented his getting to th ededication service he made the trip of 70 miles from Hartford when a delegation waited on him at Hartford last Sunday night, and requested that he make the trip in view of the great interest displayed in his expected visit.

It was 12.20 Monday morning when he appeared and was greeted at the Webster Lake hotel, where a banquet had been in progress since late Sunday afternoon, following the dedication of the Greek Orthodox church. As most of the Norwich Greeks had returned home they missed the pleasure of seeing the Prince.

HENRY B. SELDEN'S ETCHINGS IN PHILADELPHIA EXHIBIT

Prof. Henry Bill Selden, of Connecticut college, son of Mrs. Joseph H. Selden, of Norwich, is showing a group of Venetian etchings at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts. The etchings were made the past summer while the artist was in Italy.

BAPTIST WOMEN HELD MISSIONARY MEETING

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Circle of the First Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. L. A. Hurlbutt, on Williams street Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting was opened by president Mrs. Frank Lathrop, reading from John, and offering a prayer of thanksgiving. The hymn "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me," was sung.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. William Gilchrist and papers were read by the following: Mrs. E. LaRue Bliven, Mrs. George Rathbun, Mrs. Herbert Willey, Mrs. Tyler and Mrs. Frank Church. The meeting closed with the benediction.

Price of Worsteds Advanced

Price advances were announced Monday on both men's and women's wear worsteds by the American Woolen company, with mills in Norwich and Moosup. The increases range from 2 to 10 cents per yard, but most of them are between 5 and 7 1-2 cents per yard. The repricing affects the entire staple and fancy worsted lines of the company, the fabrics being those of departments 1, 2, 4 and 7. The advance was expected by woolen trade factors, owing to the improved market position of worsteds and the stronger raw wool market.

CUMMINGS RESIGNS FROM DEM. NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Had Been National Committeeman From Connecticut Since 1900—Mr. Cummings Gives Personal and Professional Affairs as the Reason For Resignation—Spellacy To Be Elected to Succeed Cummings on National Committee—Mayor David E. Fitzgerald Slated as Successor of Edmund M. Yeomans as Chairman of the State Central Committee.

STAMFORD, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, former chairman of the democratic party and a national committeeman from Connecticut since 1900 has resigned from the latter position. His resignation was sent to Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the party in Washington, and to Edward M. Yeomans, chairman of the democratic state central committee.

Mr. Cummings in letters addressed to Mr. Shaver and Mr. Yeomans, and made public here late today, stated that "My personal and professional affairs are of such a character that I cannot continue in my present position." Mr. Cummings said he did not wish his friends to gain the impression from his letters that he was losing interest in public affairs or that he was growing indifferent to the welfare of his party. He feels, his letters said, that he has "rendered all the committee service that can be expected of me and that whatever I am able to do in the general interest had better be done along other lines."

A meeting of the democratic state central committee will be held in New Haven tomorrow afternoon and it was reported here tonight that Thomas J. Spellacy, of Hartford, will be elected to the national committee to succeed Mr. Cummings, and that Mayor David E. Fitzgerald, of New Haven will be elected chairman of the state central committee to succeed Edward M. Yeomans, who has been appointed a superior court judge and who will take office in February.

Mr. Cummings' letter to Chairman Shaver follows:

"Dear Mr. Shaver: I hereby tender my resignation as a member of the democratic national committee to take effect November 30, 1925. I am sending a copy of this letter to Hon. Edward M. Yeomans, chairman of the democratic state central committee of Connecticut so that he may arrange for proper action upon the part of that committee for the appointment of my successor. Respectfully yours,

"HOMER S. CUMMINGS."

The letter from Mr. Cummings to Edward M. Yeomans follows:

"Dear Mr. Yeomans: Enclosed you will find a copy of a letter I have sent to Hon. Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee, tendering my resignation to take effect November 30, 1925. As it is the function of the democratic state committee to fill the vacancy thus created, I suggest you lay the matter before that committee at its meeting to be held Thursday of this week.

"A word as to the reason for my resignation may not be inappropriate. I have been a member of the democratic national committee since 1900. During the period covered by this long service, I have been vice chairman as well as chairman of the national organization. I have acted as a member of the executive committee and have served upon many other sub-committees. My personal and professional affairs are of such a character that I cannot continue in my present position.

"Please do not gather the impression that I have lost interest in public affairs or that I am the least indifferent to the welfare of our party. I feel, however, that I have rendered all of the committee service that can be expected of me and that whatever I am able to do in the general interest had better be done along other lines.

"I hope that my friends and colleagues and the party generally, will feel that I am entitled to a political vacation. I cannot close this letter without thanking you and the committee and the faithful friends of the party throughout the state for many years of whole hearted co-operation. With every good wish. Faithfully yours,

"HOMER S. CUMMINGS."

Mr. Cummings stated that he will not attend the meeting of the democratic state central committee in New Haven tomorrow.

Mr. Cummings has been elected every four years as national committeeman since 1900 and he held the position of vice chairman of the party from 1913 until 1919. In 1919 and 1920 he was national chairman of the party and served as a member of the arrangements committee for three national conventions. Since 1912 he has been a member of the executive committee and during the last convention in New York served as chairman of the resolutions committee.

Mr. Cummings made what is said to be his greatest speech during the San Francisco convention, where he acted as chairman, in his plea for the league of nations.

He was one of the closest friends of the late Woodrow Wilson and one of the few men in this section of the country advocating his nomination for the presidency at the Baltimore convention. The late president twice offered Mr. Cummings cabinet positions during his term of office, besides several other responsible appointments.

Mr. Cummings is a graduate of Yale in the class of 1891 and was given his LL. B degree there in 1893. He served as mayor of Stamford for three terms, 1900-1901, 1901-1902, and 1904-1906, and was corporation counsel from 1908 to 1912. He was a delegate at large to the democratic national convention in 1900 and 1904. Mr. Cummings was candidate for congress in 1902 and for United States senator in 1916.

SPELLACY WOULD FEEL HONORED BY POSITION

HARTFORD, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—Whenasked tonight whether he was a candidate for Mr. Cummings' place on the national committee, Mr. Spellacy said:

"I would deem it a very high honor to represent Connecticut on the democratic national committee. I would not however, care to enter any contest for the position. If the democratic state central committee feels that my acquaintance and national experience qualify me for this most important place, I certainly would not decline to accept the appointment."

Possible resignations to follow "unsatisfactory" result of the balloting tomorrow were outlined by members of the state central committee. Mrs. Fannie K. Tyler, of Haddam, member from the thirty fourth district, who sent in her resignation some months ago, but later withdrew at the request of Secretary Lynch said tonight that the result of the meeting tomorrow might determine whether or not she would remain on the committee.

Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, of Columbia, state vice chairman, outlined her attitude as one of "standing pat for the best interests of the democratic party." She said, however, that she did not care to outline her future actions, but intimated that tomorrow's meeting might affect those.

There are now three vacancies on the committee in addition to the resignations of Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees, of Greenwich, twenty-seventh district, and Miss Adele Murray, of Berlin, fifth, which will be acted upon tomorrow, it is expected.

The existing vacancies are in the second district, caused by the death of Charles J. Dillon, of this city, which may be filled by the election of his son, Alderman James C. E. Dillon; eighth, caused by the resignation of Mrs. Clara Brown, of New Haven and in the twenty fourth, caused by the resignation of Mrs. Annie Sanford, of Redding.

Leaders of the disaffected group in the party tonight were reluctant to say whether there was dissatisfaction with the work of Fred P. Holt, of this city, as treasurer of the organization. There is now a deficit of a little less than $5,000 in the finances of the state committee, and there has been considerable discussion of this deficit from time to time in the party meetings.

Thomas J. Spellacy has been actively in the political arena since 1906 when he was the successful candidate for state senator from the third district. He is a native of this city, having been born here March 6, 1880. He attended the local schools and Holy Cross college and took the law course at Georgetown university. After graduation he worked for some time on the Hartford Telegram before beginning the practice of law.

Mr. Spellacy was twice in the state senate from the third district, being elected the second time in 1910. He had previously been beaten in 1906 for the nomination by Herman P. Koppelmann. He was the unsuccessful democratic candidate for mayor of Hartford in 1912, when opposed by Colonel Louis R. Cheney. In 1918 he was defeated for the governorship by former Governor Holcomb and was also defeated for election as United States senator in 1922 by Senator McLean. He was at one time U. S. district attorney for Connecticut and was assistant attorney general during the Wilson administration.

RHINELANDER RELATES HIS COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 11—Speaking with a perceptible halt in his voice, but perfectly self composed, Leonard Kip Rhinelander today began a recital of his courtship and marriage of Alice Beatrice Jones, the daughter of a negro coachman.

As he took the witness stand to testify in his own behalf in his suit for annulment of the marriage on the ground that his wife had deceived him into believing her white, the young son of an aristocratic family faced the crowded courtroom calmly. He told of intimate matters without emotion. He spoke slowly, his words coming jerkily and occasionally betrayed symptoms of the stammering which his counsel has contended made him the victim of an inferiority complex that prevented his developing mature judgment.

Only once did he speak sharply. That was when he was asked about the letters read in court Monday in which Mrs. Rhinelander spoke of intimate details of their life. "I did not deliver them personally into the hands of my lawyers," he said, "I left them in the house."

"We found them," interjected Isaac M. Mills, his counsel, and the examination continued along other lines.

Young Rhinelander told of how he became acquainted by chance with Grace Jones and how he met Alice later through her sister in September 1921, when he was 18 years old. He told how the friendship ripened, until he was calling on his future wife at least four times a week.

One night, he testified, they went to New York to see a play, and he learned that Alice was to spend the night at the Hotel Marie Antoinette.

"I asked her if I might accompany her," he said, "she refused at first, but after some persuasion she agreed."

They registered at the hotel under the name of "Mr. and Mrs. James Smith of Rye," he said and they remained at the hotel for a week. In 1922 they again went to the same hotel, registered under the same name and stayed two weeks.

It was while on this latter trip that an attorney for Philip Rhinelander, his father, discovered the couple and took young Rhinelander to Atlantic City. Ten days later, he said, he got a telegram saying Alice was ill and he returned to see her in New Rochelle.

He identified many letters he had received from his wife in which she expressed her love for him.

He was still under direct examination, concerning a trip to Bermuda made at his father's direction, when court adjourned for the day.

Mrs. Rhinelander watched her husband closely during his testimony, but no sign of recognition passed between them.

LIGHTSHIP IN VINEYARD SOUND RAMMED AND SUNK

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Nov. 11—A radio message picked up here tonight said that the Danish steamer M. C. Holm, bound from Boston to New York, rammed and sunk the Nantucket lightship in Vineyard sound at 11:55 tonight. The message said that three men of the lightship had been rescued.

May Seize Ward Liner Orizoba as Rum Ship

Such Recommendation Made by New York Custom Officials—Charge Would Be Transporting Liquor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Seizure of the Ward Line steamship Orizoba, worth more than $1,500,000, the government as a rum runner, was recommended by customs officials today. The recommendation followed seizure after a running gun battle in the East River of a rum laden speed boat said to have been engaged in transporting liquor from the Orizoba to some points along the shore.

Numerous reports of liquor coming into this city from Havana has been received by the authorities and when the Orizoba arrived yesterday from Cuba customs men were stationed to watch the ship.

The special service squad of customs inspectors, observing a launch alongside the liner, gave chase and fired more than 40 shots. They declared they were fired on in return. Two men leaped into the water as the launch approached the dock and the other leaped to the dock. All made their escape. One hundred demijohns of rum were seized on the craft.

Assistant Solicitor of Customs Barnes immediately recommended to Federal Attorney Buckner that the Orizaba be seized. If proceedings are instituted against the ship, it will be the first time the government has sought to libel so large a steamship for a prohibition law violation.

William Imlay, general manager of the Ward line, and Samuel McElroy, chief of police of the line, denied official knowledge of the smuggling.

CHARGED WITH BRIBING COAST GUARD OFFICER

BOSTON, Nov. 11—Charged with bribing a coast guard officer, Charles R. Bentley and Abel Doucette, both of Gloucester, pleaded not guilty today when they were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Denney in the federal court. The men were held in $5,000 bail for a later hearing.

The alleged bribe was given to Boatswain William J. Mazzone, commander of the coast guard patrol boat 179 early today when the government craft discovered the men in motor boat C1465 about 22 miles off Thatcher's Light. The motor boat, government officers said, carried 200 cases of liquor and was headed for Gloucester.

Boatswain Mazzone testified that the alleged rum runner was too far out of United States waters for him to take an action, so he followed her on the patrol boat. Soon, he said, the motor boat drew alongside and the men offered him $200 to quit following their craft.

Mazzone testified that he took the money and changed the patrol boat's course. He kept the alleged rum runner in sight, however and when that craft was inside the three mile limit, he seized the boat, arrested Bentley and Doucette and brought them to this city.

FOUR MEN HELD FOR THEFT OF AUTOMOBILE

STAMFORD, Nov. 11—Four New York men are being held by the Stamford police and an automobile in which they were riding and which is believed by the police to have been stolen in Danbury, was seized here today. The men gave their names as Clarence F. Kay, Frank Minnenti, Nicholas Rinaldi and Leo Burke, all of the Bronx, N. Y.

The men claim that they went from New York to Danbury with another man in the machine, that he left them there and that when they became tired of waiting they started back towards New York. A motorcycle policeman who gave chase said the men were driving at 60 miles an hour. Their story is being investigated.

SIX PERSONS OVERCOME BY COAL GAS IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11—A. P.)—Six persons, four children and two women, overcome by coal gas in the home of Mrs. Clara Harris at 104 Haven street this morning, were resting comfortably in hospitals here tonight and it was said that they would recover.

Mrs. Harris and her four children, two of whom are girls under the age of two years, were taken to St. Raphael's hospital while Mrs. Ola Harris, a sister-in-law, was taken to New Haven hospital.

Investigation showed that Mrs. Clara Harris had built a new coal fire this morning and had neglected to open a damper of the stove. The coal gas backed into the room and overcome the women and children who had returned to their beds.

The unconscious forms of the six were found by a laundryman who found the kitchen door open and went in to investigate the strong smell of coal gas.

To Promote Welfare Of New England

James L. Case, R. W. Perkins and Lucius Briggs To Be Among the 1,200 Delegates at Worcester.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Representatives of several hundred agricultural industrial and commercial organizations in the New England states were in this city tonight for the opening two day conference called by a joint committee appointed by the New England governors. Formation of a permanent conference representative of New England interests and capable of dealing with New England problems was set as one of the main objectives of the meeting.

The present step toward a united New England front in matters affecting this section of the country owed its origin to a conversation of six state executives attending the governors' conference at Poland Spring, Me., last July. As a result of that meeting the governors' committee of three members from each state was appointed with John S. Lawrence of Boston as chairman. Tomorrow night the state delegations here will meet, each to name twelve members of the permanent New England council. At other sessions tomorrow and Friday, New England problems, with agriculture, power and marketing as the three outstanding themes will be discussed by the delegates.

The first session, opening at noon tomorrow, will be devoted to a discussion of the power situation in the United States. Samuel Ferguson of Hartford, Conn., president of the Hartford Electric Light company, will preside and the principal speakers will be Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of General Electric company, and Martin J. Insull of Chicago, president of the Middle West Utilities company, which recently acquired extensive water power rights and properties in northern New England.

Friday's sessions will be given over to agriculture and marketing of New England products.

The proposed permanent New England conference, to be formed as a result of these meetings, will be open to all agricultural associations, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, manufacturers' associations and other trade bodies of the section. It is also planned to admit traffic clubs, hotel, advertising and real estate men's associations, and all other bodies representing economic interests in any New England state.

The council of 72 members to be selected by the state delegations tomorrow night will constitute, it is planned, a New England economic council, which will maintain a general view of New England conditions, submit proposals to the constituent organizations for their consideration and opinion, take the initiative in bringing about coordination of the activities of existing organizations and be the governing body for the conference itself. While the conference will meet once a year, the council will hold more frequent meetings, and each group of 12 will also serve as a council within its own state. The group of 72 will meet within thirty days after adjournment of the two day conference to organize and map out the program of the New England council.

Approximately 1,200 delegates are expected to attend the sessions opening tomorrow.

ARMISTICE DAY EXERCISES WERE REVERENT AND SOMBER

Revelry That Marked the Day Seven Years Ago Was Absent—President Coolidge Placed a Wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery—Impressive Ceremony at Burial Place of War-Time President Wilson—In Boston the Spectators Watched the Parade in Dead Silence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—In striking contrast with the delirious rejoicing seven years ago over cessation of World war hostilities, the capital today quitely observed Armistice day with impressive ceremonies at the Unknown Soldier's tomb in Arlington cemetery and at Washington Cathedral, burial place of Woodrow Wilson, the war time president.

At 11 o'clock, as President Coolidge was placing a wreath on the sarcophagus at Arlington, governmental activities were suspended for a minute or two while officials and clerks joined in a tribute of silence. In the city generally, however, little attention was paid to the suggestion of the president for a brief period of silence, and on the streets and in businesses houses there was practically no lull in activities.

On his motor trip to Arlington cemetery the president was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary Davis of the war department and Secretary Wilbur. As he advanced on foot to the tomb promptly at 11 o'clock the hour the Armistice became effective, the president was flanked by the two secretaries. They assisted him in placing a large wreath on the tomb, then the three backed away and stood for a moment in silence with heads bared.

A moment later Mrs. Coolidge went to the marble tomb, placing upon it a long stemmed white rose. The entire ceremony occupied not more than three minutes and was devoid of speechmaking. As automobiles in the presidential party drew near the tomb, a 21 gun salute was fired by a Fort Myer artillery battery, and a band played "The Star Spangled Banner" just before the wreath laying ceremony took place.

OBSERVANCE O FARMISTICE DAY IN GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—Reverence, not revelry, marked the commemoration of Armistice day in Great Britain. A two minutes silence was observed with the established ceremonial by the members of the royal family, the peers and the people, thronged around Whitehall Cenotaph in the morning, and similar solemnity in large measure characterized the whole day, which in London ended with an impressive service of remembrance in Albert Hall, where other Armistice anniversaries had been brought to a close with riotous balls.

Instead of the conspicuous gaiety and hysterical joy of the first Armistice day, which for some years had been the accepted method of celebration in London and other places, the efforts of patriotic, ex-service and church organizations were to a degree successful in restoring to the occasion its significance as one for devotion to the memory of the fallen.

The Prince of Wales spent part of the afternoon with six hundred crippled veterans, who were his guests at the Royal Riding academy in the rear of Buckingham Palace, and tonight he attended a Masonic meeting and dinner.

CEREMONIES IN PARIS MARKING ARMISTICE DAY

PARIS, Nov. 11—From war-torn Syria and Morocco to the Arc de Triomphe in Paris, France and Frenchmen everywhere honored the memory of the unknown soldier today. More than 50,000 Parisians crowded the streets around the arch for the morning ceremonies. The American Legion joined the British Legion in the afternoon, paraded in the Champs Elysees and laid wreaths on the tomb in the presence of General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, who lighted the flame of remembrance.

Throughout the provinces the day was religiously observed, but Paris was a little gloomy over the financial and cabinet crisis.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE NAT'L RADIO CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—A. P.)—A report containing broad recommendations for the solution of major problems in every branch of radio endeavor was adopted at the concluding session today of the fourth national radio conference.

Containing recommendations for legislation covering radio regulations, for sharply reducing the present number of broadcasting stations to relieve congestion and for the elimination of interfering elements in radio reception, the report was declared by Secretary Hoover, chairman of the conference, to be the most far-reaching and constructive yet made.

He indicated that the proposals in the report for solution of various problems would become in a general way, the temporary policy of his department in its regulation of radio communication, but expressed doubt as to the wisdom of placing such broad powers as were outlined in the hands of any one governmental office.

One of the most important actions of the conference, in Secretary Hoover's opinion, was its declaration that service to the radio listener should be the prime consideration in all efforts of the industry and in its regulation. He said no other industry had been brought up from its infancy with such an attitude.

Under the resolutions adopted, no major alteration will be made in present wave length assignments, and minor changes will be confined almost entirely to the field outside the broadcasting band.

The legislative recommendations provided that administration of all radio legislation be vested in the secretary of commerce, with authority to appoint such advisory boards and committees he might deem necessary; that the doctrine of free speech be held inviolate; that monopoly in the industry be prohibited and that broadcasting licenses be granted only to those who, in the opinion of the secretary, would render beneficial service to the public or contribute to the development of the art.

The president, under the program, would be given authority to commandeer or discontinue all broadcasting stations in time of national emergency, and decisions of the secretary of commerce could be appealed to the courts; station call letters would be recognized by law as property rights during the life of broadcasting licenses, which the secretary could suspend or revoke when their holders had not lived up to terms.

ONE JUROR LACKING FOR OLYMPIA MACRI TRIAL

LITCHFIELD, Conn., Nov. 11—(A. P.)—Only one seat in the jury box in Litchfield county superior court before which will be enacted the second trial of Olympia Macri, of New Haven, for killing her alleged betrayer, John Bagnano, remained to be filled when court adjourned today, the seventh court day of the re-trial.

Four veniremen of the 36 examined today qualified as jurors. As chosen, each was excused to return home until Friday morning. The twelfth juror is expected to be selected from sixty veniremen summoned for tomorrow.

State's Attorney Aaron A. Alling, informed the court that he would be ready to start presentation of the state's case as soon as the jury box is filled. Judge George E. Hinman, however was reluctant to have witnesses held over pending the selection of the last juror and said that opening of the trial proper would be deferred until Friday morning, no matter at what time the twelfth man is selected tomorrow.

As the state and defense enter probably the last day of the contest for jurors who will not be partial to either side, the defense will lead the state in the number of peremptory challenges exercised. Th count at th end of today's session was: Challenged by the defense 22, and the state 20. Of the 128 veniremen who have been examined 75 were excused by the court, the majority because of fixed opinions.

HOW ARMISTICE DAY WAS OBSERVED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—Varied observances of differing trend marked Boston's commemoration of the Armistice of 1918 today. The booming of the 21 guns of the national salute echoed away into a period of silence at 11 in the forenoon when the city halted its work for the space of a minute. Veterans organizations held their observance in the morning on the Common. Speakers varied their themes from pleas for peace to the honoring of the memory of the war dead, from the need for maintaining of American ideals to a militant call for preparedness. In the afternoon a two mile "parade for peace" under the auspices of the Federation of Greater Boston churches, moved through lanes of thousands of watchers and filed past the state house where Governor Alvan T. Fuller and representatives of four veterans' organizations reviewed the procession.

Despite the heated controversy which plans for the parade aroused and which was featured by charges that it would include objectionable radical or pacifist demonstrations, it passed without incident. It was a somber procession, almost funereal. Nowhere did the United States or navy uniform appear. In it rode disabled veterans. Of these were scores and scores of placards and banners urging peace. Women and girls in long lines outnumbered all other marchers. In the blue sky to the southward a bit of rainbow blazed in a patch of cloud throughout the parade.

A few of the placards were outspoken. The socialist party of Boston announced "we stood for peace in 1917 and we stand for peace today." Another banner stated "No nation ever declared war against us." Others said "There never was a good war;" "Above all nations humanity;" "Thou shalt not kill." Others urged joining the league of nations and the world court.

The spectators watched the parade in dead silence.

But Francis J. Good, commander of the Massachusetts department of the American Legion, said afterward that neither he nor any of the other veterans representatives reviewing the parade saw in it anything seditious.

Earlier, at the veteran observance Commander Good declared "our own duty is to perpetuate the purity of our American democracy. Governor Alvan T. Fuller deplored the existence of extremists in the peace movement and urged that the middle ground be taken by veterans as well as the general public—maintenance of defensive forces and spirit which will send men to battle, but doing everything possible to keep peace.

General Hanson E. Ely, president of the War college in Washington, urged the honoring of the war dead and declared that "reasonable preparedness is the only road to peace." Mayor William E. Dever of Chicago, insisted that Armistice day is "the veterans' day alone and declared that "as yet no power mankind knows of can guarantee peace in the days to come."

Mayor James M. Curley declined to review the peace parade, terming it pacifist and unpatriotic.

OFFERING OF STOCK FOR FOX THEATRES CORPORATION

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The largest individual stock offering for a theatrical enterprise in the history of Wall street, involving the sale of $12,000,000 class A common shares for the newly formed Fox Theatres Corporation, was announced tonight. Formal offering of stock will be made within a few days through a syndicate headed by Taylor, Thorne & Co. The shares will be priced at $20 each.

The Fox Theatres Corporation was recently formed by William Fox and his associates to acquire their moving picture houses and other real estate holdings. It is independent of the Fox Film Corporation, the producing enterprise.

Subscriptions for the new stock received, the syndicate managers announced, are double the amount of the offering and will make it necessary to cut down allotments.

WILLIMANTIC

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR SEVENTH ARMISTICE DAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 11—A community observance of Armistice day was carried out at Lincoln square Wednesday morning in the presence of a large gathering of local people. The service was brief but very impressive. During the program, the fire alarm was tolled in commemmoration of those who paid the supreme sacrifice during the World war. The singing of two verses of "America" opened the service. The combined E. P. O. Elks and St. Joseph's Boy Scout bands furnished the music under the direction of Charles N. C. Wheeler. Then followed the reading of the governor's proclamation by the Rev. Frederick C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church. Captain Dr. W. P. S. Keating read the roll call o fthe men from the town who were killed in action or died from disease or other causes during the World war. The list is as follows:

Killed in action—James J. Shea, Edward J. Ryan, William H. Griggs, Harold L. Moriarty, Henry Lapan, Aleck Pelke, Ernest Martin, William G. Smith, Safron Gormalinski, William Stygar, Joseph O. Aubin, Morris Mygley and Fred Messler.

Died of disease and other causes—Alban M. Potvin, Arthur Dion, Theodore Laprade, John Squires, Percy Brooke, Patrick Lynch, Claude C. Washburn, Michael J. Dennehy, Morris Lappe, Paul K. Morrison, Timothy O. Wallen, James P. Flynn, Everett C. Lewis, Harold H. Smith and Edward L. Keeler.

Prayer was then offered by the Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, pastor of the First Congregational church and the playing of the national anthem followed. "Taps" were sounded by a quartet of buglars of the Boy Scouts. After the audience stood with bowed and bared heads for a moment in compliance with the proclamation of the governor, the Rev. Andrew S. Muirhead, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church expressed the appreciation of the committee to the assemblage and the people of the community for the fine spirit of response.

The committee of arrangements consisted of the Revs. Andrew S. Muirhead, Arthur S. Wheelock, Frederick C. Williams, Dr. W. P. S. Keating and Albert B. Smith.

EAST HAMPTON MAN TAKES WILLIMANTIC BRIDE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 11—The marriage of Milton W. Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Nichols of East Hampton and Miss Edith F. Collins, daughter of Mrs. John Collins, formerly of No. 393 Ash street, this city was solemnized this morning at nine o'clock in St. Joseph's church in the presence of a large number of friends. Rev. Henry E. Quinn, pastor of the church, was the officiating clergyman and also sang the nuptial mass. While the guests were assembling, a musical program was rendered by Mrs. Edmund R. Portelance at the organ, accompanied by C. Clinton Helmold, violinist. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. R. Ernest Melody, as matron of honor, while the groom had as his best man, his brother, William H. Nichols. The bride was handsomely gowned in silver chiffon broche with scalloped pendants edged with beaded American Beauty chiffon. She wore hat and slippers of silver and carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor was attired in an imported gown of regent velvet broche with gold trimmings and wore a picture hat of beautiful design. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The bride's mother wore a taupe gown of chenille and georgette with hat to match. Mrs. Nichols, mother of the groom, wore black satin with mauve trimmings. The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace of pearls with cameo pendant.

Following the church ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Ernest Melody of No. 35 Lebanon avenue. The bride's going away gown was of grackle blue miroleen with a satin hat of the same color. A strook's coat trimmed with fur completed her costume. Following a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Nichols will be at home to their friends after January first at No. 23 North Main street, East Hampton, where a newly constructed home awaits them. The bride has many friends in this city, having been a member of the Natchaug Grammar school faculty.

Two of the five cases assigned for trial in Wednesday's session of the Windham county superior court in this city, were continued from the day before. One of these was further continued for reassignment, that of Merrill H. Jones of this city vs. D. V. Frione Company of New Haven. The cases announced as ready were those of James Jordano vs. George Larrow, a suit to recover on a well digging contract; Henry Duplease vs. Charles S Huling, D. A., a suit to recover commission on the sale of property; Sylvester Pelechatz vs. Stafo Shimansky, a charge of defamation of character; and Kosma Dubina vs. John Stanczak, a suit to recover damages for an alleged assault.

When the clock in the tower of the building tolled the hour of eleven o'clock, Judge Dickenson suspended the session of court for two minutes while all in the room bowed their heads for the memory of the American soldiers who gave their lives in the World war.

The first case to be heard was that of Jordano vs. Larrow, a suit to recover a bill of $163.32. The testimony by Jordano was to the effect that he was hired by Larrow to dig a well on day rate, to be paid $1.25 per hour and his helpers at the rate of one dollar an hour. When the men had worked four days, Larrow called them off the job on the grounds that it was costing too much and he did not have sufficient money to carry on the work to completion. The plaintiff said that the work was slow on account of a ledge being encountered. He claimed that Larrow had said he would pay him in a short time but he had never done so.

Charles Jordano, nephew of the plaintiff and Diego Inselmco gave testimony relative to the verbal contract made between Jordano and Larrow in regard to the wages to be paid for the week and the nature of the job. The witnesses said that they were told the work was called off on account of it being dangerous as much blasting had to be done to clear the well hole.

George Larrow, the defendant, testified that Jordano entered into an agreement to dig the well in question for him and that remuneration would follow only when water was secured. Jordano and his men worked nearly four days and had only dug down a little over two feet on account of a ledge. He mentioned to Jordano that he figured it best to drive an artesian well rather than in the manner in which the work was being carried on as it would be very costly. Jordano, he said, did not return to finish the job and he was obliged to get another party to do the work.

Following the testimony offered by Larrow, the attorneys for both sides went into conference and on their return the court was notified that a settlement had been reached.

At the start of the afternoon session, the case of Sylvester Pelechatz vs. Stafo Shimansky was started. The testimony in the case had reference to an alleged statement made by the defendant on May 1, 1923 in relation to the plaintiff which was: "He is a thief. He stole my money and my chickens." Reference was made to a theft committed at the Shumansky home previously. Witnesses who swore that Mrs. Shumansky made such statements on this and other occasions included Mrs. Lillian Higbee, Mrs Tataline Pelechatz and Jak S. Pelechatz.

An interesting meeting of Anne Wood Elderkin Chapter, D. A. R. was held at the home of Mrs. Annie W. Elliott of No. 347 Prospect street Tuesday afternoon. In the absence of the regent, Mrs Herbert R. Chappell, Mrs. Almeda French, vice-regent, was in charge of the session. The meeting opened with the salute to the flag and singing of "America the Beautiful," by the chapter, followed by prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Ida M. Brown. Four new members were reported by the registrar. The ways and means committee reported a successful food sale and numerous other items.

It was voted to give the Americanization committee the sum of $30 to be distributed for students' prize essays and also a certain sum to be used to purchase books and supplies for a worthy student at Windham High school. The regent then turned the meeting over to the chairman of the program committee for the afternoon, Mrs Frank Larrabee, who announced that the next meeting would be a Christmas gift afternoon for the emigrants at Ellis Island, a worthy cause the chapter has sponsored for several years. Last year 95 boxves were sent from the chapters in the state. In the absence of Mrs. Alice Tyler Smith, Mrs. Larrabee read her interesting paper, "Some Women of the Revolution," which completed the afternoon's program.

Refreshments were served in the dining room, which were supplied by the general committee comprising Mrs. French, Mrs. Asline Ward, Mrs. Charles F. Risedorf, Mrs. Eva Bugbee, Miss Julia Bugbee, Mrs. Alice T. Smith and Mrs. F. E. Guild.

In an automobile accident at noon Wednesday on the Stafford-Willimantic state highway at a point where the so-called South Coventry depot road join the main highway, one person was injured and three others shaken up. The machine was a Ford coupe, owned and driven by Mrs. John Adams who was accompanied by her child and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Grady, all of South Coventry. The machine had just made the turn from the depot road into the state highway when the steering knuckle gave way and became useless. Mrs. Adams lost control of the car which sped across the road and turned over in a ditch, pinning all four occupants underneath.

Alfred Cardiff of Perkins' Corner happened along shortly after and went to the assistance of the wrecked party. He managed to get a door of the car open and released the occupants. Mr. Grady was the last to be taken from the car and it was found that he was the only one of the party injured. He was weak from loss of blood, two large arteries in his right hand having been cut. He was brought to the office of Dr. Samuel J Turcotte in this city for treatment. An examination also disclosed the fact that his right shoulder was sprained.

Charles Ingraham, 86, of No. 166 Pleasant street died suddenly at his home Wednesday morning about 7 o'clock. Medical Examiner Dr. Louis I. Mason was summoned and pronounced death due to a heart complaint, superinduced by asthma. He was born in Colchester, November 30, 1838, a son of Johoial and Abbie (Fuller) Ingraham. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Louisa Harris Ingraham; two daughters, Mrs. Lloyd Larkin of this city and Mrs. Irvin Larkin of Norwich; and several grandchildren. Mr. Ingraham was at one time superintendent of the local pumping station. He was a carpenter by occupation and had resided in this city for many years. He was affiliated with the Masonic order.

Mrs. Jennie Wheelock died early Wednesday morning at the Card Home for the Aged on Pleasant street. She was born in Webster, Mass., June 25, 1843, a daughter of John and Lucy A. (Corbin) Robbins. She is survived by a niece, Mrs. C. L. Ross of Wheatley, Mass., a nephew, Henry Keech of Putnam and a cousin, Mrs. Charles H. Bradley of this city.

Following the regular business meeting of the Catholic Welfare council held at St. Joseph's hall Tuesday evening a novel entertainment was staged. The hall was handsomely decorated to represent a garden. Mrs. Katherine R. Pratt was chairman of the affair. Those take part were: Mrs. Arthur J. Squires, Mrs. Katherine R. Pratt, Miss Annis Shea, Mrs. Arthur C. Racicot, the Misses Rose and Agnes Welch and the Mathieu twins, Clair and Ethel. Following the garden party a highly amusing playlet was given by Mrs. Theron D. Swift and Mrs. Albert Anthony of Mansfield, entitled "Cheerful and Musical," which was very well received. The Therien orchestra, consisting of Mrs. Therien and her daughters, Mrs. Fontaine and Mrs. Hart, furnished delightful music.

Plans for the civic testimonial to be tendered the St. Joseph's Boy Scout band and its director, Charles N. C. Wheeler, at the town hall next Monday evening, are nearing completion. The Rev. Otto S. Beaumister of Glenville, formerly assistant pastor at St. Joseph's church, who was instrumental in the organization of the band, will be present and deliver the address of the evening.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hattie B. Woodward were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home in Columbia. The Rev. Louis L. Harris, pastor of the Liberty Hill Congregational church officiated. Interment followed in the Columbia cemetery.

Edward Sullivan of this city, who is employed in Taftville, was before the local police court yesterday morning, charged with intoxication. He pleaded guilty. Judge Frank H. Foss imposed a jail sentence of five days, which he suspended and placed Sullivan on probation for six months. The costs of the case, amounting to $5.15 are to be paid.

Peter Tracey is the latest addition to the firm of R. G. Remington, Inc., and is the new service superintendent at the Reo service agency of the company on Bridge street. For the past several years, Mr. Tracey has been service manager for the General Baking company of Springfield, Mass. He has been engaged in the automobile repair business for twenty-five years.

Members of Francis S. Long Woman's Relief corps, A. C. Tyler auxiliary, U. S. W. V. and Mary Todd Lincoln Tent, No. 15, Daughters of Veterans held a joint whist at G. A. R. hall Tuesday evening with 32 tables in play. Mrs. Lottie Gilman won the ladies' first prize, Mrs. Nellie Friel, second and Mrs. Ida Chamberjin, the consolation award. The men's first prize went to William B. Sweeney, second, to Joseph P. Simpson and consolation to Charles Hall. Refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served.

The I. X. L. Sewing club of the Methodist Episcopal church met at the home of Miss Ethel Simonds Tuesday. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Ancient Fashions

Pearls from the Ohio mound hoards show that the ancient Indians who built them and accumulated the jewels found in them were as fastidious as modern jewelers about their quality, according to Dr. Walter Hough of the United States National Museum. They used only perfectly shaped pearls, rejecting even the baroque that receive at least minor favor from Europeans.

Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight

The loss of as much as a pound of excess fat a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realising that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Dept. W-2.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

French Woman Tells

How to Get Thin

Without Diets, Creams, Exercises or Dangerous Drugs

I reduced my own weight 50 pounds in less than five weeks, and at the same time marvelously improved my general health and appearance with a new French discovery called SAN-GRI-NA. To-day I look, act and feel far younger than my real age. From the results in my own case and those of my friends, I am absolutely convinced that any man or woman burdened with rolls of ugly, injurious, unwholesome fat, can take it off easily, quickly and safely with SAN-GRI-NA. Every day science discovers something new. SAN-GRI-NA is one of the latest French discoveries for the reduction of excess fat. It does away with weakening diets, strenuous exercises, torturing garments and absurd and expensive so-called reducing creams. It is used extensively in Paris, where women of every age pride themselves on keeping their figures slender and graceful, and where the men detest a heavy waistline or double chin. No matter how fat you are, or what you have done in the past to reduce you must remember that SAN-GRI-NA has never been offered before to the American public. IT IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS, does not contain any dangerous drugs, and cannot possibly affect your stomach or your health. By simply taking two small tablets before each meal I lost 50 pounds in two months, and I have not regained a pound since. I eat all I want and enjoy the best of health. You can do the same. Today go to any good drug store, ask for a package of SAN-GRI-NA. Do not accept anything else, as it is the only thing I ever found to reduce after I had tried hundreds of different ways and remedies.

NOTE—The above appeared in many papers about 2 years ago. Since then SAN-GRI-NA has been investigated by American Physicians, Nurses, Clinics, Beauty Specialists etc., and is now endorsed and recommended to fat people by Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, as a most wonderful and harmless way to reduce. Every day letters from grateful users come to us from all over the country. Men and women in all steps of life have reduced 10, 20, 30, or even as high as 80 pounds, saying also that they were able to greatly improve their health and looks. Do not accept a substitute. Insist on SAN-GRI-NA

If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Labs. 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C., and one full sized box SAN-GRI-NA will be mailed you prepaid.

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. City.

DANIELSON

WILLIS BARTLETT FOUND DEAD AT EAST KILLINGLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 11.—Willis Bartlett, of a family that made East Killingly famous as a manufacturing center in the days prior to the Civil War, was found dead Wednesday at the Bartlett homestead in the valley district of the town. He was 83 years old last September. For many months past he had been living alone in the beautiful old homestead. About 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, Lewis S. Barstow saw him and unlocked the door. At that time apparently he was in his usual good health. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock, Stanley, son of Mr. Barstow, went to the Bartlett home on an errand and found Mr. Bartlett lying with his arms across his breast on the kitchen floor. Dr. George M. Burroughs viewed the body and gave apoplexy as the cause of death.

Mr. Bartlett was born in Burrillville, R. I., 81 years ago last September, a son to Welcome and Amy Whipple Bartlett. His father came to East Killingly when he was a boy to operate what was known in those days as the Elliottville and was one of the outstanding figures of a community that in those days was one of the chief cotton manufacturing centers in eastern Connecticut.

Willis Bartlett eventually became the proprietor of a store at East Killingly and remained there in that capacity for many years. A score of years ago he went to New York and up to a little more than a year ago remained in that city being engaged largely in the promotion of financial transactions. Upon the death of his wife he returned to East Killingly and has since made his home at the Bartlett homestead, which he always loved as he did all of the East Killingly district, where he often said he would spend millions in promotion of it, had it been his good fortune to have great wealth Mr. Bartlett was a very remarkable man.

He leaves two daughters, Nora, of New York and Mrs. Mary Hutchins of Providence.

Announcement is made of the appointment of Attorney Louis A. Woisard as referee in bankruptcy for Windham county. Attorney Woisard said Wednesday noon that he has not been officially notified of the appointment, but this is a mere formality that will be fulfilled in the immediate future.

Attorney Woisard's appointment will bring the bankruptcy court of the county to Danielson. For many years this court has been located in Willimantic. Attorney Woisard's first appearance in his new official capacity will be at Willimantic on November 24, when there will be six cases assigned for hearings. Thereafter all bankruptcy court matters will be considered in Danielson.

The appointment of Attorney Woisard comes through Judge Edwin S. Thomas of the federal court. It is regarded as a splendid one, and Attorney Woisard was being congratulated on all sides during Wednesday.

Attorney Woisard is a graduate of Georgetown university law school in the class of June 1923. He was admitted to practice law in the county in June 1923, and is a member of the Windham county bar. He is 28 years of age and the youngest man to hold the position to which he has just been appointed in Windham county in many years.

Attorney Woisard was born here and attended local schools, graduating from Killingly High school in the class of 1910. From his early years he had a penchant for the study of law and began his course in the office of the late Judge Oliver E. Getty. Later he entered the postal service, in the Danielson office, meanwhile continued his legal studies.

When the World war came he went overseas as a member of the A. E. F. and was assigned to the postal service. Upon his return he was mustered out and resumed his studies for admission to the bar in Washington, D. C.

A special distinction has just come to Captain William H. Stone, a commander in the American merchant marine, whose boyhood home was in Danielson, where he comes from time to time as opportunity permits.

A letter has come to W. Clarence Bacon from Captain Stone telling that the commander has been selected by the Lykes line, in whose service he has been for a number of years, to be captain of the steamer Aquarius, flagship of the company's fleet of 36 ocean going steamships.

Headquarters of the Lykes line are at New Orleans and it operates vessels from that and various other ports to all quarters of the globe. Captain Stone has been operating another large steamer, the Bayou Chico between New Orleans and Hamburg, Germany for some time past.

He was surprised upon a recent return from Hamburg to be called to the offices of the Lykes line and informed that he had been selected to command the Aquarius, flagship of the fleet, the pride of the Lykes line and one of the largest merchant vessels in the American marine. He will take command of the vessel upon her arrival this month from a trip she is completing. The Aquarius carries passengers as well as freight.

His new assignment came to Captain Stone on his high record of efficiency and his splendid ability as an executive.

He is a seasoned wayfarer of the seas. He left here and went into tugboat service out of Providence when he was about 16. Constant application to his duties, an eager student and able he advanced steadily until he became a mate and eventually received a master's license. He is an expert navigator. In the years that have taken him into about every important port in the world he has obtained licenses that entitle him to sail as a master mariner over the seven seas. He is but 42 years of age. During the war he was command of a merchant vessel that ran the German submarine blockade with a cargo of high explosives for the American forces abroad and he performed other valiant war services. He is married and makes his home in New Orleans.

F. J. Arrigan, who has been here for several years as district manager of the Dolbey Ice Cream company of Providence and since the entry of that firm into the Eastern Dairies, Inc., in the same capacity for the larger organization, is leaving Danielson next Tuesday to take over the management of the New Britain district of the Eastern Dairies, Inc. This territory includes the city of New Britain, surrounding communities, a section of the city of Hartford and south to Meriden. It is important territory for the corporation Mr. Arrigan represents and his appointment to have charge of it represents a distinct advance from the position he has so ably filled here as a stepping stone to greater things.

Mr. Arrigan has been with the Dolbey Ice Cream company since his youthful days. He has grown up with the business and knows every detail of it intimately. For a number of years he was with the firm in his home city of Providence. Upon the opening of the Danielson distributing station he was assigned to the management of this territory, which includes all of the towns of Killingly, Putnam, Thompson, Pomfret, Brooklyn, Sterling, Canterbury, Plainfield and other localities across the border in Rhode Island.

His management of this district has been eminently successful and so pleasing to his superiors that he has been given the New Britain promotion. During his residence in Danielson Mr. Arrigan has made hundreds of friends all through the territory under his jurisdiction. They will regret his departure, though wishing him every success in his new field. Mr. Arrigan will remove his family to New Britain in the near future.

Territory hereabouts did well in contributing to the Old Ironsides fund. This was a matter claiming the attention of school children and worked here under the direction of members of Putnam lodge of Elks. Killingly topped all of the towns of the Putnam district with a total of $68.49. This was made up of little gifts of a penny or two, with an occasional nickel or dime. Of this amount Killingly High school gave $19.00. Danielson grammar $20.47. St. James $15.65. Goodyear, $10.37. Dayville $7.45. Attawaugan $2.60. East Killingly $3.50. Ballouville $1.15. Killingly Center $5.03. Valley 73 cents. East Brooklyn Grove $7.17. Brooklyn Center $5.84. Gilbert district of Brooklyn, 60 cents. By districts Putnam $74.41. Brooklyn $11.07. Killingly $83.49. Pomfret. Eastford. Woodstock $30.28. The total of all was $230.55, a very good showing for towns in this corner of the state.

Whistles blew and bells pealed in Danielson Armistice day at 11 a. m., anniversary of that fateful hour when the armistice was signed over seven years ago. That was about the only demonstration over the anniversary in Danielson excepting for the display of flags about town. There was activity as the service battery and the American legion boys gathered to leave for Putnam, as did several hundred other Danielson people to see the big parade and other features attendant upon the dedication of a memorial bridge on which are tablets bearing the names of the Putnam men who represented that town during the world war.

It was noted that very few former service men who were to parade Armistice day wore their khaki uniforms of world war days. It appears from inquiry among the men that many of these suits are done for. Moths have feasted upon a great many of the uniforms and rendered them unfit for further wear. There are other instances where uniforms that were snug fitting and snappy looking when the boys returned from overseas that are now too small for their owners, for many of the men have put on weight since they returned to civilian life.

Business was more generally suspended in Danielson Armistice afternoon than at any time for years. Even the drug stores were closed from noon until 6 p. m. Deserted streets all the afternoon. The only attraction to hold interest in Danielson was the football game at Quinebaug field between Killingly High school and Plainfield High school.

Mrs. A. H. Armington, treasurer of the Civic federation, announced Wednesday that the total receipts from the tag day of the organization amounts to $565.19—just 50 cents more than was obtained in the Tag day of a year ago.

This (Thursday) evening Miss Emma F. Pilling will entertain the members of the Killingly Woman's club at her home. Mrs. George H. Stourton, president of the Connecticut state federation of Women's clubs, will be the guest of honor.

Motor busses were used to a considerable extent in transporting troops bound from the Submarine base at New London and other points in the state through Danielson to Putnam for the parade on Armistice day.

Joseph Lapelle is visiting here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lapelle of Franklin street.

A meeting of the Circuit league is to be held at Oneco on November 20, it was announced here Wednesday.

Earl Geer of Springfield has been visiting at his home here for a few days.

William A. Stevens of Providence spent the holiday with friends in Danielson.

Wood choppers are busy in woodland country around this area accumulating supplies of cord wood for use during the coming winter. The quantity being made ready would indicate a considerable insurance against discomforts caused by a coal shortage.

PUTNAM

THOUSANDS IN PUTNAM FOR BRIDGE DEDICATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 11—A crowd estimated at from 12,000 to 15,000 came to Putnam today to take part in, or witness the dedicatory exercises of the new Memorial bridge over the Quinebaug river. Among the visitors were Governor John H. Trumbull, Lieutenant Governor Brainard and many other notables. Governor Trumbull and Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald were among the speakers but the principal address was by Captain John O'Brien of Worcester. Captain O'Brien is an orator of exceptional ability and the thousands assembled at Bugbee's corner, in the business section of the city, listened with delight to every word.

The affair in every way is regarded as having been thoroughly successful and the different committees that had it in charge and that gave to it unselfish and unremitting work have a right tonight to feel proud of their accomplishment. The crowd was the largest that Putnam has ever known, the parade was long and impressive—five bands were needed for music for the marchers, and the speaking exercises were of a high standard and participated in by men of high standing.

The weather was all that could be asked for, a perfect late fall day. The visitors came mostly by automobile and while the greater proportion were from Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island contributed a large quota. During the parade and the speaking exercises cars were barred from the principal streets and it is difficult to realize where the many hundreds were parked: Captain Jarvis, with twenty police officers, half of them State men, handled the crowd as well as it could have been done by a trained traffic officer who has been stationed at Broadway and 43rd street. There was no accident, and not even any friction.

The line of march was over the new bridge and the construction gang worked all through the night and into the daylight hours in order to have it available for use by marching men. Yesterday afternoon the roadway was a mass of soft earth, with one deep excavation made to repair a leak in the sixteen-inch water main, four feet below the surface, the sidewalks and approaches were littered with all kinds of building debris. At 9 o'clock this morning there was a concrete roadway, as well surfaced as any in the state, the pavements were glistenningly clean, the concrete side walls were adorned with the bronze tablets, including the honor rolls with the names of 393 men and women of Putnam who were in the service during the World war. On one of these tablets were the following names, graven in a panel by themselves, the ones who died in service:

Albert J. Breault, Fred W. Carpenter, Adelard Dumas, Henri P. Fafreault, Harry C. Hopkins, Arthur W. Kempf, Norman L. Kennedy, Robert E. Marsh, Anselm Mayotte, Joseph H. Montie, Victor P. Pellend, Damase Veilleux.

The Invitation committee endeavored to have the near relatives of these twelve present at the ceremonies. Places of honor were reserved for them on the reviewing stand when the parade passed. One of these was Mr. Mayotte of Webster. He is the father of Rev. Anselm Mayotte, after whom the American Legion Post of Putnam is named. He was a curate at St. Mary's when this country went into the war. He enlisted, was sent over as a chaplain, and died there from injuries received in a fall from a horse. A Gold Star mother was Mrs. Ida G. Kenney of New Rochelle, N. Y. She was a lifelong resident of Putnam until a year ago. Her younger son was Norman L. Kennedy, for many years foreman of the composing room of the Windham County Observer. After being rejected for service by the local exemption board because of impaired eyesight he enlisted in the medical branch at Worcester, was sent to a training camp and died there during the "flu" epidemic of the fall of 1918. Both men were just as much martyrs as if they had been killed on the field of battle.

A feature that added to the impressiveness of the occasion was the decoration of the business section, a large sized flag, flying from a 12 foot staff set in the sidewalks, the staffs all 12 feet distant from each other. It is a uniform and attractive method of decoration for a public parade and was satisfactory to everyone.

The first or military division of the parade was headed by the band of the 182nd regiment. Lieut. John H. Moss being the marshal with Lieut. Edward F. Peary as chief of this division. The service men marching with this division under the flags of the different Legion posts of this section were escorted by eight military companies in uniform with a company of Blue Jackets having the right of line. Then came the civilian section, Captain Everett M. Carver in command. The Boy Scouts acted as escort. Garde Foch, Garde Marechal, Veterans of the Civil war in automobile, Putnam Lodge of Odd Fellows, Putnam Rotary club, Cargill Council, K. of C., the united French societies of the city, the Red Men, and the Eagles. The number in the second division was so large that the four bands in line were needed in order to provide music for the marchers.

After the parade the following program was carried out: Address of welcome, T. H. deCoudres; invocation, Rev. J. H. Bedard; address, John A. Macdonald, state highway commissioner; address, Governor John H. Trumbull; reading roll of men who died in the service; placing of wreaths on tablets; thirty seconds of silence; taps; band selection, address, Capt. John H. O'Brien, benediction, Rev. N. B. Burton; Star Spangled Banner, 182nd Regiment band.

One of the many features of the day was filming the crowd for the movies. An amusement company had a representative here and the members of the several committees, scenes of the parade and other features will be seen on the "news reel" here in Putnam and elsewhere.

The Putnam school board met this week for its annual organization meeting and the following officers and committees were elected: Mrs. Jane C. Warner, chairman; Charles L. Torrey, secretary; H. Geissler, clerk; committee on teachers, Mrs. Barber, Mrs. Warner and Mr. Torrey; committee on supplies, J. J. McGarry, J. A. P. Gagne and James J. Charron; committee on buildings, Silas M. Wheelock, Henry J. Thayer and J. H. Bulger; truant officer, H. E. Butler.

Mr. Trinder, who is at the head of the state trade schools in Connecticut, spoke at the meeting of the necessity of enlarging the Putnam Trade School building.

Burt Grosvenor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grosvenor of Pomfret, who underwent a very serious operation at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, in Boston, recently, is now at home and on the road to recovery.

Raymond Pierce, a sophomore at Storrs college has ben the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pierce of Putnam Heights, for a few days.

Miss May Patne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Payne of South Main street will spend the winter in Montreal, Canada.

Edward E. Keefe of the Stone School of Accounting, New Haven, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Keefe of Ring street.

No trace has yet been found of Joseph Izo, the Putnam High school boy who disappeared from his home more than a week ago. The local police have sent descriptions of the missing boy to the police of other towns and cities.

Francis Larrimie has been spending several days this week in Worcester, Mass.

Miss A. Collette of Southbridge has been the guest of friends in Putnam.

At the regular meeting of the Putnam Grange held in Odd Fellows' hall, the second and third degrees were worked on a class of candidates. A ladies' team from the Senexet Grange of Woodstock worked the second degree while a local team ushered the candidates through the third degree. There was an unusually large attendance and many visitors from granges throughout the county.

Attorney F. W. Helmrichs has returned to his winter home in New York after spending the summer in Woodstock.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bucklin and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop of Pawtucket have been recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Luther Rawson and family at Woodstock.

Mrs. Fanny Burton of Woodbury, Conn., is the guest of her son, Rev. N. B. Burton and family at the parsonage on Grove street.

Walter Wheaton has returned from a business trip to Cleveland, Ohio.

Charles Slade and Miss Wealthy Slade of Appoquag, R. I., have moved into part of a house on Woodstock avenue occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Williams. Mrs. Williams is a sister of Mr. and Miss Slade.

Mrf. and Mrs. Walter Wheaton have returned from Stafford Springs where they were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Wright, formerly of Putnam.

Mrs. Charles Ainley, Mrs. George Jordan, Mrs. Frank Adams and Mrs. Maurice Patterson have been recent visitors with friends in Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dutton of Attleboro, Mass., former residents of Putnam, have been recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Richard Carpenter of South Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Covell and little daughter of Boston have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jones of Main street.

Thomas Harworth of Worcester, Mass., has been visiting friends in the city.

Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows' is to be the guest of Granite lodge, No. 33, at Pascoag, R. I., this (Thursday) evening.

JEWETT CITY

Thomas E. Lee, 84, died at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, at his home on Palmer avenue. He had been ill only four days, the cause of his death being heart trouble. Mr. Lee was the son of John and Asia Tiffany Lee, and was born in the town of Franklin, March 18, 1841. In his younger days he lived in Central Village, but for 70 years he has lived in Jewett City. He was a member of the Second Congregational church, uniting in 1874, was one of its staunchest adherents, and a regular attendant. His vitality was remarkable, few realizing his advanced age. His whole life has been devoted in an unusual degree to his family. Never having married, for years he lived with his sister, Sarah Lee. She was an invalid, for years he gave her his devoted care and faithful uncomplaining attention. His friends, who knew his intimately, learned to love and respect the real worth of this plain, honest, upright New Englander. His absolute adherence to what he thought was right stands as a lesson never to be forgotten. Since his sister's death, a little over a year ago, he has, in his matter of fact way, "set his house in order," according to the Bible instruction, ready for his own going out.

During his younger years, Mr. Lee became much interested in Masonry. At the time of his death, his record as a member of the craft is outstanding. As a noble of the Mystic Shrine, he was one of the oldest in Connecticut, having joined the Pyramid temple in Bridgeport 40 years ago. Locally, but one or two members of his home blue lodge are older than he. A 32 degree Mason, he was a member of Mt. Vernon lodge No. 75, F. & A. M., of Jewett City; Franklin chapter, No. 6, R. A. M.; Franklin council, No. 8 R. and S. M.; Columbo commandery, No. 4, K. T.; King Solomon lodge of Perfection; Norwich chapter of Rose Croix and the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite; Sphinx temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Hartford, and of the Faith chapter, O. E. S., No. 82, of this place.

Thomas Lee, while he accepted and held no opinion against the things that are modern and new, was distinctively a man of the old school. He was acquainted with all branches of the farming industry, and, when in his prime, could swing a scythe or wield a hoe with the best. He was a recognized marksman and he acquainted himself with probable results before making a move. His business during most of the active years of his long life, was that of a roller-coverer and in that capacity, as well as others his methodical skill and finished care rendered him a master of his trade. Primarily engaged in the roller covering business elsewhere, in Jewett City he was employed in that capacity by the late James E. Roberts, for nearly 30 years. His death marks the passing of the last of his generation. He is survived by only two of the next generation, Homer L. Lee, of Webster, Mass., and Melvin Richmond, of Moosup.

Mrs. Velo Sharkey received word Tuesday of the death of Hugh McLaughlin, Jr., in New York city. He was a grandnephew of the late Hugh McLaughlin of this place, and it was with much regret that she learned the sad news. Only recently she had the pleasure of a visit from the family. He seemed to be in good health at that time. The letter stated that he died in St. Luke's hospital in New York the result of the influenza and other complications. He was 18 years old and a very promising young man.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer L. Lee, of Webster, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lee, of Providence, are at the home of the late Thomas E. Lee.

C. Luder, who has been a guest of his cousins, Mrs. Sibelleaud and Miss Marjorie Luder, left Tuesday afternoon for his home in Dartmouth, N. S. On his return Mr. Luder will resume his studies at Dalhousie college, Halifax, where he will complete a course in law, having but one more year to study. Mr. Luder recently returned from a trip to Jacksonville, Fla., and New York.

All over the borough, Wednesday the flags were out, and there was a pretty general suspension of traffic and trade. Some of the manufacturers with hurry orders and emergency work did not close their plants. At 11 a. m. the bells were rung and whistles blown. Old Cluey Watson setting his line of traps, on one of the densely wooded slopes of Mt. Misery, heard the sound of the distant blasts. The old man said at nightfall, that he can't just tell, what made him straighten from his task, and stand there at attention alone in the forest. There was none around to see, save maybe the peering eyes of some hidden dweller of the woods, who must have wondered at the proceeding. "Couldn't tell now," he added, "whether I baited the next trap or not."

This borough has taken to itself a new sort of thief, in a class by himself, and standing at the head of same. One night this week he went about tapping private gasoline tanks. The ideal lunch suffered a loss of 40 gallons.

Mrs. Henry R. Vegiard was surprised Tuesday evening by a number of relatives in honor of her birthday it being also Officer and Mrs. Veziard's 12th wedding anniversary. Mrs. Vegiard was remembered with many gifts. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake, cookies, coffee and fruit were served. Those present were Mrs. May Richard and daughter, Blanche of Yantic. Mr. and Mrs. William McBerney, and Mr. Broadhurst of Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Gobiel and children Ursele, Estelle and Richard of Plainfield, Mrs. Damag Gobiel, Miss Rosanna Gobiel and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Oakes, and sons, John Jr., and William of Jewett City.

Wednesday morning in the town court, Judge John T. Barry presiding, Joseph Morgan's bond was called, amounting to $25, he having failed to appear to answer to the charge of driving without a license. Thereby hangs a tale as yet not made public.

Last week Teresa Barry, an inmate at the home of the Good Shepherd in Providence left that institution and went to her own place of residence in another part of the city, intending to go to New London. Friends in the latter city, learning of her intention, came after her in an automobile. When they arrived in Providence, the car contained two sailors and a young woman. Meanwhile that evening, Teresa had turned down a would be admirer, who later noting her departure in the machine with the two sailors and girl from New London, and in retaliation for his "getting the gate," notified a police officer, that he had just seen a girl abducted, giving description of the sailors and girl, also the number of the automobile.

The chief of police at Providence phoned down the line, all along the route to New London. Officer Henry Veglard of Jewett City, proved to be Johnnie on the spot, and held up the parties here at 2 a. m. Joseph Morgan, the driver was arrested for driving without a license and deposited $25.00 for his appearance, which was forfeited Wednesday morning. The Providence man who put up the job is not known. The party held up by Officer Veglard were able to explain the queer situation and were allowed to proceed.

The woman teacher who can't make her eyes behave must have unruly pupils.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

James A. Swift, 75, of Staffordville, died at the Johnson Memorial hospital Tuesday after several months illness. He was born in Mansfield, April 26, 1850, a son of Arnold and Lucy Gibbs Swift. He came to Stafford when a boy and has resided here ever since. For several years he was Staffordville's handy man doing odd jobs about the village. For 12 years previous to his last illness he was janitor at the Staffordville school and was also janitor at the Congregational church in Staffordville. He is survived by his wife and one son.

Samuel Johnson has bought the furniture and fixtures of the Stafford restaurant which has been closed.

Superintendent Brick has been making a canvass of school children in the town of Stafford for the purpose of ascertaining how many are vaccinated. Of 1,038 children registered in the public schools last year only 397 were vaccinated and out of 246 in the parochial school Mr. Brick reports 54 vaccinated.

THE RED CROSS APPEAL

This is the week when members of the Red Cross are being asked to renew their memberships and when new memberships are being solicited. It is to be expected that there will be the same general and generous response in behalf of this great humanitarian organization.

The American Red Cross is a magnificent organization, ready for the highest service at a moment's notice, and it's a service which cannot be rendered without adequate preparation. Having labored long in this field it has a record of accomplishment which is one of its greatest assets. It is known how thoroughly it is equipped for service, how efficiently and impartially it renders it and how far reaching are its effort sto reach and relieve those in distress.

The Red Cross needs no introduction and there is no need of going into minute details relative to its purpose and its history. Sufficient is it to say that it has stood the most rigid test, whether it was on the battlefield, behind the lines, giving aid to victims of flood, famine or disease. It holds steadfastly to its endeavor to better conditions locally, to fight disease and to administer to those in distress.

There is bound to be a high degree of satisfaction felt in being a member of such an organization. One cannot escape displaying pride over the part which even a single membership plays in maintaining such a commendable work, and the membership fee is so small that most everyone is eager to make that much of a contribution in behalf of others, and in behalf of the general good.

Those who are members will be eager to do their part in continuing the important activities, while the value of such an organization should make such an appeal to those who have never joined that this year should see a large increase in members and in the funds which keep the Red Cross ready t oserve at call and constantly administering to the many other duties which it has shouldered.

HUNTERRS CAN HELP

Hunters especially are disturbed over the fact that there are so few partridge this year, but they should take kindly to the suggestion to the effect that the hunting of the partridge this year be abandoned and attention centered upon woodcocks, pheasants and ducks instead.

There is a new disease which is attacking the partridge, or ruffled grouse, and seriously depleting the number. There is thus an opportunity for the hunters to give their cooperation in fighting the disease by continuing a closed season on them, and by sending the carcasses of such dead ones as are found to Bowdoin college in Maine where a study is being made of the disease.

Partridge are released, protected, fed and raised for the benefit of the sportsmen. It is true that they pay a license, and thus cannot be penalized for shooting them during the open season, but as sportsmen and in the interest of hunting in other seasons there cannot fail to be recognition of the wisdom in the request that is being made by the fish and game commission of the state. There should be hearty cooperation. It is preferable that there should be no birds this fall than that hunting, of what there are, during the scarcity, because of disease, should mean such a depletion that there will be none for years to come. Difficulty in getting complete compliance on the part of all hunters will be pointed out, and justly so. But that condition always exists, though not to the credit of those who are so greedy that they are not ready to do their bit when it comes to self sacrifice. It is not a response which should be made by a few, but by all. What this means is thoroughly understood by the hunters. They know that there are those who snap their fingers at the laws and escape punishment, but they know in what regard they are held and should be anxious to avoid being placed in any such classification.

Whatever help is given in regard to the ruffled grouse situation means much for the hunting in seasons to come.

AUTOMOBILE STEALING

It is a long time since it was established that there were organized bands of automobile thieves, who made a practice of stealing machines in response to orders, of having headquarters to which cars were shipped, taken down and rebuilt or even sent to other countries.

Many stolen cars are recovered but not as large a proportion of the stolen cases as should be for the proper protection of the motor owning public.

Thus when an investigation of a large insurance company points out that he has obtained proof that there is a gang operating in central New England which is responsible for the theft of about 800 cars a year it is apparent that such proof as he has should serve as the basis for at least breaking up that gang if it is not possible to extend to all of them the punishment they deserve.

It was only a few days ago that a paroled convict in Massachusetts was found to have been guilty of wholesale automobile stealing. He was able to get away with the machines and escape detection for a long time. It may be charged that there is a certain degree of contributory negligence on the part of automobile owners, by leaving their cars unlocked and where it is the easiest for the thieves to get away with them. But that doesn't justify the deed and it does not call for that degree of leniency which is too often shown those who indulge in the stealing of automobiles, whether their object is to sell them, have a joy ride or just deviltry.

The many automobiles that are owned today offer unusual temptation to the thieves. They have a pick from the best and appropriating them cannot fail to be an enticement just as long as they can get away with it without punishment and make a handsome profit on the sale of property that belongs to someone else. Laws for dealing with such sales have been enacted but apparently they do not meet the situation, or else the operations are carried on where there is no such restriction. Let automobile stealing be penalized as it should be and it will be less attractive.

CUTTING THE TAX RATE

Most every community has its particular problems, but it is interesting to note that a Philadelphia councilman makes the claim that he and the chairman of the finance committee of the council of that city "could cut from 25 to 40 cents from the tax rate if the business of the city were conducted like that of a private corporation."

That or a similar remark has no doubt been made in every city of the country at some time or other. It is a matter of frequent comment that city business is too often conducted in the most expensive manner, or quite contrary to the way in which private affairs are usually handled.

Were it possible to get private corporation conduct for municipal activities there would be a tremendous reduction in waste, a higher efficiency, more satisfactory results and a substantial reduction in the tax rate.

Philadelphia is by no means the only community that can look with envious eyes upon the favorable way private corporation business stands out in contrast to the administration of public affairs. The longing for the reduction in the tax rate should in fact extend beyond the plaint of one member of the council of that city. Were it a fact that there was a closer interest taken by the individual in public affairs instead of letting matters drift and accepting everything that is done, when it is known to be inefficient and wasteful, there might be different city administrations and a lowered tax rate. It is too often the case that the indifferent citizen is himself responsible for the situation that exists and against which he is continually hollering but doing nothing.

ARTHUR E. BOWERS

With surprise and regret will the death of Arthur E. Bowers, a former state senator from Manchester, be learned by a large number of friends about the state. Mr. Bowers has for the most of his life been identified in a prominent manner with affairs in northeastern Connecticut. He was a man who had gained a place for himself in business and in politics through resolute determination. He was for years engaged in magazine advertising as eastern manager for Frank Munsey and he also devoted much time, and with marked success, to all branches of the newspaper business in Rockville, the beginning of his journalistic endeavors dating from his days in Yale university and continuing through his long and useful life. In the last two republican national conventions he represented one or more of the state papers.

Senator Bowers was a student who gave much thought to the questions of the day. He was a man of strong convictions, who was invariably found enlisted in all good causes and who was an able representative during the two sessions that he served as state senator. He was a man of high ideals, a strong church man and an able public servant. How highly his services had made him well and most favorably known throughout the state. Connecticut, as well as Manchester, has lost a most worthy son and citizen.

Things must be looking up when it is intimated that Russia is among the nations which may pay its war debts.

If the new French ministry is disposed to let the debt settlement drift it doesn't look as if it was keeping them awake nights over across the water.

If the coal consumers aren't buying bituminous coal, as some complain, possibly they haven't as yet received that rude awakening which Mr. Lewis promised.

Since it is claimed that $70,000,000 can be saved on fuel in New England those who have been maintaining a passive interest in semi bituminous coal are likely to perk up.

The fact that Police Commissioner Enright seems likely to be out of a job in New York hasn't resulted in a call being extended him from Philadelphia to take General Butler's place.

LESSON LEARNED

"Say, that was a pretty girl!" confided the Woodlawn man as they swept along in the crowd from the train.

"Huh?" asked the Hyde Park man, totally uninterested. "I don't want to know where, so don't point her out to me! If she was the Queen of Sheba and all the rest of the bunch I wouldn't turn around to look at her, not me! Somehow I haven't had any interest whatever in pretty girls for years and years, not since Imogene and I were still bride and groom.

"We had been to a party, on the way home Imogene says to me, 'Do you think that Laura Moore is pretty?'

"Now there is the point where I blame myself. Any grown-up man with a scrap of sense knows the proper answer to that especial query. No woman goes around asking people to settle a doubt in her mind about another woman's pulchritude. She knows!

"I could have avoided the whole business by saying, 'Who?'

"That would let me off of the suspicion that I was still thinking about her—and then 'What, her? Ha, ha, ha!' The tornado would have passed by on the other side of the road and sweet bells would have continued to chime.

"Instead of which, wishing to share my every thought with my little wife, I clutched her arm closer to mine and chortled, 'Why, I was just this minute thinking, Imogene, that Laura was about the prettiest girl I have ever laid eyes on! Such eyes, such hair!' In about a minute Imogene said in a k totally expressionless voice, 'Oh, do you?' or words to that effect.

"I was somewhat surprised but quite pleased the next night to find that we had Laura and her hostess to dinner with us, and I was a regular little sunshine doing handsprings to pay fitting attention to our guests. Yes, I said in response to queries that night, I had a very god time at our little party, and that Laura she certainly was a peach!

"I asked Imogene if she had a headache or anything, she seemed so quiet. No, she told me—perhaps it was just the contrast between an old married woman—we had been married six months—and a young, fresh, vivacious girl like Laura.

"That was a pretty dress Laura wore, too, wasn't it? A stunner, I agreed, whistling. I We seemed to embark on a regular round of gayety after that, and Laura always was one of the party, and when Imogene could manage it I always was one of the men who sat next to the visiting beauty.

"I had neglected to mention to Imogene, being a kind man, that, while Laura was a beauty she was likewise a dumbbell and also I had taken for granted that when I raved about her good looks I was tacitly excepting Imogene. It had never occurred to me, trusting youth that I was, that my wife would not know without my telling that I considered her the most beautiful girl on earth.

"I began to struggle in the net and get fretful because I wanted to talk to Imogene or look at her, and no matter which way I turned Laura always was right there. I had Laura morning, noon and night, no matter how I fought. And I felt injured because I never in the world had wanted Laura's company in the first place.

"So I just went on suffering and struggling and when that girl left for home and Imogene said hurry up, we've got to get down to the station to see Laura off—I exploded. I said I wouldn't walk across a room to see Laura off—and then Imogene twisted her hands and her voice trembled and she said she hadn't any idea I couldn't bear parting with Laura and that maybe we could take a trip down to Laura's town. The more I talked my way the more she talked her way and I nearly went crazy trying to explain how I didn't mean at all what she seemed to insist I meant. I made just as much progress as I would making pushing Niagara Falls upstream with one hand.

"Well, it's a good many years back but I declare I don't think I've lived it down yet. We don't mention the topic—but when I am a tottering old gent of 90 I'll bet that if any one mutters 'Laura' my Imogene will take off her spectacles, sit up and take notice! She still thinks she snatched m back from destruction after the most approved advice in the women's magazines!"

"Huh!" sniffed the Woodlawn man. "What I'd like to know is, did she?"

From Small Beginnings

Elihu Burritt, the Learned Blacksmith

The story of Elihu Burritt reads like fiction. It is more unbelievable than is most fiction. His life shows what a really earnest man can do.

Elihu's father carried on a small farm in Connecticut, and at the same time ran a shoemakers' shop. A lingering sickness came upon the father, and Elihu was obliged to carry on all the work. There was no time for him to go to school. Therefore the boy read what books he could lay hands upon, and began to educate himself. When he was 16 he was set to work to learn how to be a thoroughly good blacksmith. He spent long hours at the forge, and became black and dirty. In spite of all the hard work that he had to carry on, he kept up his reading. He borrowed every book that he could find, either in the village libraries or in the homes of friends. Without stopping his work as a blacksmith, and without going to college, he made himself able to read some 50 languages, including both Latin and Greek. He made himself more learned than the average college professor. He could, as it were, shoe a horse in any language.

Naturally people began to express surprise that a blacksmith knew more than they did. People came to hear him talk. That inspired him to leave his forge and go on the lecture platform both in the United States and in Europe. Then he began to write books, as a means of extending his work, and finally established a newspaper. When he was 55 he was made United States Consul to Birmingham, England.

In all his lecturing, and in all his writing, he made deeply sincere efforts to bring about peace on earth and good will to men. He organized peace congresses in various European cities and hammered against war as he had hammered against his red hot iron on the anvil. At no time did he use his great learning for anything except good purposes. He lived to the good age of 69, always kindly at heart, and always striving to benefit his fellow man—and that is a pretty good record for a humble village blacksmith to leave behind him. He had gained a high education in spite of everything, and he had used it for good.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Samuel M. Felton, who has retired from the presidency of the Chicago Great Western Railway to become the chairman of the bird, has long been numbered among the prominent railway executives of the west. Mr. Felton is a native of Philadelphia. Studying for a season at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in his early years, he chose to enter on railroading as a life work, and took the position of a rodman. By 1890 he had become a railway president, having had experience in most of the administrative jobs that lie between rodman and president. The territory over which he has worked and about which he knows ranges between New England on the east, Mexico on the south and California on the west. During the war, as a member of the Council of National Defense, he superintended the mobilization of regiments of engineers and railroad men sent over to France.

Atmosphere Weight

About seven-eighths (by weight) of the atmosphere lies below a height of 10.3 miles. This is about the upper limit of water vapor and clouds in the tropics. About three-fourths (by weight) of the atmosphere lies below a height of 6.8 miles.

Stories That Recall Others

Scandal in Society.

A red bird was sitting on a nest last summer and a group of "biologists" who had been closely following its history were surprised, one day to find a humming bird in its place. A few minutes later the red bird flew up and demanded in a shrill cry that the humming bird move on. But Mrs. Hummingbird was determined to stay, and stay she did although the red bird took the other's bill in hers and jerked and pulled and fought for five long minutes.

Bets ran high between the spectators as to whether the lone egg would be hatched into a red bird or a humming bird. First one bird was on guard and then the other. The big day finally arrived and the bird was hatched. Much to the surprise and indignation of the human followers of the nest the bird was a crow.

Their Secret Love.

He had written a book and two young women who knew him had read it and were greatly impressed by it. One said she had burned the midnight oil to read it and that it was just as interesting as the latest novel. The other, in their exchange of confidences, admitted that she had read it from "cover to cover."

"Do you suppose he is married?" asked one.

"No, I don't think so. I hope not," said the other, and then they both admitted that they had promptly fell in love with him."

Some months later they were with a third person in a restaurant when in walked the author and holding each of his hands was a little girl.

The two students gazed at each other non-pulsed.

"Do you suppose——"

"Can they be his?"

The third person, who had been let in to their secret, said: "They evidently are his daughters. You amused me when you admitted that you had read his book so thoroughly and yet neither of you had noticed that his book was dedicated to his wife or that he gave her due credit in the preface for her 'partnership in all phases of his undertakings,' and that her thoughtful and patient collaboration is embodied in every page of the volume."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

CORSICA

Corsica, Mediterranean island, in the neighborhood of which France lost five brace sea-faring airmen, in a disaster comparable to the loss of the PN-9 No. 1, is described as follows in a communication to the National Geographic society.

"Submerged by wave after wave of history and conquest, home of a race full of passion but free from low crime, the scented isle south of the Cote d'Azur offers a distinctive reward to those who leave the rush and display of the continent to visit vendetta-land.

"Corsica, like every other country, is a land of contrasts. But more than most it is the land of paradox. Behind the striking beauty of the island, concealed beneath the commonplace exteriors of the people, there is a mystery, a contrary quality which first escapes observation and later intrudes everywhere. Probably nowhwere is a generalization more likely to be true and false at the same time.

"One goes to Corsica, as did Boswell's friend, excepting to find every bandit a menace. He remains to find the man with the sun the most unromantic of mortals. Melodrama heroes have accomplished more with the glitter of a silver spoon held revolver-like than the most Tartarinesque of Corsicans attempt when loaded to the belt. Yet personal encounter between natives is still a commonplace.

"Corsica, where women go safely alone by night and gendarmes travel in pairs by day, where there are hundreds of bridges and no rivers, where everyone expects the visitor to pay verbal tribute to 'Kalliste' (Most Beautiful) and few can name the mountains in whose shadow they were born!

"'Banditry' is still a byword and thievery is abhorred. The innkeepers boast of what grand things they would do if there were more tourists, and neglect the few they have. The sun gives the land its charm; and the snow, its beauty and health. The roads are blocked by horses, mules, and donkeys, few of them laden, and the automobile, even for the single traveler, offers the cheapest means of transportation. The perfume of the maquis and the smells of the streets are alike indescribable.

"Animals, made roommates, are treated cruelly, and children, seldom at home, are generally allowed to do as they please.

"Life is somber and death is still the supreme event to those whose monotonous days are as tenaciously clung to as in happier and less lovely lands.

"The mountain sides are terraced with infinite labor and the most fertile plains are left untilled. The sea is all around and mariners are few. Bad sailors that they are, the Corsicans claim kinship with Columbus, and, indomitable fighters, they ismore Napoleon. Sacred personages, pictured on many walls, are profaned on most male lips.

"The donkeys and pigs feed on chestnuts of such quality few in richer lands could afford, and every third child seems underfed.

"But, as one looks back on Corsica from the confetti-strewn Corso in Nice, he longs for the simple, unspoiled, paradoxical paradise to the south, so comfortless, yet so compelling in its charm.

"Neglected heretofore, Corsica is coming into vogue. One of the great French railway systems is arranging for motor services in connection with the steamers from Nice and Marseille, and last winter a half dozen simple but clean hotels, under Swiss direction, were being planned, so that even those who insist on standardized travel arrangements might visit most parts of the island.

"But to appreciate the Corsican one must know him, and a throbbing motor car which relentlessly puts hills behind and rolls past splendid points of view at 30 miles an hour does not give a chance to know those who do not wear their hearts upon their brown corduroy sleeves, for all their traditional hospitality. One can't show very sincere hospitality to a cloud of dust and carbon monoxide gas."

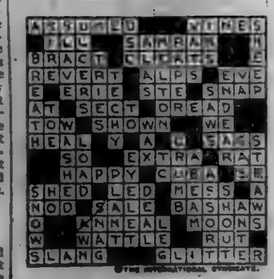
The Hardest Wood

Lignum-vitae, the vital wood, or wood of life, which is found in the West Indies and some other parts of the tropical Americas, is said to be hardest wood nature produces. The reason why this wood is so tough is in the arrangement of its fibers. Instead of being straight, they weave back and forth, crossing and recrossing, like the weave, of an automobile tire. Another peculiar feature of this wood is that, when the tree is cut, the sap cells fill up with a very heavy rosin, which causes it to weigh about eighty pounds a cibic foot. It is one-third heavier than water, and so while excellent for many uses it would not make a good raft. It is used for carpenter's mallets, as it is so tough that it will not split from hard usage, and it is also employed for tools handles.

100,000 Fog Signals in U. S.

Under the control of the United States government there are about 100,000 fog signals of which 2,000 are lighted. They include gongs, bells, whistles of compressed air, trumpets, horns and flashlights. Gongs have been found the least effective so far as concerns the carrying qualities of sound instruments, bells being heard much farther under all circumstances.



Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

Blame Your Stomach For Nervousness and Sleeplessness

Your Chance to Get Better Quick with Wonderful Health Building Stomach Medicine that Lee & Osgood Co. Offers on Money Back Plan.

The best druggists in the country today concede that the phenomenal sales of Dare's Mentha Pepsin during the past year are due to the fact that it is the one supremely efficient health building stomach remedy in America today.

Sleeplessness, despondency, nervousness, dizzy spells, headache, dull eyes and bad breath all come from a disordered stomach.

If your stomach is again made clean strong and healthy so that you can digest the heartiest meal without distress all the above mentioned troubles will speedily vanish.

If you have any stomach disturbance—indigestion, gastritis or dyspepsia—never mind what you call it—make up your mind today that you are going to get rid of it and all your nervousness too.

With Dare's Mentha Pepsin, a delightful and effective elixir, you can get almost instant relief from gas fullness, bloating and that feeling of near suffocation.

Is there any reason on earth why the medicine that has helped and is helping thousands of people daily shouldn't help you.

Ask Lee & Osgood Co. or any up to date druggist about this great stomach tonic elixir. He will tell you that if one bottle doesn't help you more than anything else you ever tried you can have your money back.

So why have indigestion, acute or chronic at all when Dare's Mentha Pepsin is at hand?

Don't forget either that it is a fine tonic that puts vim and vigor into run-down people and makes living a pleasure.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognised by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth, of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

FUNERALS.

Miss Julia Myles Standish.

The funeral of Miss Julia Myles Standish was held Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the United Congregational church with many relatives and friends present. Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the church, conducted the services. The bearers were Alfred Griggs of Abington, Herbert W. Gallup, Herbert W. Cary, and Charles L. Smith, and burial took place in Yantic cemetery, Rev. Mr. Abbott conducting a committal service at the grave. The Henry Allen & Son Co. had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Friends from out of town attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. A. Griggs of Abington, Mrs. John Standish of New London, Miss Edna Lyon of New London and Mrs. Abbie Grant Sharples of Taftville.

Miss Standish was born Aug. 16, 1833. She was the daughter of John Standish, a former leather dealer of Norwich. She was an artist, having painted portraits of many well known Norwich people, and was a direct descendant of Captain Miles Standish in the eighth generation. For many years she lived at 45 Washington street in this city.

For the past six years she has been a helpless invalid unable to move any part of her body. She was always patient and cheerful and retained all her faculties to the last. She greatly enjoyed music and reading and the companionship of her friends by whom she was dearly beloved. For the past six years she has been an inmate of the "Haven," the home for chronic invalids at Abington, Conn. She gave the name of "Haven" to the home, saying it had been a "Haven" to her.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Mary Hanks, of Newton Center, Mass., and a cousin, Miss Helen Royce, of Akron, Ohio, formerly a teacher of Norwich.

Frank P. Pratt.

With a large attendance of relatives and friends the funeral of Frank P. Pratt was held Wednesday morning at 8.30 o'clock from his home, No. 18 North Cliff street and at 9 o'clock there was a solemn high mass at St. Mary's Memorial church. The celebrant was Rev. William A. Keefe, Rev. Frederick R. DesRuisseaux was deacon and Rev. S. A. Ickst was subdeacon. Miss Josette Layalle sang Pie Jesu at the offertory. As the waiting hymn she sang Jesus Lover of My Soul and at the processional, Nearer, My God to Thee.

The bearers were five Elks, P. F. Sweeney, Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald, William H. Harrington, Joseph F. Williams and John C. Donovan and William O'Neil, of Worcester, a cousin of Mr. Pratt, and burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery, Rev. William A. Keefe conducted the committal service.

There were many very beautiful flowers including forms from James Winward of Providence, employes of the Providence terminal of E. T. Winward Sons Co., Norwich Lodge of Elks and the local Hibernians. There was a delegation present from the Elks lodge and mourners came from Providence, Worcester, New Haven and New London. Hourigan Bros. had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Hugh Kelleher

At 8.30 o'clock Wednesday morning the funeral of Mrs. Hugh Kelleher was held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. James O. Mahoney, No. 6 Falls avenue, with a large attendance of relatives and friends. At 9 o'clock a solemn high mass of requiem was held at St. Patrick's church, Rev. Myles P. Galvin was celebrant of the mass, Rev. William H. Kennedy of Newtown was deacon and Rev. John Reilly was sub-deacon. The master of ceremonies was Rev. Alfred Driscoll of Bridgeport and Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May occupied a seat in the sanctuary. Henry J. LaFontaine presided at the organ and at the offertory, Pie Jesu was sung by Roderick F. Sullivan. Mr. LaFontaine sang as the waiting hymn, When Evening Comes and at the recessional Mr. Sullivan sang Nearer, My God, to Thee.

The following six grandchildren were the bearers—Robert H., Patrick J., and Joseph J. Mahoney, John J., and James Sullivan. James Purdon, Jr., and burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery. There were a number of very beautiful floral tributes. The committal service was conducted by Monsignor May. In the large attendance at the funeral were friends and relatives from Branford, New Haven, Newtown, Hartford, Washington, D. C., Newark, N. J., Boston, Pittsfield and Brockton, Mass. Undertakers Shea and Burke had charge of the funeral arrangements.

James E. Keating

There was a very large attendance at the funeral of James Edmund Keating, held Wednesday morning at 8.30, from his home 16 Tanner street, Norwich Town. At 9 o'clock in Sacred Heart church, the pastor, Rev. Charles W. Brennan, celebrated a requiem high mass, during which the choir sang. The music was under the direction of the organist, Mrs. William A. Murphy. At the offertory, Miss Mary Buckley sang Pie Jesu, and for a waiting hymn she sang Consolation. For the recessional the choir sang Nearer, My God to Thee.

The bearers were James C. Mara, John P. Corcoran, personal friends; Hugh Finlayson, Harry Hiscox, shop employes of the United States Finishing Co., Ralph Patrick and John Lynch from Norwich lodge, No. 430, B. P. O. E.

In the large attendance were relatives from Waterbury, New Haven and New London and delegations from the Elks, Foresters and A. O. H.

A profusion of beautiful floral tributes expressed the deep sympathy of relatives, friends, lodge members and shop associates.

Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery, Rev. Father Brennan reading the committal service. Hourigan Bros., were in charge of the arrangements.

Peace Dance for Armistice Day

In celebration of Armistice Day the members of the Wednesday afternoon dancing class, Mrs. Edward Andrews, instructor, were favored with a talk on Peace and a dance, The Herald of Peace. The dance was given by Miss Nancy Pitcher dressed in white Grecian chiffon, her part being enacted in a very creditable manner.

From Chaplin it is noted that Rev. Joseph F. Cobb of South Windham, formerly of Norwich, preached at the Chaplin church Sunday.

HEART HEALTH HINT TALK IS GIVEN TO NORWICH ROTARIANS

"Blood Pressure and Its Relation to Health," was the subject of an interesting talk by Dr. R. R. Agnew at the Wednesday meeting of the Norwich Rotary club. Dr. Agnew treated his topic from a mechanical rather than a medical viewpoint. He likened the heart and its arteries and capillaries to the water system on the modern farm. The heart acts as a pump and forces the blood into the arteries which act as pressure tanks the same as in the water systems and insure a steady flow. These arteries are of an elastic make-up and expand, acting as reservoirs for the smaller arteries and capillaries. The veins act as return pipes conveying the blood to the lungs which act as filter beds.

Blood pressure is governed by the heart and the condition of the arteries and capillaries. If we take an old hose pipe and turn water into it the flow is smooth and free, but if we step on the hose shutting off the water it backs up and the weakest place in the hose bursts. This same thing occurs in the blood system. If the arteries become clogged there is a backing up of the blood and if the obsruction is not removed then there is a possibility of hemorrhage. Then if the arteries become hardened and there is a stoppage, then the strain comes on the heart and naturally the pressure is raised. Low blood pressure is due largely to some wasting disease, such as tuberculosis, Bright's disease or simply the infirmities of old age.

What are the causes of high blood pressure? One eminent physician has said that it is too much money. What he means by this is that the average man who works for a living gets considerable exercise and eats wholesome nourishing food. The man of wealth eats heartily of rich foods and his exercise as a general rule is not enough to work off the sediment produced by the rich foods. As a preventive of high blood pressure Dr. Agnew recommended discretion in eating and drinking, keep a cool head, have warm feet and keep free from constipation.

President J. Nelson Weymouth presided at the meeting and Grosvenor Ely was the song leader. Mr. Ely picked as his songs, those which were appropriate to Armistice Day and which were popular during the late war. In observance of Armistice Day P. Russell Smith, World war veteran and holder of the Croix de Guerre, read "In Flanders Field."

James L. Case, as president of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke briefly on Civic Pride and urged that all citizens take part in the slogan contest that the chamber is conducting, saying although one did not win a prize it showed that an interest was being taken in the city.

Among the delightful musical numbers during the luncheon was the programme given by a quartette, Grosvenor Ely, Rev. A. H. Abbott, Joseph C. Worth and Henry J. LaFontaine. Their numbers were heartily appreciated and the four vocalists responded liberally to several encores.

RADIO CLUB MEMBERS HEARD THE PHONOFILMS

The Norwich Radio club held its regular meeting tonight in the club room in the May building. Plans are being perfected and program arranged for a broadcasting evening from station WCAC, at Storrs college, in co-operation with Prof. Dan Noble, instructor in physics and manager of the college broadcasting station. Many of the local musical talent will be put on the air from station WCAC on the evening of Nov. 25, the day before Thanksgiving.

At 8 o'clock, the club adjourned to go to the Palace theatre to witness the showing of the Dr. Lee DeForest Phonofilm, or talking moving pictures. Through the courtesy of the Palace management the members visited the projecting booth where the principle and operation of this latest marvel of science were explained to them by Paul Seigman and Jacob Okrent, operators and representatives of Dr. DeForrest. This was especially interesting as a part of the equipment, the one used for reproducing the sound is nothing more nor less than an up to date radio set without the tuning unit, consisting in fact of a detector and a five-step amplifier, and the sound record is made on one side of the film by an apparatus which is the direct outcome of Dr. DeForrest's "Singing arc." This record is again transformed to electrical waves by means of a photo-electric cell. These are detected and amplified and finally transformed to sound waves by means of loud talkers distributed on the stage. The record of the action and of the sound are made side by side on the same film and at the same time, assuring perfect synchronism.

The "talking movie" is still in its infancy, but the demonstration given at the theatre was very realistic and when the distortions still present in the reproduction of the music and voices are eliminated this new development will probably revolutionize the moving picture industry.

Altogether the evening was pronounced by the club members to be highly educational and to strengthen the scientific interest which binds them together. One of the coming meetings will be completely given over to a discussion of the principles involved in the recording and reproduction of the Phonofilm.

SUPPER AND WHIST WITH AUXILIARY MEETING

A company of 31 members and friends of the Woman's auxiliary of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, assembled at the parish house Tuesday evening, for supper and an evening of sociability which was devoted to whist. Husbands and men friends of the members were special guests. The delicious supper served at 6:30, consisted of chicken pie, mashed potato, mashed turnip, cabbage salad, pickles, celery, rolls, cranberry jelly, cake and coffee. Those present pronounced this the finest supper ever served by the auxiliary.

The committee in charge comprised Mrs. May Lynes, chairman; Mrs Herman Gibbs, Mrs. Roswell J. Brown, Mrs. Charles Bentley, Miss Agnes Thorpe and Miss Lillian Carpenter, assisted by the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Charles Burbeck.

In the whist contest, Mrs. Margaret Hardenbrook took first ladies prize and Roswell J. Brown, first gentleman's prize. The consolation awards went to Mrs. George Fraser and Ralph Gibbs.

ARRANGING FOR MUSICAL SERVICE AT CHURCH

Prof. J. Lawrence Erb, head of the musical department at Connecticut college, was here at the Central Baptist church Wednesday evening to make arrangements for the musical service which is to be held at the church Sunday evening, Professor Erb will be at the organ and a chorus of the college girls will assist at the service at which the sermon will be by President Marshall.

Professor Erb is one of the famous organists of the country and his coming will be of much interest as those who people heard him with great appreciation in previous appearances in this city.

OBITUARY

Charles Chester MacGregory

Word has been received in Norwich of the sudden death of Charles Chester MacGregory at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., about 4 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Mr. MacGregory is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Bennett of No. 32 Williams St. His death was due to angina pectoris. He had not been in the best of health for a year but had been able to attend to his duties as instructor at the Commercial High school in Brooklyn, and had taught his classes as usual Tuesday.

About 23 years ago Mr. MacGregory was united in marriage with Miss Helen E. Bennett, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, the marriage ceremony being performed at Trinity Episcopal church by Rev. J. Eldred Brown. Mr. MacGregory was a veteran of the Spanish-American war and at one time was an instructor at the Springfield, Mass., high school. He was 54 years of age.

Surviving him are his wife and three children, Gardner Bennett MacGregory, a student at Cornell university, Carolyn Andrews MacGregory, and Lester Stewart MacGregory. He is also survived by his mother, one sister, Ethel of Newton, Mass., and a brother, Edward MacGregory of Boston.

When a man is sure that his friends never say unkind things of him he is sure that all his friends are dead.

WEDDINGS.

Kuralanka—Cuprak.

At St. Nicholas' church, Sunday afternoon, Rev. N. A. Sokoloff united in marriage James Kuralanka of Meriden and Miss Helen Cuprak, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cuprak of Harland road. Many relatives and friends of the couple were present.

The best man was Henry Kurslanka, brother of the groom, and the bridesmaid was Miss Anna Cuprak, sister of the bride. Other attendants were Vladimir Cuprak, brother of the bride, and Miss Mary Walke of Brooklyn, N. Y. The bride was charmingly attired in white crepe de chine and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. Following the church ceremony there was a reception and wedding dinner at the home of the bride's parents on Harland road. The bride and groom left during the day for a wedding tour to Virginia and on their return will reside in New London.

Miss Cuprak is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1924, and for the past year has been employed in a local dentist's office. Mr. Kuralanka is proprietor of a meat market business in Meriden. The bride received many beautiful and useful gifts.

Bjorn—Peckham.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett S. Peckham of No. 6 Phillips avenue, Mr. Peckham's sister, Charlotte Elizabeth, was united in marriage with Walfrid George Bjorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bjorn of No. 221 Laurel Hill avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, and the double ring service was used.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Charles E. Peckham. She was gowned in grackle head blue satin crepe and wore a corsage bouquet of white rosebuds. The best man was Elmer Bjorn, brother of the groom, and the bridesmaid was Miss May Wals. She was attired in tan satin crepe and wore a corsage bouquet of pink rosebuds.

After the marriage ceremony there was a wedding dinner following which the bride and groom left for a short wedding tour. On their return they will reside in their newly furnished apartment at No. 294 Laurel Hill avenue. The bride received numerous handsome and useful gifts. Both the bride and groom are popular with their many friends who wish them success and happiness in their married life.

Collins—Lathrop

A quiet wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, at the parsonage of the Greeneville Congregational church, when the pastor Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, united in marriage Miss Maud Gager Lathrop of Norwich Town, and John J. Collins of Fayerweather. The bride had as her maid Miss Justine Morrison, of this city and the groom was attended by Howard Ryan, also of Norwich.

The bride was gowned in sandwood rose silk, with hat to harmonize, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was attired in flowered jade crepe, wearing a hat of gold lace, and carrying orchid chrysanthemums. For several years the bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Lathrop, of Norwich Town, has been a successful teacher at the East Great Plain school.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Collins, of Pawcatuck. He is a silk weaver by occupation, having lately taken up a position in Norwich. Mr. Collins is also a veteran of the World war. During the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Collins left for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls. Upon their return, they will reside with the bride's parents at 4 Wauwecus street, Norwich Town.

Drescher—Benoit

In St. Patrick's church, Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, united in marriage Henry P. Drescher of No. 359 Central avenue and Miss Eva Benoit of No. 170 Broadway. Due to illness in the family only immediate relatives and friends of the family were present. The maid of honor was Miss Rose Benoit, sister of the bride; and the best man was Arthur Marcil of Baltic.

The bride was gowned in brown velvet with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Following the marriage ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Wauregan hotel. Later in the day the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to Montreal and other cities and on their return will reside at No. 170 Broadway. They will be at home to their friends after December 1st.

Mr. Drescher is employed as a clerk for the New Haven railroad and the bride has been employed by the J. B. Martin Co. Both bride and groom are well known and popular with their many friends who extend them best wishes for a happy married life.

Despathy—Larivierre

Monday morning at 8 o'clock at St. Mary's Memorial church, Wilfred Despathy of Moosup and Miss Rose Larivierre of No. 7 Hill street, were united in marriage by Rev. William A. Keefe, rector of the church. The bride's gown was of white satin with silver brocaded slippers. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley. Following the ceremony at the church there was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents on Hill street. There were about 60 guests present at the breakfast, including friends from New Bedford, Worcester, Northbridge, Taftville, Saundersville and Occum.

During the day the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to Worcester, New Bedford and Boston and on their return will reside in Moosup. Saturday evening a reception in their honor will be held at Moosup. The bride received many beautiful wedding gifts.

GILBERT FURNITURE CO. OPENING NEW STORE

One of the best appointed furniture houses in this part of the state is to be opened today (Thursday) when the Gilbert Furniture Co., successors to N. S. Gilbert & Sons, open their new store at 68 Broadway, the old T. M. C. A. building, now owned by the Messrs Gilbert and refitted by them specially to meet the needs of their business. On the attractive front two large plate glass windows, wide and deep and electrically lighted, flank the main entrance and give admirable opportunity for display purposes. The office is conveniently located at the front of the store.

On exhibition in one window for the opening day is a beautiful mahogany inlaid dining room suite of Duncan Phyfe design and the other contains a handsome upholstered parlor set covered in taupe mohair plush. With each setting are handsome Hartford saxony rugs, a quality noted for excellent wear and fine combination of colors.

Upon entering the show and salesroom which occupies the larger portion of the main floor, there is to be noted a fine and varied assortment of upholstered furniture and cabinet ware of high quality. An interesting and attractive appointment of the store is to be seen at the rear of this floor where five model rooms give opportunity for display of furniture fittings for the home. The living room to the right is fitted with colonial furniture and the dining room adjacent with a beautiful mahogany set in very handsome veneer. In a third room a chamber set in maple antique is displayed and another chamber is mother's room with cream paper and rose trimmings, dainty and effective. One corner is devoted to the kiddies, with appropriate nursery fittings and paper. One essential room in the household, the kitchen, is not overlooked and here the complete appointments are in grey enamel. The floor coverings are adapted to the decoration in each room, and the whole makes a special point of interest for visitors.

The second floor is devoted to an ample stock of rugs, carpets and linoleum, with upholstered goods and wall paper, besides an inviting assortment of easy chairs and reed furniture.

The third floor is given over to the display of bed room sets, chamber furniture and mattresses, while the fourth floor is assigned to dining room furniture of excellent quality and great variety.

The entire basement floor is used for the kitchen furniture department, comprising an extensive showing of stoves and kitchen cabinets.

An Otis electric elevator provides easy access from floor to floor for the convenience of customers. All goods are received on the Church street side of the building, where also the repair rooms are located, while the top floor of the building has been converted into five complete and modern apartments.

The Gilbert furniture house is one of the best known firms in this part of the state, having been established by the late Nathan S. Gilbert who came to Norwich nearly a century ago. In 1870 he admitted his two sons, S. Alpheus Gilbert and Nathan G. Gilbert, to partnership which continued for many years. Soon after the death of the latter, the surviving partner, S. Alpheus Gilbert, associated his son, Walter E. Gilbert, with him in the business and they are now opening the new store under the name of the Gilbert Furniture company. Their Broadway location is favorably chosen and has been admirably fitted and adapted to make one of the model stores of the city.

BROUGHT GIFTS TO SICK EX-SERVICE MEN

On Armistice day, the relief committee of the R. E. Hourigan auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Mrs. Rossmond Jacques, chairman, Mrs. Annie B. Turner and Mrs. Lena B. Maynard, made their monthly visit to the ex-service patients, at the two local state institutions.

To the sixty three ex-service men at the state hospital they brought cigarettes, chewing tobacco, candy and chewing gum. To the eight ex-service men at Uncas-on-Thames, they brought assorted fruit, candy and magazines.

Two post officers, Vice Commander Louis Hall and Ord Leseman accompanied the committee on their visits.

Needlecraft Club Met

Wednesday evening the Needlecraft club met with Miss Stella Riecolt at 68 Oak street for the weekly meeting. A buffet luncheon of chocolate, sandwiches and cake were served by the hostess assisted by Miss Eleanor Crowley. The club will meet next week at the home of Miss Helen Lockerman, 14 Mill street.

DESCRIBED HIS VISIT TO CITY OF ROME

Every seat was taken at the Men's Bible class supper at the local Young Men's Christian Association Wednesday evening. A brief Bible passage drill was conducted, several of the men quoting their favorite passages, etc. There was an innovation from the regular study, in the form of an informal talk by Joseph Carievale, who recently made a trip to Italy. He told of the several places he visited, and spent some time in his description of the city of Rome; he told of the religious condition of the city and mentioned the various denominations now doing religious work in Rome. He stated that there are many Methodists, this probably being the largest in numbers of adherents of any Protestant church in the imperial city. The Baptists and other Protestant denominations as well as the Methodists are growing. Mr. Carievale spoke of the wonderful beauty of the Vatican, and of some of the Catholic churches; he also told of the wonderful Y. M. C. A. building in Rome, in the center of the city, and of the great work it is doing, and of the favor it is finding among the young men of the city; plans were being made when he was visiting the association to make a drive to bring the membership of the Y. M. C. A. up to 3,000, the present membership being over 2,000. The address was full of interest, and quite a number of questions were asked of the speaker. Withal this session of the Bible class was one of the most interesting of the season.

TROLLEY KILLS FOX AT QUAKER HILL

Harold E. Moran of this city, employed by the Connecticut company, is in possession of a large gray fox which he ran over on the trestle at Quaker Hill Wednesday evening. The fox was walking across the trestle between the trolley rails and did not get out of the way of the trolley as it approached, the front part of the car hitting the animal. This is the second Reynard that Mr. Moran has killed in this way, the other being killed between Baltic and Willimantic.

Starting as a local secret society in Philadelphia in 1869, the Knights of Labor was the first society which aimed to gather all the workers of all trades into a single organization. It held its first general convention in 1878, and claimed a membership of more than 500,000 some ten years later when it reached the zenith of its power and importance.

CRANSTON'S

YALE-PRINCETON GAME FEATURE OF EASTERN FOOTBALL CONTESTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(By the A. P.)—Two of the east's oldest rivalries will spring into flame this week on the gridiron while other major battles of the coming Saturday feature intersectional or championship interest.

Both of these ancient football feuds, however, also involve title hopes, with Princeton's rampant Tigers attempting to break the Bulldog's grip on "big three" laurels at New Haven while Amherst seeks to snap the chain of Williams triumphs in the concluding game of the "little three" series at Williamstown, Mass.

The Princeton-Yale dispute is the elder, in fact the oldest of all existing gridiron rivalries. The Tiger and the Bulldog first clawed and snapped at each other back in 1873. In forty-eight struggles since that time, Yale has triumphed in 26, Princeton in 18 while nine have ended in deadlocks.

The Elis, decisively victorious in the past two years, are favored to advance toward their third straight "big three" championship by taking Princeton's measure although the Tiger, spurred on by his smashing triumph over Harvard last Saturday, can be expected to put up a desperate fight.

Amherst, beaten for four straight years by Williams, seems about ripe for revenge and a victory that will carry with it the "little three" title. Amherst swamped Wesleyan, 73-6, after which the latter conquered Williams, 10-2, but comparative scores have not been a trustworthy guide this season and the Purple is hoping to add another upset to the season's astonishing list.

These ancient rivals have met forty-one times since 1884, with Williams carrying off twenty-three victories and Amherst fourteen, while four games have been tied.

New York State's traditional foes —Colgate and Syracuse, appear more evenly matched than usual for their annual battle at Syracuse this Saturday. Neither has suffered defeat but each has been tied. Colgate by Lafayette and Syracuse by Ohio Wesleyan. Individual factors promise to play a big part in their struggle, with Eddie Tryon standing out as Colgate's ace and Jim Foley and Harlan Carr featuring the orange attack. Since 1891, these rivals have met twenty times, with Colgate winning on five occasions and Syracuse ten. Two games ended in ties.

Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh renew another traditional feud after a year's lapse with a close and hard fought contest in prospect. Penn's offensive will be fully fifty per cent. stronger with Al Kreuz, battering fullback, again in the lineup but Pitt has been coming strong since its early season setback at the hands of LaFayette. In addition, the Panthers have precedent to favor them, for they have lost only one out of ten previous battles with the Quakers.

Unusual interest is attached to the annual West Virginia-Penn State duel for it marks the dedication of the new stadium of the mountaineers at Morgantown, W. Va.

Harvard and Brown renew another of football's fixtures, this time in the new Providence stadium, with the Bears out to make it four straight over the battered Crimson forces. Brown has yet to win one of the major games in its all home schedule this season, having lost to Pennsylvania, Yale and Dartmouth.

Among the smaller colleges, the Tufts-Bowdoin feud, begun in 1894 and the Hamilton-Union contest, first started in 1893, also figure in this week's program.

TWO AGGIE COURT STARS PLACED ON MYTHICAL FIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 11.—(AP)—William K. Schofield '27 of Waterbury, and William Makofski '26 of Schenectady, N. Y., have been selected for the all-New England collegiate basketball team recently announced in the latest edition of Spaulding's official guide.

Both men were members of the Connecticut Aggie quintet last year, and their sterling work was a big factor in the team's success. Schofield now a junior was picked for one of the forward berths on the first team in his first year of intercollegiate court competition. Makofski, who is captain-elect of this year's team, was selected for the guard berth on the second team.

The complete first team is as follows: Forwards, Scofield, Conn. Aggies and Temple, Mass. Aggies; center, Smith, Amherst; guards, Partenheimer, Mass. Aggies, and Dunnack, Boston University.

The complete second team is as follows: Forwards, Samuels, Mass. Aggies, and Smith, Harvard; center, McKinley, New Hampshire; guards, Makofski, Conn. Aggies and Samborski, Harvard.

Selections are made by twenty-two college basketball coaches of New England. They can select only those men who have actually played against their own teams, and they are not allowed to choose men whom they have coached.

Both Schofield and Makofski will be available for the Aggie quintet this year, and they are expected to count heavily in the Connecticut scoring column. It is interesting to note that both are three letter men, having won their "C" in football, basketball and baseball.

AGGIE STUDENTS WILL HAVE SPECIAL TRAIN TO KINGSTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 11.—A "Connecticut Aggie Special" will leave Eagleville next Saturday morning at 8:30, bound for Kingston, R. I., where the State College eleven will play its objective game of the year with the Rhode Island team on the afternoon of the same day.

Alumni and friends of the institution desiring to go to Kingston on the "Aggie Special" may do so, according to Harold W. Wardle '26 of Bridgeport, who is chairman of the train committee. He stated this morning that stops would be made at Willimantic at 9:45, and New London at 9:30, when those going to Kingston may board the train.

On the return trip, a stopover of one hour will be made in New London for dinner, with the train scheduled to arrive in Willimantic at 10 p. m.

A rally was held in Hawley Armory last night, after which the student body signed up for the trip, making the "Aggie Special" a reality. There are still a number of seats left, according to Chairman Wardle, and alumni and others making the trip to Kingston will be welcomed. Expenses for the trip will be less than three dollars a person, according to the committee.

Irish Girls Win Another.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—The All-Irish field hockey team today added another to its string of victories over American teams by defeating the All-Philadelphia Girls 8 goals to 1 at the Merion Cricket club.

ACADEMY HAS FIGHTING CHANCE TO WIN TITLE

With Stonington beating Westerly 16 to 7 in the Armistice game at Westerly yesterday it gives the Academy a chance to win the Eastern Connecticut league football title. The chance is slim but there is a chance provided Westerly receives an upset in her next two league games. The standing to date is as follows:

	W	L	T	Pc.
Westerly	3	1	0	.750
Chapman	2	2	0	.500
Stonington	1	2	1	.333
Academy	1	2	1	.333

Westerly has another game with Chapman and one with Stonington and needs only one victory to clinch the title. The Academy has a game with Chapman on Saturday and another game with Stonington. Provided Westerly should lose both her games and the Academy should beat Chapman and Stonington the standing would read:

	W	L	T	Pc.
Academy	3	2	1	.500
Westerly	3	3	0	.500
Chapman	2	3	0	.500
Stonington	3	2	1	.400

Of course there is a possibility of a tie game in one of the coming contests which would change the status of the teams and possibly give the title to Westerly. The Academy's chances of beating both Chapman and Stonington are bright considering previous performances against these teams. The possibility that Westerly will lose two more games is very remote as Westerly clearly outclassed Chapman and will have a hard time duplicating the feat. Stonington, however, may repeat her victory when she meets Westerly at Stonington on Thanksgiving day. Still football is uncertain and there is no telling what might happen.

IMPORTANT GAMES IN N. E. CONFERENCE SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 11.—Although Massachusetts Aggies and New Hampshire rank at the top among the teams in the New England Conference, this standing may be changed following Saturday's contests, when important games are scheduled.

New Hampshire will met Maine at Orono, Me., in a contest that brings two Conference elevens together. Massachusetts Aggies, after a week with no game will play Lowell Textile at Amherst, Mass. Two other Conference elevens, Connecticut Aggies and Rhode Island, will stage their annual crash at Kingston, R. I.

"RED" GRANGE OFFERED $40,000 TO PLAY THREE PROFESSIONAL GAMES WITH GIANTS

CHICAGO, Nov. 11—"Red" Grange, regarded as the greatest running halfback of all times, it is reported, has an offer of $40,000 to play three professional football games with the New York Giants after he finishes his brilliant intercollegiate career in the Ohio State-Illinois game at Columbus, Nov. 21.

The report, however, lacked confirmation tonight both from Grange and athletic officials of the University of Illinois. Grange refused to confirm or deny the report.

Grange has been besieged with offers of every description since he first raced to fame in the Michigan-Illinois game a year ago.

These offers have been piling up since his upset of Pennsylvania when he scored three touchdowns and paved the way for the fourth. He has been offered contracts to appear in motion pictures, to engage in professional football and also write for a newspaper syndicate.

John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics in the western conference, said tonight he hoped Grange would refuse to play professional football no matter what alluring inducements were offered him. Griffith believed that if Grange played professional football his showing would be a disappointment.

"Grange needs perfect well-timed interference to enable him to get away on his thrilling runs and he will not get this in a professional game. They will simply hand him the ball and say to Grange, there it is now, now see what you can do.

"The college spirit is lacking in professional football. The players are not willing to risk injury to themselves just to enable an outstanding star to make a good showing."

Grange six months ago declined an offer of $25,000 to appear in an athletic motion picture because he did not wish to risk his amateur standing. Instead of accepting the screen offer he spent the summer peddling ice in Wheaton to keep him in physical condition and also to earn sufficient money to complete his university course.

MARA RIDICULES REPORT OF OFFER TO GRANGE

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—Rumors from the west that "Red" Grange, Illinois football star, had been offered $40,000 to play three games for the Professional New York Football Giants this fall were ridiculed by club officials tonight.

Tim Mara, the team's owner, said:

"In the first place we are limited under the league rules in the amount of money we can pay a player and for three games this limit would not reach $1,000 much less $40,000.

"In the second place we are under agreement not to tamper with football players while they are in college and I believe in the rule."

NUTMEGS TO CLASH WITH LORRAINE SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon at Sachem field, Falls, the Nutmegs and Lorraine A. C. football club will attempt to play off their game postponed of Sunday, Oct. 25. Both teams have undergone hard practices during the week in preparation for Sunday's encounter and a fast game is to be expected.

From the lineup given out last evening by Manager Winterbottom of the Westerly outfit it looks like the local boys are in for a busy afternoon. The following is the lineup for the Westerly Lorraine team: Ends, Kenyon, of the Bradford Dyeing association and Mark of Westerly High school; tackles, Brunkl of the Newport Training station and F. Carr of Westerly High; guards, Barker of W. H. S., and Ashworth of the Westerly Life Saving station; center, Robar. In the backfield will be seen such men as Travernett of S. H. S. at quarter-back, Buck Gavitt at right half and Mooney at left half, both these men are former Stonington High stars, and Blake of Providence college at fullback. Vell of S. H. S., Dibotlo of Providence college, Richards of S. H. S. and Stillman of W. H. S. will be in reserve.

The Nutmegs will rely on the following men to turn back the invaders: Ends, Kelly and Carlin; tackles, Butts and Pallicha; guards, Hagberg and Grover; center, Sullivan-Sadinsky. In the backfield will be McLaren at quarter-back, Capt. F. McGrath and C. McGrath at right half, Ludlow and Williams at left half with Herberts and Conerfry at fullback. Burns, Marchand, Boldrighine, Fidell and Steinman will be held in reserve.

The record of the Westerly team to-date is as follows:

Lorraine	Opponents
7	L. A. C. 3
10	Newport 0
7	Mt. Pleasant 6
24	9

The record of the Nutmegs to date is as follows:

Nutmegs	Opponents
24	Warriors 0
6	West Ends 0
42	Crescents 0
0	Speedboys 0
56	Yantic A. A. 0
128	0

From the above records it would seem that the Nutmegs have the advantage, scoring 128 points to opponents' 0 while Lorraine has scored 24 points to opponents 9, but Sunday's game will decide the issue and both teams will be out for blood.

SAME TEAM TO OPPOSE YALE THAT BEAT HARVARD

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11—(AP)—With the exception of right tackle position, the same Princeton football team that defeated Harvard last week will start against Yale at New Haven next Satrday, Coach Bill Roper announced today. He expects to replace Jeff Rosengarten at right tackle with Bob Darby, of Westfield, N. J., however, for the opening play, Rosengarten may go in later in the game.

Yale Wins Cross Country

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11—(AP)—Yale Freshmen were today given belated credit for winning the Freshmen Cross-Country race against Princeton held here last Satrday. The final score, as revised was 29 to 28 points, favoring Yale.

INJURIES AND SICKNESS HIT AGGIES TEAM HARD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 11.—With the objective game of the year with Rhode Island only three days away Coach Doland was forced to make several shifts in the lineup of his Connecticut Aggie eleven because of injuries and illness among his men.

John Daly, Hartford boy, who has starred all season at center, has his arm in a sling at the present time, as a result of a wrist injury received in the New Hampshire game. Trainer Daly stated tonight that he would be in condition to play Saturday, and meanwhile Lorentzen has been shifted from guard to center.

Nanfeldt, Connecticut's outstanding tackle, has a badly sprained ankle and he watched practice today from the sidelines. He, too, is expected to be ready for the Rhode Island game Saturday, though in case he cannot start, Longo will take his place.

Filmer, regular halfback is confined to the infirmary with the grip and Schofield, regular quarterback, is also ill. In practice today, Dole moved Moreland from half to quarterback, bringing Eddy into the backfield. Allard was at the other halfback berth in place of Filmer. Both Schofield and Filmer are expected to report tomorrow, however, in which case Dole will use his original backfield combination of Schofield, Filmer, Makofski and Moreland.

Logan, who has played a strong game when substituted at end, will not be able to play Saturday. A knee injury received in the New Hampshire game has put him definitely out of the running, though he may be in shape for the Rensellaer game a week later.

The lineup used in practice today was, ends, Captain Brink and Fiennenman; tackles, Zollin and Longo; guards, Bitgood and Johnson; center, Lorentzen; quarterback, Moreland; halfbacks, Allard and Eddy; fullback, Makofski.

A long signal drill and dummy scrimmage marked today's practice session, with all the plays that will be used against Rhode Island being carefully rehearsed.

DARTMOUTH LEAVES FOR GAME WITH CHICAGO

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—(A. P.)—Dartmouth's undefeated football team left today for Chicago where it will oppose the University of Chicago in the last game of the Green's schedule next Saturday. The entire undergraduate body and many townspeople formed a parade 2,000 strong and marched behind the college band to Memorial Field to watch the team run through its final practice drill in Hanover, and perform the time honored rite of burning the tackling dummy.

The squad, numbering 34 men, ran through signals before boarding the busses which took them through a double line of cheering students to the station and their special train. The team will be given a stopover at Flint, Mich., tomorrow for a brief practice and the final workout will be held on Stagg Field in Chicago on Friday.

Hardy, varsity tackle, will be the only cripple to make the trip. His injured hand will keep him out of the game, but Holleran who has been pushing him all season for the position will be ready to start. Bob Mction Phail, varsity quarterback, although not in uniform at today's signal drill will start next Saturday Coach Hawley said, otherwise the team was pronounced fit. The crowd at the field also witnessed the burning of the last two $5,000 mortgage notes on the alumni gymnasium, an event made possible by H. C. Davis, '96, who also has presented a $100,000 athletic field house to the college.

SPECTATOR OFFERS COMMENT ON BULKELEY-ACADEMY GAME

Sports Editor:

A few observations by one of the innocent spectators at the Academy-Bulkeley football game in New London, Saturday, may not be out of place, if your columns allow the space. As a football game it was decidedly disappointing, whether the interest was on one side or the other, for when the final whistle blew it was quite apparent that the score did not indicate the merits of the teams when real football was played.

If the, rulings of the officials had any bearing on the ultimate result; if these officials functioned as direct result of the efforts of a so-called Central Board to standardize the football methods among schools hereabouts (this statement made in Tuesday's Bulletin) then certainly the sympathy of the lovers of good clean sport should be offered this board.

The endeavors, as appearing to a spectator, to apply these so-called standards, were rather unfortunate. To mention but a few instances: The selection by the board of a man reported to be a graduate of Bulkeley as an official; (in the humble opinion of the writer, he should have at once declined to serve in any capacity), the threat that penalty would be imposed unless the Academy boys and girls stopped cheering; (the cheering in the opinion of the writer, deserved commendation and not censure) and the unwarranted "calldown" of the Academy coach during the game for coaching from the side-lines when to the knowledge of spectators he was absolutely silent. Other instances must suggest themselves to various readers.

And a good time was had by all—especially by those interested in the Bulkeley team, to whom a victory over the Academy this year was certainly a bright spot in a more or less drab football season.

MILTON WINS BIG RACE WITHOUT STOPPING ONCE

CHARLOTTE, N. C. Nov. 11—(AP)—Without halting once, Tommy Milton swept to victory at 124.3 miles an hour today in the 250 mile Armistice day automobile speedway event, his second triumph here.

Harry Harts was second, about three-fourths of a lap behind the leader, while Jerry Wonderlich finished third, four laps in Harts's rear.

Peter DePaolo and Earl Cooper were forced to withdraw due to motor trouble. Both were favorites, but valve trouble forced Cooper out, while in the lead, early in the race. Bob Mc Donogh catapulted through the inner railings of the track, but was not injured.

Milton with his time of 2 hours and 41 seconds, won $10,000; Harts credited with 2 hours, one minute and 12 seconds, $5,000; and Wonderlich, two hours one minute and 23 seconds, $2,750. The balance of the $25,000 awarded was apportioned to Norman Batten, fourth; Fred Comer, fifth; Frank Elliott, sixth; Ralph Hepburn, seventh; Leon Duray, eighth; Dave Evans, ninth and Dr. William E. Shattuc, tenth.

YALE SCRUBS USE TIGER PLAYS AGAINST VARSITY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—(A. P.)—A Yale scrub team presenting many of the plays used by Princeton against Harvard last Saturday, battled for thirty minutes today with the Yale varsity football team, the only scrimmage the coaches plan for the Blue eleven this week. Although the scrubs

COMMITTEE TO SIMPLIFY THE INCOME TAX LAWS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(A. P.)—Simplification of the income tax laws was favorably considered today by the house ways and means committee in connection with revision of the 1924 revenue act and it turned over to a sub-committee, the task of determining the feasibility of such a project and, the advisibility of appoint a special commission to work out a plan.

Several more of the main provisions to be incorporated in the new tax reduction bill were approved by the committee today and with most of this work accomplished, it adjourned until Monday. The decisions reached today included:

Retention of 10 per cent. tax on pistols and automatic revolvers.

Authorization of direct appeals from rulings of the board of tax appeals to the United States circuit court of appeals in the district in which the tax payers resides.

Authorization for the treasury to make compromise settlements in cases of insolvency where collection of full amounts due would force tax payers out of business.

Levy of an interest charge of six per cent. on assessments of 1917, and 1918 taxes subsequently confirmed. Interest is now charged on assessments of other taxes and non is paid by the government on refunds.

The committee turned down proposals to eliminate provisions dealing with capital gains and losses and to permit stockholders of small corporations to file returns as partners or to permit partners to file returns as corporations. In these instances it was agreed the loss in revenue which would result from elimination of the provisions would be too great for the government to stand at this time.

MITCHELL DEFENSE IN GENERAL COURTMARTIAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(A. P.)—Disposing of every obstacle put in its way by the prosecution today, the defense of Colonel William Mitchell proceded in its own way to support the charges he made against the war and navy air service administrations, for which he is being tried before a general court martial tribunal.

Representative Frank R. Reid of Illinois, in charge of defense, pressed his demand for witnesses as soon as the court opened. As a result, 36 summonses were sent out for witnesses living in various parts of the country after the court had been informed by Mr. Reid during a wrangle over the question that, if it failed to call the desired individuals, defense would summon them to pay all the expenses involved.

It was while the wrangle over witnesses was at highest pitch, that the question of evidence to support Colonel Mitchell's published charges came up for renewed discussion. Colonel Sherman Moreland, chief prosecuting officer, said the testimony the court was taking would be considered by him to be acceptable only in mitigation of extenuation of sentence. Mr. Reid declared it was his purpose to use it as a defense. This argument was passed over by the court, however, without any decision being reached by it or by the opposing counsel on the question of evidence.

Five witnesses were heard during the day's proceedings. They were carefully interrogated by the defense, and when the court recessed tonight the record showed still further corroboration of Colonel Mitchell's criticisms of aviation control as exercised by the war and navy departments.

Major General Brant, air officer assigned to the general staff; Colonel O. C. Pierce, of the air service reserve; Captain Byrne Baucom, and H. H. Harmon, on duty with air service headquarters, and Henry Rawdon, scientist, employed in the bureau of standards, were heard in turn.

TRUCK WITH STUDENTS RAN OVER EMBANKMENT

CINCINNATI, Nov. 11—Anna Lee Smith, 16, and Eleanor Mortashed, 15, two of the thirty seven Harrison, O., high school students injured today when a truck ran over an embankment into a creek near Westwood, Ohio, died at General Hospital here tonight.

We meet a lot of people every day who put questions merely for the purpose of getting a chance to answer them.

Repaid This Man A Dozen Times

"I have been repaid a dozen times over in improved health for every dollar I spent for Tanlac, and the medicine is still building me up every day," is the striking statement of Joseph DeSarne.

"Tanlac has driven pains from my body that had troubled me for ten years. Besides backache, which almost killed me at times, I had rheumatic pain and swelling in my hands and legs, my circulation was poor, feet always cold, nerves undone, my stomach didn't feel right, I had regular headaches and I was a discouraged man.

"I have never seen the equal of Tanlac in my life. It has more than doubled my appetite, my stomach feels great and my general health is so improved that I can not praise Tanlac enough for what it has done and is still doing for me."

What Tanlac has done for others, it can do for you.

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 millions of bottles sold.

THE CROW'S NEST

The crows! They're cawing in the meadow lot;
They're talking in a language that I know!
They haunt again the old fatalliar spot
When thorn-buds snowy in the thickets blow,
And all the world with summer-time is blest!
The crows! I love them tripping to and fro
For twig and vine to mend the woodland nest!

It seems so crude—high in the beechtop tree;
A bit of bramble, twisted weed and straw;
Some mud from eddies where the minnows be,
And silk such as the teasing fall winds draw
From ripened pods in faded lane and sea;
So crude, uncouth, but standing well the test
Of storms that shake the forest like the sea,
A floating wisp, a rocking cradle-nest!

Oh, often, Mother, we have watched it cling
When leaves are fallen low and woods are bare;
We've seen it in the first gray days of spring,
And in the winter's bleak and bitter lair;
We've seen the tall old beech above the rest,
Its lonely top against a sunset glare,
Upholding still a sad forsaken nest!

And now, when hawthorns whiten all the hills;
When golden warmth breathes in the earth once more;
When flittering comes of sailing daffodils;
And wide upon its hinges stands the door,
We hail the coming of an airy guest,
To ponder, beech so proudly tower—ing o'er
The forest with its bramble-budded nest!
—Leslie Clare Manchester in Dumb Animals.

Clouds

Domed like a hollow gem the sunlit vault
Hangs sapphire mists about me as I climb
Its pathless winds, aspiring to assault
Those orbiting shapes that dream and mock at time:

Clouds like the beating pinions of a host
Of white-robed angels moving on white wings;
Ghosts of man's brooding thought and lofty boast;
Philosophies of flux and changeless things.

Below, earth's crazy patchwork counterpane;
Above, the sapphire floor of Heaven's choir;
And midway, silence . . . and my ecstatic plane
Soaring through hills of iridescent fire.

Huge opals glowing, fading in the sky
So do we dream and burn, and pale and die.
—C. Gouverneur Hoffman, in Scribner's.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"How'd you come out in trig?"

"Not so bad—I was highest of all those who flunked."—Life.

"What did your boy learn at college?"

"The three R's."

"But what are the three R's?"

"Rah, rah, rah."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bargain Seeker to Clerk: "What do you take stock?"

Clerk: "Whenever we get a chance, but for goodness' sake don't tell the boss about it."—Technology Voo Doo.

Lecturer: "Allow me, before I close, to repeat the immortal words of Webster."

Hayseed (to wife): "Land sakes, Maria, let's git out o' here. He's a-goin' to start in on the dictionary."—Middlebury Blue Baboon.

Husband—(going through housekeeping accounts)—But whatever is the use of running accounts with four grocers?

Wife—Well, you see, dear, it makes the bills so much smaller!—Judge.

"Now, children, I want you to be nice while the bishop is here and not say anything that will mortify me."

"But, mamma, can't we just ask him if he will baptize the new kitten?"—Boston Transcript.

"Now," said an Irishman, after a serious accident to a fellow-miner, "we'll have to send some man to break the news to Moriarty's wife." "Send Hanuigan," suggested one of the gang. "He's just the man to break the news gradual—look how he stutters."—Twice Told Tales.

"New times, new problems—what now, Horatio?"

"My son is worried because he has to be popular with the girls or be out of the swim, in my youth you only had to be popular with one girl."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Muskogee, Okla., was treated to one of the weirdest of weather phenomena as a climax to a hot wave. At noon one day the thermometer registered 100. Three hours later, following wind storms within twenty miles, snow was falling briskly, the flakes melting as soon as they struck the pavement, however.

When a train stopped at West Farmington, O., one of the crew noticed a bantam rooster go under the engine. It did not emerge. When the train stopped at Swine Creek, eight miles distant, the engineer discovered the rooster sitting on one of the sprocks of the engine. The rooster was taken none the worse for its ride, from its roost.

A unique musical instrument has been made by Joseph Seney, of Holyoke. It is a metal violin, made from an old stovepipe and various other odds and ends. It has a bone bridge, steel strings and a bow formed from the cane of an old chair seat, and yet a person would have a hard time to distinguish its tone from that of an ordinary violin.—Boston Globe.

WESTERLY

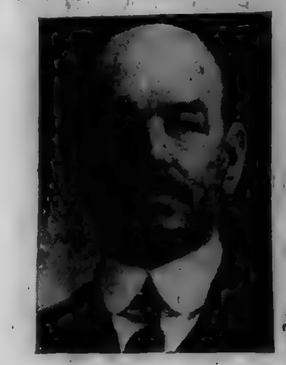
ARMISTICE DAY PARADE FINE MILITARY EVENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 11—Armistice day parade in Westerly, Sergt. Maj. Robert Atkins, marshal, Wednesday afternoon, presented a clean cut and as trimly military appearance as any seen in Westerly for some time. In the morning the 11 o'clock two minutes period of silence, directed by President Coolidge met with scant observance in the vicinity of Dixon Square for vehicular and pedestrian traffic moved unchecked. In contrast, the parade of Westerly veteran and patriotic organizations moved with military precision promptly at 2 p. m.

Forming on Elm street, right resting on Broad, the formation was:

Marshal, Sergt. Maj. Robert Atkins. Aids, James Rose, Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion; James J. Keane, Harley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Between the aids marched Col. Cyril L. D. Wells, commanding the 243rd R. I. C. A. C. (H. D.) and speaker of the day, accompanied by his aid Capt. Cruickshank.



SGT. MAJ. ROBERT ATKINS

First Division, Westerly Elkis band, Fred Kennedy drum major; Battery E 243rd R. I. C. A. C. (H. D.), Capt. John F. Datson. British and Colonial Great War Veterans, Commander Thomas Waddington. Bradford Boy Scouts, Amos P. Chapman camp, S. of V., Albert F. Lawton commander. Bus with Amos P. Chapman camp S. of V. auxiliary.

Second division, St. Michael's Fife and Drum corps, Harley P. Chase post, 1265, Commander Capt. Shelby Nicholas. St. Michael's Boy Scouts. St. Michael's Girl Scout Buglers. St. Michael's Girl Scouts. Robert Brucker camp Thomas F. Lenihan commander.

Boy Scout, Gordon Perrin of Ashaway on horseback bearing an American flag. Ashaway Boy Scout band. Harold W. Merritt post, No. 16 American Legion, George Kemp, commander. Ashaway Boy Scouts. Westerly Boy Scouts. Then followed ten automobiles containing members of Budlong post, G. A. R., members of Westerly chapter American Red Cross. Bus with members of Budlong Relief corps. Automobiles with members of the various auxiliaries.

The parade started on Broad street, through Dixon House Square, which was lined with people, across the Pawcatuck River bridge, West Broad street to Morgan street, countermarching to High street, down Grove avenue to the Granite street entrance of Wilcox park, and then to the band stand, where Col. Cyril L. D. Wells, speaker of the day made very appropriate remarks. George Kemp commander of the American Legion presented two American flags to a representative of the new Westerly hospital, on behalf of the legion post, the flags to be used on a pole, which the legion men have erected on the hospital grounds. Thomas McKenzie, a trustee of the new hospital, accepted the gift with fitting remarks in the name of the new Westerly hospital, the trustees, the board of managers, hospital staff and every one connected with the institution.

Col. Wells said in part that the thought of armistice day meant first to pause one moment in reverence to those comrades of ours whom we left overseas and to think how they would like to have us observe Armistice day. It would seem that a cessation of activities would be most fitting, for everybody to get together, to rejoice. The chance they had to assist was over there, but today there is need for military forces to maintain law and order in communities. "We do not do without our police force," he said. Today all rejoice that there are no hostilities and none expected and that we would allow no one to interfere with us in this form. Our duty is to take care of those who have come home without arms or legs, incapable of caring for themselves. We rejoice that we are able to care for them and resolve to take better care of them in the future. It was fitting that the Merrill post Legion should present flags to an institution, which could care for those suffering. To show our happiness we should sing and rejoice, showing "better love for our country, our God and our Flag." At the close of his speech Col. Wells asked that old familiar songs should be sung, but there was a pause, when some legionnaire remarked that if the Colonel should start it they would be right behind him. The familiar slogan, "we want to go home," was heard and the assemblage was dismissed without song.

TWO BADLY INJURED WHEN AUTO HITS TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 11—While driving toward Westerly Wednesday afternoon, on the Boston Post road, near Dunn's corner, Urbin Homer, 30, of Holley street, Riverside, R. I., ran his Chevrolet automobile into the side o fthe truck of Angelo Cappuccio of Westerly. As a result of the collision, Mrs Homer is at the Westerly hospital suffering from a possible practure of the pelvis and is in a serious conultion as shown by an X-ray which has been taken. Her son, Charles Homer, 6, is also at the Westerly hospital, receiving treatment for cuts, bruises, abrasions and an injury to his head, with possible concussion of the brain. They were given medical attention by Dr. John Champlin.

The accident happened as Mr. Cappuccio swung his truck loaded with gravel, from a gravel bank, out onto the state highway, where Mr. Homer claimed that he had the alternative of passing him either side with the chance of capsizing or hitting the truck and chose the latter. As a result of the collision the forward end of the Chevrolet was smashed and broken and the rear end injured. Mr. Cappuccio was given medical attention by Dr. John R. Huissi, it being thought that he had a cracked rib. A woman friend of the Homer party had minor cuts on her lips and face. In the party were four children, only one of whom received injuries, Mr. Homer was not injured.

Robert Bonner took the injured from the scene of the accident to the Westerly hospital.

Anxiety to get away from the armistice day observance in Wilcox park, lay in the fact that the annual football game between Westerly High school and their rivals, the Stonington high school at the Westerly athletic field at 2.30 o'clock had its appeal and although armistice day was being observed the call to witness the battle on the gridiron seemed louder with the result that the crowd assembled soon melted away to gather on the football field.

In a fairly evenly matched contest Stonington high school eleven won from Westerly high school by the score of 16 to 7. The score by quarters being:

S. H. S.	10	6	0	0	—16
W. H. S.	0	7	0	0	—7

In the cross country run entered by seven men from Stonington High, Westerly High and Chapman Tech of New London for two miles, Chapman Tech of New London was the winner.

Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock at the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Westerly, Rev. Orlo M. Brees, pastor of the Baptist church of Bradford, preached an armistice day sermon.

At 8 o'clock, the Westerly town hall was thronged with dancers at the armistice day dance of Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion, under the auspices of its entertainment committee. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Crandall-Sutcliffe orchestra.

Over a hundred sat down at the annual dinner of Harley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, which was held at 8 o'clock in Vets hall, Walton block, on West Broad street. At 9.30 o'clock entertainers from Hartford completed the evening with a program of musical selections, songs and dance.

Ideal weather with mild temperature and bright sunlit skies added to the enjoyment for morning, afternoon and evening, which was marred by no accident of any kind. Extra policemen were on duty to care for the increased traffic before and after the parade and also at the athletic field, where the football game was played. There was a general display of the Stars and Stripes on public buildings, business places and private dwellings.

Mrs. Isaac Harvey, 67, died Monday afternoon at her home, 28 Clark street, following an illness which extended over a period of several years. She was an earnest worker and devoted member of the First Baptist church of this town.

She leaves besides her husband seven children, Mrs. Christopher Shea of New York, Mrs. Alfred Donohue of Boston, Thomas Harvey of Susquehanna, Mrs. Helen Allen of Westerly, Mrs. Frederick Barker of Westerly, Henry Harvey of Westerly and Miss Evelyn Harvey. There are also 11 grandchildren.

Three brothers also survive, Daniel A., and Ernest M., of this town and Elisha Edwards of Bradford.

Mrs. Harvey was born in Westerly and had always lived in this town. She was the daughter of the late Elisha and Mary Stanton Hall. About 35 years ago she was married to Isaac H. Harvey of this town.

Westerly Music club members and their guests gathered at the Methodist church Tuesday evening for the first number in the winter program of the organization an organ recital by Hugh Boring Porter of New York, one of the best known of the younger organists of the city. Preceding the program Mr. Porter reviewed briefly the history of organ music and declared that the present was the "golden age" for an instrument which had previously had its limitations because of its sole connection with the church. He referred to the popular use of the organ now in some of the country's leading playhouses.

Interest was added to the selections played by Mr. Porter in his references to the composers. He interpreted selections from Corelli, Wildor, Bach, Tschaikowsky, Boellman, Bairstow, Vierne and Guilmant with technical skill and beautiful effects.

Leading critics and the press many times have declared that Mr. Porter has the exceedingly rare talent of making an organ recital interesting. His playing is marvelous. He takes every advantage of tone colors and mixes them so wisely that the most beautiful and enchanting effects are obtained.

One of the selections he played was Scherzetto, from 24 pieces in free style by Vierne, a very modern French composer. With it he demonstrated to the audience that the organ could be used with rare effect to produce bizarre tone color combinations.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk there appears: Nov. 9, Walter Gresham Andrews of Buffalo, executor of the estate of William Henry Andrews to Lewis F. Harder, Philmont, Columbia Co., New York, lot or parcel on north side of Watch Hill road, south of Pawcatuck river.

Leaving Westerly by automobile on Monday next for Miami, Fla., are John Patton, Harold Miner and Arthur Scott of Westerly and Charles Button of Pawcatuck. These young men plan to secure employment in Florida and return to Westerly in time for the opening of the seashore season here.

John DeFanti is enjoying a two weeks vacation.

N. Henry Lanphear is confined to his home in Pawcatuck by illness.

Tells how hops take care of sprains and strains

ACHES AND PAINS ARE SOON FIXED UP

Simple, easy treatment brings quick relief

Quick, sure relief from pain is what men want when they get lamed up from over-exercise or exposure, or when they get a sprain or bruise.

A soldier in the Sixth Pennsylvania Infantry writes from camp:—"Sloan's is a great thing for us boys in the army. After a stiff hike or drill your muscles are bound to ache, but they are soon fixed up with Sloan's. It's great stuff for muscle-bound legs, lame backs, stiff necks, sprains or bruises."

The reason that Sloan's Liniment gives such remarkable relief is that it gets right at the cause of the pain. It stimulates the circulation throughout the place where the pain is, and clears out congestion.

Right away you feel relief. Stiff muscles limber up, the aching stops, and soon you are fit as ever. No need to rub. Sloan's does the whole job. Just pat it on! Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Spoils a Hunting Party

Help another when you may;
Perchance you'll need his aid some day.—Peter Rabbit.

Fall is the glad time and the sad time, and to some it is also the dreadful time. You see, it is the season when the hunters with terrible guns are seeking some of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. Peter Rabbit long ago learned that it is wisest to stick to the dear Old Briar-patch during the daytime at this season of the year. To be sure, no hunters were allowed on Farmer Brown's farm. There were signs warning them that no hunting was allowed there. Nevertheless, the little people there had to be always on the watch. You see, sometimes hunters, knowing that Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's boy were not at home, would hunt there in spite of those signs.

But at night Peter felt quite safe from the hunters with terrible guns, then he could go where he pleased with no need of watching out for any one excepting Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Hooty the Owl and Yowler the Bob Cat. He was so used to watching out for these that they really didn't worry him at all. It is a part of the daily lives of many little people to be continually watching out for four-footed and feathered enemies. So Peter didn't worry about them.

Peter Rabbit darted away right under the very nose of the dog

One night he had just reached the edge of the Green Forest when he saw strange lights moving across the Green Meadows toward the Green Forest and he heard the voices of men. "This is queer," thought Peter. "What can those two-legged creatures be doing over here at night? I think I'll sit around a while and watch."

But Peter didn't sit very long. A dog surprised him where he was sitting. It was a strange dog. It was a dog Peter never had seen before. Of course Peter took to his heels. He darted away right under the very nose of that dog. Away went the dog after him! And how that dog did bark! Peter dodged as only Peter can. The dog kept after him for quite a distance and then gave up the chase. You see, he heard his master calling for him. You should have seen that dog as he crept up to his master's feet. His tail was between his legs and his head hung low. You see, he knew that his master would scold him. He wasn't supposed to chase Rabbits. He was out to hunt Bobby Coon. He wouldn't have thought of chasing Peter had not Peter happened to jump from under his very nose. This was more than he could stand.

So, after he had been thoroughly scolded, this dog was sent on by his master and at once he began to run about the Green Forest with his nose to the ground. He was trying to find the scent of Bobby Coon. Now Peter had discovered right away that that dog was not very much to be feared, and Peter's curiosity led him to turn back when the dog turned back. Peter didn't know who those hunters were after. He didn't know it was Bobby Coon. So he was full of curiosity to see what was going to happen.

What did happen was that once again he jumped out from under the very nose of that dog, and away they raced. It was more than that dog could stand to have Peter right under his nose that way. This time when the dog returned to his master he was punished. Then once more he was sent to look for Bobby Coon's trail and again all he could find was Peter Rabbit's. Peter seemed to be taking great delight in running races with that dog. The truth is he was enjoying it. He was sure in his own mind that there was no real danger from that dog, and he knew that that dog's voice would keep away other enemies. So Peter was having a perfectly good time. He probably would have enjoyed it still more had he known just what he was doing. You see, the truth is he was spoiling a hunting party. That party was after Bobby Coon, and because Peter kept getting in the way of that dog and leading him away, Bobby Coon couldn't be found. He was doing Bobby Coon a good turn, a very good turn indeed, but he didn't know it. You know all of us often help others without ever knowing it.

After Peter had led the dog off for the fourth or fifth time the hunting party gave up the search of Bobby Coon that night. They were very much upset and put out as they tramped away with the dog at their heels and they blamed it all on the poor dog.

140 PENS START IN STORRS EGG LAYING

The fifteenth annual laying contest at Storrs started off promptly on November first with 140 pens of ten birds each, a total of 1,400 pullets, the choicest in the land, all groomed and ready to go. The prime consideration in the selection of the pens has been to pick pullets that the owners believed would lay the most eggs in a year. In addition many breeders in their effort to combine appearance and production send to the laying contest birds that could be transferred to the showroom with little or no loss of prestige. In other words poultrymen have been sensible to a growing public demand for the beautiful as well as the useful. Naucook Farm from Tyngsboro, Mass., drew first blood, so to speak, when their pullet No. 542, almost before breakfast laid the first egg in this fifteenth annual egg race.

The geographical distribution of the birds plainly suggests that laying competitions are not merely local affairs. In the Storrs contest there are 350 pullets entered by Massachusetts breeders. Connecticut poultrymen have supplied the next largest number, a total of 320 birds; New York and New Jersey are tied for third place with 130 birds each; Pennsylvania poultrymen have entered eighty birds; Rhode Island and New Hampshire have each sent fifty; Vermont forty; Michigan thirty. The remaining 220 pullets hail from Maine, Missouri, Maryland, Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio, North Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee, Delaware, Texas, Washington, Oregon, Florida and the Province of Ontario.

Almost without exception the entire lot of 1,400 hens reached Storrs in splendid condition as evidenced by the fact that during the first week these pullets laid 1,128 eggs or a yield of nearly eighteen per cent. The performance of one particular pen is almost unbelievable. The ten birds in question traveled 3,000 miles by train, arrived at the contest grounds only one day ahead of the time scheduled to start, and then on the second day of the contest laid 9 eggs. All the pullets are getting an extra meal at nine o'clock every evening. After an hour for feeding the lamps are dimmed and the birds are allowed fifteen or twenty minutes in which to get back to bed.

During the first week of the contest Connecticut and Massachusetts breeders broke about fifty-fifty. Mrs. Minerva R. Monroe's pen of White Wyandottes from Mystic, Conn., got away to the best start with a score of fifty eggs. John Z. LaBelle's pen of Reds from Ballouville, Conn., was an uncomfortably close second with a total of forty-nine eggs for the first week. Meadowedge Farm, that had the second best pen of Leghorns in last year's contest, has made a better getaway than any other Leghorn pen and tallied forty-three eggs in the first lap of the race. Another Massachusetts pen of Leghorns owned by Mount Hope Farm, of Williamstown came across with 42 eggs.

SAYS WOMAN'S FUNCTION IS HOME MAKING

A theory, much discussed, that college women do not marry was dissipated in light of announcement Tuesday from the personnel bureau of the Connecticut college for women, that virtually one-fourth of the 474 graduates are already married. The college was started in 1915 and its oldest alumnae have only been out of the college six years. Of the 123 who who are married 53 are mothers.

President Benjamin Tinkham Marshall of the college does not entertain the idea that a college training spoils a girl for home-making. He contends on the other hand that there is no justification for any woman's college unless it better fits a girl to become a better home-maker.

President Marshall says on this point: "Under no circumstances is a college for women justified in presenting or conducting a curriculum, or making an emphasis or setting up a theory of philosophy of woman's sphere of activity, that shall mis-educate young women or divert them from assuming ultimately, in the great majority of cases, their true function of home makers and mothers.

"But within the curriculum of a college for women may well appear, indeed, imperatively should appear, those subjects and that training which bear upon the creation of beauty and atmosphere in all the home; that shall make women cultured, resourceful and adequate for all normal domestic and social requirements; yes, that shall equip her with resources of mind and heart and shall comfort her and enrich her when she must be alone; resources, I mean, in a love of good books, a joy in subjects of art, an instinct and faculty toward the creation, with her own hand and skill, of things beautiful, worthy and satisfying, from things culinary and economic upward to things that reveal her thought, her genius in words or ideas in color, music or other art; not forgetting that the art of home making is still awaiting for higher development and for most of us, after all, is second to none, so comprehensive it is, so necessary, so fascinating, so rewarding.

"No less must that training and experience be afforded that shall equip students for their prospective exalted duties in the state, in the use of the franchise, and their share of government."

Given Jail Sentence.

In the city court Wednesday morning Arthur Simons, 41, colored, was sent to jail for 10 days by Deputy Judge H. H. Fetth, the charge against Simons being breach of the peace. The charge grew out of trouble which Simons made Tuesday at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Barbara Simons on Thames street.

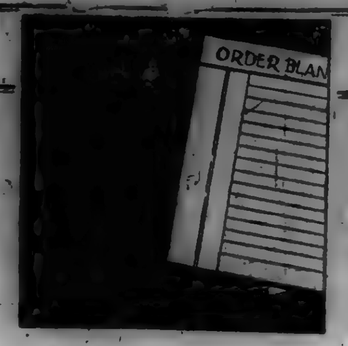
Benefits of Massage Without Massage

You all know the splendid benefits of expert facial massage. But do you also know that if improperly done, or too frequently, it tends to loosen the skin, weaken the muscular foundation, producing sags and wrinkles?

If more women only knew it, all the good of massage, and more, with no harmful effect, may be had by applying a simple mixture of powdered tarkroot and lemon juice, a spoonful of each. This, instead of making the face flabby, does the very opposite. Its action is perfectly astounding. In your mirror you see wrinkles, age lines and sagginess literally "ironed out"—in less than 15 minutes! A beautifully rounded contour results and a youthful pink glow mounts the cheeks. You can obtain an original package of powdered tarkroot from any druggist, enough to bring the cost of each treatment down to three cents or less! It's the greatest thing yet discovered to make old looking faces young looking.



Help the retailer to quicker turnover

MANY retailers have found out that there is more profit in small stocks, kept fresh through timely re-orders, than in large inventories which have a strangle-hold on capital.

Sagacious manufacturers, jobbers, and wholesalers are alive to the situation. They are winning the good will of this class of customers by helping them to keep their goods moving.

Toll telephone service is a big factor in this program.

In the intervals between a saleman's visits to his trade, frequent toll telephone calls make it possible to care for a customer's wants as often as they may arise. Orders can be taken down, special numbers suggested, prices quoted, shipment arranged—all in one toll telephone conversation.

It is a service which brings appreciation as well as profits.

GIVES OPTIMISTIC REPORT ON CONNECTICUT BUSINESS

"On the whole, from all standpoints, insurance, commercial, industrial, agricultural and financial in general, Connecticut is in good shape and looks forward with confidence to the future"—this optimistic opinion is set forth in a business review prepared for the Connecticut Chamebr of Commerce by Goodwin B. Beach of Hartford.

This review was prepared at the request of the California development association, the largest state chamber of commerce in the United States. This association will shortly carry a business symposium with reviews submitted from each state in the country by the various state chambers of commerce.

The complete review submitted by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce to the California development association follows:

"The general run of business in Connecticut throughout 1925 has been good. The greatest single industry in the state is insurance, which however, is largely confined to Hartford. This has been expanding at an unprecendented rate throughout the year, owing to the greatly increased demands for all lines of insurance and because of the known strength and loss paying record of the Hartford companies.

The banking situation in Hartford is good; money is not too easy to afford the banks a good rate, nor too high to allow its profitable use. The financial situation in the state in general is good. The banks have money at fair rate for all who can put it to legitimate use.

Factories in general throughout the state are busy, very few still suffering from the effects of the war and some on the other hand operating nights. Those catering to the automobile trade either directly in the way of constituent materials or indirectly in the way of machinery and tools are naturally very busy. Even the textile industry is picking up and operating satisfactorily.

Retail commercial lines are prosperous. A good volume of goods is moving and profits are fair. This, of course, is due in large measure to the activity at factories and insurance companies. The automobile trade has been especially brisk. This has stimulated road building in the state. The least degree of prosperity has been in the agricultural field. Tobacco, particularly broadleaf, and other cigar tobaccoes are our biggest single crop. Owing to taxes and for other reasons the demand for cigars has for some time lessened. This backed up the older crops. The situation is now clarifying itself. The older tobacco crops have begun moving. This should ease the situation with the banks decidedly. The 1925 crop is unusually excellent and should put the industry on its feet again. As in many other one crop sections, such as the wheat belt and the cotton belt, there is too little diversification. There is an attempt now to induce farmers to diversify their crops more. Success in that endeavor will bring in its wake greater prosperity.

On the whole, from all standpoints, insurance, commercial, industrial, agricultural and financial in general, Connecticut is in good shape and looks forward with confidence to the future."

War on H. C. L. Subsides

That much trumpeted campaign of the German government against the high cost of living has come down to sporadic application of the so-called usury laws. Recently the Reichstag voted a law which proclaimed high profits usury. Now police squads visit the various shops and examine the books. If the net profits are more than 15 per cent the owner is fined heavily. Curiously enough, it has been all but proved that not the retailers but the producers and wholesalers are responsible for the high prices once too often," responded one of the officers. "You go home and stay there."

HIRAM H. CROOKER DIES— CROCKER HOUSE EMPLOYE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11—Hiram H. Crooker, about 64, and employed as elevator operator at the Crocker house, died suddenly of heart trouble, aggravated by an acute attack of indigestion, early this morning at his residence, 83 Bank street. He is survived by his wife. Prior to being employed at the Crocker house, he was employed on sound steamers.

Mr. Crooker performed his duties at the hotel until about 12 o'clock when he went home because of the attack of indigestion. Mrs. Crooker endeavored to persuade her husband to let a physician be summoned, but he refused to have medical attendance, declaring that he would be relieved by taking some home remedies. Mrs. Crooker gave her husband some simple remedy, after which Crooker retired. He obtained only temporary relief and shortly after 1 o'clock while his wife was at his bedside, he suffered another attack and expired before a physician could be summoned. Mrs. Crooker called in Patrolman Edward Riordan, who was on duty at the corner of Bank and Golden streets and an examination revealed that her husband was dead. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman pronounced death due to disease of the heart.

Mr. Crooker had been in the employ of the hotel only a few months having entered the employ of the hostelry since the structure was damaged by fire last summer.

LED POLICE TO FIND "MAN'S SKULL"

An excited small boy of about eight years old who came to police headquarters this week with the story that he had found a man's skull and bones near a cave on Hinckley hill gave three Norwich policemen a stiff cross country and uphill climb when they were sent out from headquarters to solve the mystery. Officer Charles Smith with the patrol wagon was dispatched to make the search, picking up Officers William Sharvan and John Donovan on the way as he drove through Franklin square. The wagon was driven over to Talman street and parked near former Alderman Henry Gebrath's house from where the officers began their climb of Hinckley hill with their boy guide. He led them up and up through the rocks and brush and grass till he finally pointed out his find—the skull and bones of a horse that had been whitening there for two years.

"Do you want me to go back to the station with you?" inquired the boy as the disgusted officers turned to leave the spot. "No, you've been there

EARN LIVING BY COMBING PARIS FOR LOST ARTICLES

In Paris has developed recently a new profession, that of "finders of lost property."

Several men who dislike working in close rooms for small remunerations have formed an association, and from early morning till sunset they wander through the streets looking carefully at the sidewalks and under the tables and chairs of many open-air cafes.

If they find an object of value they wait for a day or two to see whether the loser offers a reward through the newspapers. If this does not happen they take the finds to the police station, which pays them 10 per cent of the estimated value of the objects found, either when the loser comes to claim it, or after a year, when it is sold at auction as unclaimed property.

Coal provides 80 per cent. of the power used in the United States, oil and gas 23.3 per cent. and water 5.5 per cent.

How to Quickly Limber Up Sore, Stiff, Swollen Joints

It was a high-class pharmacist who saw prescription after prescription fail to help hundreds of his customers to get rid of rheumatic swellings and stiff, inflamed, pain-tortured joints.

And it was this same man who asserted that a remedy could and would be compounded that would make creaky, swollen, tormented joints work with just as much smoothness as they ever did.

Now this prescription, rightly named Joint-Ease, after being tested successfully on many obstinate cases, is offered through progressive pharmacists to millions of people who suffer from ailing joints that need limbering up.

Swollen, twingy, inflamed, stiff, pain-tortured joints are usually caused by rheumatism, but whatever the cause, Joint Ease soaks straight in through skin and flesh right down to the tendons and ligaments of the joints—right where all the trouble starts—and then blessed relief comes quickly.

Remember, Joint-Ease is for ailments of the joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, spine or finger, and when you rub it on, you may expect speedy and gratifying results.

It is now on sale at Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere for 60 cents a tube.

Always remember, when Joint-Ease gets in joint agony gets out—quick.

BROOKLYN MARATHON WILL BE REVIVED AGAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—The Brooklyn Marathon, one of the most famous of the nation's endurance tests before the war will be revived again, athletic officials of the 13th Regiment Armory announced today. The event, inaugurated in 1908, has been won by every distance star of note in the country, Frank Zuna winning the last renewal in 1917.

The course will be the regulation marathon distance from the 13th Regiment Armory in Brooklyn to Jamaica and return, the last furlong to be run on the indoor track at the armory. The date has been set for February 23, 1926.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE MEETING IN DECEMBER

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(A. P.)—The annual meeting of the International Baseball league will be held here either Sunday, December 6 or December 14, John Conway Toole, president of the league announced today.

The by-laws of the league stipulate the meeting must be held in an international league city, December 14, but in view of the major league meeting here during that period, President Toole has asked for a mail vote to shift the scene to New York, and the date one week ahead to correspond with the major league conferences.

ADIE WILL BE LOST TO HARVARD TEAM

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11—(A. P.)—Jack Adie who played center on last year's Harvard football team but was shifted to end early this season, has been stricken with appendicitis and will be lost to the team for the rest of the season.

Coaches were relying upon Adie to get the fight back into the Harvard team in preparation for the game with Brown Saturday and Yale the following Saturday. While working out at center yesterday Adie was stricken suddenly. Today it was decided that an operation would be necessary.

DENTAL WORK IN THE SCHOOLS EXHIBITED

In the window of the Plaut-Cadden store on Main street an interesting and instructive display of the dental work done in the schools is made. The chair and apparatus for the dental clinic occupies the center of the window and around it is arranged a graphic illustration of the dental instruction that is given the children. The use of the toothbrush, the right and the wrong foods for tooth health for children are shown. With posters drawn by the children on dental subjects. A feature of the exhibit is a miniature train carrying the fruits and vegetables that contribute to healthy teeth, while an equally impressive demonstration is given by two houses, one built of the materials that result in malnutrition and the other of materials that give health.

Automobiles in Collision.

Automobiles driven by Charles A. McIntyre of 152 Broad street and Joseph C. Harrison, R. F. D., 1, Preston, were in collision Wednesday evening on Main street near Cliff street. Minor damages was sustained by each car.

MILLS ASSOCIATION ELECTS WALTER KING PRESIDENT

Over 175 representatives of the various mills in Eastern Connecticut attended the third annual meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association held Wednesday evening at the French River inn, Mechanicsville. The meeting was featured by the annual banquet, entertainment and business session at which the annual election of officers took place. Norman Parkhurst of Jewett City, retiring president, presided as toastmaster and also at the business session.

The officers elected were: President, Walter King of the Guerin Mills, Mechanicsville; vice presidents, Geo. Robertson, Quinebaug Co., Danielson; Fred P. King, Goodyear Mills, Harry C. Crandall, Lorraine Mfg. Co., Westerly, R. I.; Leroy Bennett, Aldrich Mills, Moosup; Alfred R. Boutiller, Tolcott Mills, Versailles; secretary and treasurer (re-elected), Prentice W. Chase, Ashland Cotton Co., Jewett City. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were given and showed the organization to be in good financial condition and the membership representing 30 mills and composed of 252 overseers, agents and superintendents.

Among the guests at the meeting was Governor John Trumbull who gave a brief address to the mill men extending the greetings and congratulations of the state. Owing to a previous engagement Gov. Trumbull requested that he be excused from giving a lengthy address but promised to address the men at some future meeting.

Warden Walter A. Anderson of Danielson, one of the speakers of the evening, favored the guests with anecdotes which proved very amusing.

The principal speaker of the evening was Judge Jacob Asher of Worcester, who proved to be a most interesting speaker and emphasized the necessity of community clubs and the proper rearing of children and young men in congenial surroundings. He interspersed his talk with many witty stories to illustrate many of his points.

The music of the evening was furnished by the Winged-Foot orchestra of Goodyear which rendered many selections. George Goulscon of Boston, who has aided the association in numerous ways in its progress, acted as song leader.

Fred L. Babcock, editor of Fibre and Fabric, a textile trade journal, and the father of the association, was another guest of the evening.

RALLY IN THE PRICES OF STOCKS YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Speculators for the advance staged a remarkable buying demonstration in today's stock market in an obvious attempt to prove that the "bull market" was not over, despite yesterday's dramatic collapse of quoted values.

Industrial stocks, as indicated by the average of twenty leading issues, recovered approximately half of yesterday's losses while railroad stocks not only made up all their lost ground but swept forward to a new high level for all time. Today's total sales were computed by Associated Press tabulators at 2,604,600 shares, as against the record-breaking total of 3,340,000 reached in yesterday's momentous session.

Initial gains, which ran from one to five points, gave evidence of strong banking support, and quickly allayed fears that yesterday's sharp break would bring in a large volume of "panicky selling" at the opening and carry prices still farther downward, the market did waver for a time after the overnight accumulation of buying orders had been absorbed, but snapped back vigorously and continued to climb upward until the close, despite occasional outbursts of bear selling and profit taking apparently intended to test the character of the buying.

Powerful financial forces working for higher prices called attention to the fact that fundamental business conditions were sound, even though speculation for the rise had been carried to excess in many issues. The buying movement, which they set in motion, was given impetus by the easing of call money rates, the resumption of dividends on American Sugar Refining common, the publication of favorable weekly steel trade reviews, rumors of the forthcoming increased and extra dividend distributions, and the rally in cotton futures.

Toads Are Most Useful Workers

Because toads are so ugly people have come to believe that they are harmful, and to connect all manner of superstition and legend with them. On the contrary, they are the most innocent and useful creatures in the world. They are fine to have in the garden, because they destroy the insects without themselves destroying plants, and French gardeners keep them just for this purpose.

All that a toad requires is a nice damp, dark place to live during the day. At twilight he comes out to feed. If you have never seen a toad eat it is because he does it so quickly. As soon as an insect comes within range he whips out his long thin tongue in a flash—and the insect is gone. You can test him by putting a lump of sugar in front of him, for he is quite fond of sugar.

If you should touch him roughly he would give out a poisonous liquid, and this liquid is what makes dogs foam at the mouth when worrying a toad. Because this is the toad's only means of protection when assailed, he has a dull brown coat the color of the ground, so that his enemies will not see him. He will change color slightly to match the color of the soil if his home is changed.

BALKAN GIRLS FORGET ART OF EMBROIDERY

Many residents of this part of Europe regret that Balkan peasant women are permitting their daughters to forget the art of embroidery. At one time every Balkan girl used to embroider, with the result that one saw really magnificent costumes in the villages. Like the old Scottish clans, each district had its particular type of embroidery. The Macedonian blouses and sleeves were especially striking. In Rumania some society have set on foot an organization to encourage embroidery among the peasants. Unfortunately the latter seem to prefer cheaper and more gaudy manufactured clothes and silks that are not a tenth part as decorative as were their homemade productions. When Paris dressmakers set the fashion of embroidering evening dresses buyers visited the Balkans in search of designs and materials but the supply proved unequal to the demand.

Humidity Tests

That the human body, in a state of rest and in still air, cannot endure indefinitely a temperature higher than 90 degrees Fahrenheit with 100 per cent relative humidity has been determined by the department of interior investigators at the Pittsburgh experiment station of the bureau of mines, co-operating with the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

In the course of the tests it was noted that the heavier and stouter men of the experiments, when subjected to uncomfortably hot temperatures, lost more weight than the lighter and thinner men, but as a rule could endure such temperatures for a longer period and complained less of the exhaustion which followed. Loss of weight in the subjects experimented with gradually increased with an increase in atmospheric temperature.

Whenever the subject drank ice water he immediately gained in weight, and in all cases the subject within 24 hours usually regained the entire weight lost. Subjects who drank ice water freely after exposure to high temperatures felt no ill effects, tending to disprove the assumption that such action develops severe cramps. The pulse rate rather than the rise in bodily temperature apparently determines the extent of the discomfort experienced by the subject.

"Ladybug King"

Catching ladybugs in the high mountains of Washington state to save the fruit ranches of the low lands has developed into a profitable though decidedly unusual industry on the Pacific coast, says Popular Mechanics.

One bug hunter, who is known as the "king of the ladybug industry," supplied 3,000,000 of the insects to fruit growers this year, but reported the "crop" was 6,000,000 short in the hills. The insects are transported in cages to the fruit ranches and "planted" in quantities of about 1,000 to the acre. They thrive and multiply rapidly and with their numerous progeny attack the green and wooly aphis, the peach tree louse and other orchard pests.

80,000 ACRES MAY BE SAVED BY VETERANS IN ITALY

Land reclamation work, with which Italy has given employment to hundreds of war veterans, is beginning to approach completion. In all, 80,000 acres have been set aside for this purpose, some of the land being the gift of the king to the men who should accomplish its reclamation. More than $3,000,000 has been granted for the work. Hitherto some of the districts have been malarious and virtually uninhabitable.

Although Italy has vast tracts of such lands which are not only useless but positively dangerous to health, it is still disputed whether it is economically feasible to reclaim them. In other words, it is believed by some that the produce of the reclaimed lands will not be sufficient to pay off the amounts of money expended on them.

JAMES LEWIS FOUND DEAD IN BED- NEW LONDON RECLUSE HOARDED CASH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11.—James Lewis, about 70, an eccentric, who resided in a manner resembling a recluse, at 33 Rosemary street, was found dead in bed at his home this afternoon. The police gained entrance to the house, following the reception of information from neighbors and benefactors of the old man that he had not been seen about the premises for five or six days.

It had been the practice of neighbors to cause Lewis to be supplied daily with food. Oftentimes the food would remain a day or two on the steps at the front entrance, but when it was finally missing the neighbors realized that Lewis had taken the nourishment. Today when several days' donations of food remained on the steps, one of the neighbors, William R. Pollock, decided to notify the police of his suspicion that Lewis was dead in the house. Sergeant John Cavanaugh was sent to the Rosemary street house and was unable to rouse Lewis by repeated alarms at the door. Sergeant Cavanaugh found a window leading to one of the rooms unfastened, climbed through and entering a sleeping room found Lewis dead in bed. The man was fully dressed and was huddled beneath the clothing in an apparent effort to keep warm. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman was notified and after conducting an investigation, pronounced death caused by disease of the heart. Examiner Kaufman was unable to determine just how long Lewis had been dead, but he was of the opinion that death had occurred since Sunday.

The interior of the Lewis home was a place of squalor and filth and the stench was most sickening and there was ample evidence about the place to reveal the manner in which Lewis existed. There was no need for the recluse living in the surroundings and under the conditions he did, for when Sergeant Cavanaugh searched the place he found a large bundle of $1 bills, indicating that Lewis had a mania for saving the bills of this denomination, together with gold coins and a quantity of silver. The money was turned over to Medical Examiner Kaufman.

Lewis was well known to residents of the vicinity in which he had resided many years. He had always lived in obscurity. October 29 neighbors noticed that Lewis had absented himself from the yard of his home and food remained for several days undisturbed on the doorsteps. At that time the police were informed of the theory of Lewis having died alone in the house and when officers gained admission to the place by means as of today, Lewis was found huddled in bed, fully clothed and without any semblance of fire in a stove. Lewis was taken to the police station where he was examined by City Physician Cheney, but was adjudged of normal mentality. Had he been found mentally deficient, Lewis would have been committed to Norwich State Hospital, but instead he was allowed to return to his home.

The funeral of Mrs. Nancy G. Gardner, widow of Horace Gardner, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence, 761 Montauk avenue and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. William J. Greene, pastor of All Souls' church. Relatives acted as bearers. Burial was in the family plot in Gardner cemetery.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of John R. Wall, 11 Shapley street, to be suspended. Wall was recently fined $25 and costs in the Waterford town court for reckless driving. Commissioner Stoeckel also caused the operator's license of Albert Shinko, of 19 Tilley street, recently suspended, to be returned to the owner.

Beverly Davis of Lewis street; Miss Sadie York, Westerly; Peter Berardenelli, Westerly; William Kilpatrick, 41 North Bank street; Thomas Smith, 132 North Bank street; Harry Holloway, 43 Granite street; Duane Pebbles, United States Coast Guard destroyer Beale; Miss Rosie Maicholl, Montville; Herbert Learned, United States Coast Guard service, state pier; and Hugh McPartland, 283 Ocean avenue, were patients dismissed today at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital.

Edward E. Nigenlath, 124 Sterling street, Brooklyn, N. Y., today communicated with the New London police requesting their assistance in locating his son, Edward, Jr., who ran away from home last Saturday. Nigenlath stated that he received a letter from his son, which was written on Y. M. C. A. stationery and was mailed here Sunday, stating that the boy was trying to obtain employment here. The youth is described as being 14, and when he left home he was attired in a blue suit and wore low shoes and a brown federa hat.

No decision was reached last evening at the meeting of Brainard lodge as to the erection of a new Masonic Temple in this city. The matter has before been under consideration, but members of Union lodge could not come to the same conclusions as were entertained by their craftsmen in the other lodge. So there the matter rested when the meeting convened last evening. There it rested when the meeting adjourned. Now an effort will be made to get the two lodges into harmony in the building situation. The matter is to be put up to Union lodge and then a decision will be reached. Union lodge members are said to favor the erection of a temple, but they have set their minds upon the site occupied as a Masonic club building now, while the members of Brainard lodge favor the site of the residence of Frederick W. Mercer, next south of the county court house. That site was secured by Brainard lodge some time ago at a price, it was said, that made the property practically a gift to the lodge. Mr. Mercer has offered to reacquire the property and to pay the lodge a thousand dollars more than they paid for it in the event that a desire is expressed to part with it. There seems to be no comparison in the sites if enhancement in value is taken into consideration. The Mercer site practically overlooks State street, is in a zone in which the construction is likely to occur and it is surrounded by costly buildings.

Harry Forbes, Midway, one of the best known engineers in the employ of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was transferred to Grace hospital, New Haven, today, where he will undergo an operation for the removal of an abcess from the brain. He was removed to New London in Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital ambulance and a special car was provided by the railroad to convey the patient to New Haven. Mr. Forbes was operated upon two months ago at Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, and since then he has been confined to his bed.

New London is preparing for the inauguration of Thrift Week from January 17 to 23 next. A meeting for organization was held this afternoon at 4 o'clock when considerable enthusiasm was manifested in the undertaking. William H. Hall, representing the National Thrift Week committee, explained the work that was proposed and pointed out the advantages that would accrue to the city and to the people thereof. He said that Connecticut was the foremost of the New England states in this movement and that there would be a greater number of cities and towns in the movement the coming year than ever before. The selection of officers for the undertaking was deferred until another meeting shall be held, but the plan of procedure was outlined, and an organization committee was named.

There seems to be a disposition among the merchants who have been given the privilege, if indeed the authority to bestow that gift rests with the council, to occupy two feet of the sidewalks for the display of their goods, to occupy more space than has been allotted to them. Pedestrians are agreed that the sidewalks are for pedestrians and that the city should not take away from the walkers what belongs to them. The streets have been so taken up with auto traffic that pedestrians must use the greatest caution when they cross, and, in that event, the whole of the sidewalks should be accorded to pedestrians. On the ground that the owners of sidewalks pay for the construction of half the walks and on the score that they are for use of pedestrians wholly there is a stretch of imagination when it is conceded that the use of the walks can be taken from the people or hampered so that such walks are not absolutely free to pedestrians.

Mrs. Charles Soltz and infant son, at Home street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were able to return to their home today.

Joseph Fitzpatrick, former alderman and for the past three years a federal prohibition agent and stationed in this city, will terminate his duties as chaser of violators of the prohibition law. It become known today for Mr. Fitzpatrick has received a communication from Deputy Administrator Frank Putney requesting the former to tender his resignation, the same to take effect the 15th inst. Not only has Mr. Fitzpatrick received the notice to resign, but all enforcement agents and every member of the office force at Hartford have received such notices. The reason for the wholesale resignation request is the result of the treasury department at Washington two months ago that the major portion of prohibition enforcement agents throughout the country would cease to officiate as enforcers of the prohibition law on the 18th of November. It is understood that the federal government will see to it that the state and municipal police cause the enforcement of the law in the same manner as they suppress the various other degrees of criminality.

Gordon H. Williams is confined to his home, Norwood avenue, as a result of a severe attack of rheumatism.

Mrs. Louis C. Tucker has returned to her home, Waller street, after having spent several days with her son, F. H. Tucker, Boston.

Miss Margaret Ives, instructor in fine arts at Connecticut college, is spending a few days in New York.

Mrs. Leo, wife of Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, pastor of the Second Congregational church, is in Brooklyn, N. Y., where she will remain several days.

NEW LONDON'S NEW AERIAL TRUCK TESTED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11—The mammoth Seagrave aerial truck, which the city recently purchased, was given its official test this afternoon when the operation of the ladders and the manipulation of the pump was displayed to hundreds of men and women at a public exhibition. The big truck was operated to State street, corner of Union street at 2.30 o'clock and hardly had the massive machine been brought to a stop alongside the curb in front of the Crocker House than the aerial was started, with the result that in less than a minute after the truck was parked the big 75-foot ladder was resting against the coping atop the fifth floor of the hotel. In a few minutes eight firemen, headed by Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman, ascended the ladder, their combined weight being about 1000 pounds, and went to the top, where a line of hose and nozzle which passes under the ladder runs is located and ready to be manned. With the descent of the firemen the ladder was operated on an angle of 45 degrees and clear of the building and then raised and lowered so that it could have poured water into any of the windows of the five stories or rescued any body from the windows. The ladder then was lowered to a point where it was on a level with the operating platform and then was operated in such a manner as to display the further workings of the truck, the ladder being operated on both sides and both ends of the truck, hoisted and lowered and at any angle. After the demonstration, the truck was taken to the municipal pier where its pumper was given a thorough test. The truck will be officially turned over to the city in another day or two.

SIDE PAINED HER TERRIBLY

After Childbirth Women Should Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Restore Normal Conditions

St. Louis, Missouri. — "After my first child was born ill was bothered with a pain in my side which became more severe the longer I let it go. It was terrible. I often had to lie down to get any relief. I was in a weak and run-down condition, and my side seemed to be the point for all the pain. I was this way for three months, then I read your little booklet and the testimonials it contained, and started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I could feel relief after the first bottle and I have found it to do all you claim for it. I had to repeat it again after my second child was born. I sure will recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends."—Mrs. N. R. LAYTON, 2726A University St., St. Louis, Mo.

If you are suffering from any weakness which causes such symptoms as pains in the side and back and nervous feelings, give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial now.

Do not continue to feel all run-down and half sick when relief is at hand. Sold by druggists everywhere.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Paul Powell, who directed Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna" and the recent Frank Woods Production, "Let Women Alone," as well as scores of other good picture plays, is said to have hit the bull's eye of success again with "Her Market Value," in which Agnes Ayres is starred.

"Her Market Value," which is an adaptation of Frances Nordstrom's stage success which has for over a year held forth at one of London's leading theatres, is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today. Included in the cast of supporting players are Anders Randolf, Taylor Holmes, Hedda Hopper, Edward Earle, Gertrude Short, Sidney Bracy and George Irving. The second feature of today's bill is "On the Threshold," the latest production of Renaud Hoffman directorial genius, whose previous picturization of "Not One to Spare" caused so much astonishment among the critics and the public alike.

Tea Drinking Prolongs Life

Tea, which for centuries, has been lauded for its energizing and healthgiving properties, now comes into the limelight as indisputably the best of all domestic beverages in this respect.

First it is MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, who shouts for tea and endorses the precious stimulant as of incalculable benefit on the long hard marches over the drifted ice.

Then it is the football squad of Yale which this year included tea as their training diet. The football warriors, according to an Associated Press dispatch from New Haven, indulged in a tea party between the halves of the recent Army game with "splendid results."

Next and most impressive of all the tributes that have been paid tea, comes from the department of anatomy of the California university in an announcement that a new vitamine, extracted from tea has been discovered which it is predicted will increase materially the natural span of life. This tea vitamine, which has been called "Bios" is said to be the most valuable of all the vitamines that have been discovered, and one that may prove of inestimable value to the human race.

It is announced by the University of California, that "the tea-drinking people, such as the English, Australians, Irish, Scotch and Canadians are the longest lived people of the world."

As a result of these investigations, extending over a long period, and the analysis of the tea plant, it has been discovered that this vitamine "Bios" has three hundred times the life giving quality of other vitamines, previously discovered in yeast.

Palace Theatre

Pola Negri is the heroine in the romantic story of old California playing at the Palace Theatre Friday and Saturday. Flower of the Night is a story that awakens the interest and holds your sympathy all through the telling of the days of the rule of the Spanish Dons.

The heroine is shown as possessing a character that one would admire. She is the daughter of a California Aristocratic Spaniard, who wanted to see life, but whose father wanted to keep her almost a prisoner, because he hated the Americans, who had robbed him of everything he had. The hero is an Easterner who is unable to perceive the fine character of the heroine, and who, judging her only by appearances, thinks evil of her, until he finds out what a fine woman she is. This naturally deprieves him of a great deal of sympathy.

There are many melodramatic scenes the most notable one being those in the gold mine, which the hero refused to vacate on orders from the crooked vigilante, preferring to fight them all single handed. And they are thrilling, particularly those in which the heroine is shown stealing into the cabin and saving the hero. Those in San Francisco, in which the hero and the heroine are hiding, being eventually discovered by the crooked vigilante, and in which the hero shoots and kills him are suspensive. The scenes that follow, which show the vigilantes condemning their own member, because they have become aware of his crookedness and in which seeking to find him so as to make him pay the penalty of his crooked acts, find him dead in the room where the hero and heroine had hidden themselves are, also are suspensive. The story is by Joseph Herzesheimer.

Marie Zola famous broadcasting star you have heard over the radio from New York, Boston and Springfield, will be here in person Thurs., Fri. and Sat. Coulter and Rose are two clever blackface comedians who can sing and dance, you will surely laugh at their Darktown Frolics. Bohemian Life will please all that like wonderful dancing and singing. Costumes in this colorful act are a treat for the eyes. Angell & Fuller are two boys who will make you laugh in spite of yourself. They are the original blue chasers. The Jean Nylian Trio offer a novelty act that has not been seen in Norwich for many years. As is the costume many valuable and useful presents will be given away Thursday Merchants' Night. The grand prize will be a thirty-two piece dinner set. Cabaret Night will be the big feature of the show Friday night.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Hail the extraordinary week and jubilee program that opens at the Broadway theatre today. Never was there a finer aggregation of vaudeville acts ever assembled on any one program.

The Guatamala Revue of seven artists with the Guatamala Stringed Quartette; Arthur Dunn and Kitty Nelson, comedians the extra special attraction Scotty McDonald just over from Scotland; Frey and Fetter, comedians de luxe; and Kennedy and Nelson, the two speed boys; these make up this wonderful show.

"A Man of Iron," the new Lionel Barrymore picture at the Broadway Theatre is the story of a loveless marriage between a steel magnate and the spoiled daughter of a society adventuress. But he was truly "A Man of Iron," steeled to face problems in love as he had faced in business. His battle for happiness carried him half way 'round the world. But he won. There is a tremendous lesson for those in love, and a greater lesson for those who do not love in "A Man of Iron."

Breed Theatre

Now that the William Fox production, The Iron Horse is scheduled to start an engagement at the Breed theater next week many thousands of people are wondering how this picture obtained its name. To those acquainted with the ways of thinking of the American Aboriginees, it is self-evident that the phrase, The Iron Horse, is of Indian origin. As a matter of fact, during the vast amount of research done by the Fox scenario department, it was found that the originator of this phrase was Sitting Bull, the great war chief of the Sioux.

Sitting Bull was one of the most indomitable leaders of the red revolt against the invasion of the West by the white man. As a youth in the '50's and '60's, he sought to arouse his people to resist the invasion of their lands and the destruction of the game which was one of their chief means of sustenance. Together with Red Cloud and other war chiefs he led the Sioux in numerous attempts to stop the progress of the Central Pacific Railroad. The chief evidence in this matter is to be found in the autobiography of Colonel William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill). In this he quotes what was said to him personally by Sitting Bull as follows:

"The white man has taken most of our land. He has destroyed or given away the game that was our meat. In 1868 he arranged to build through the Indian land a road on which ran iron Horses that ate wood and breathed fire and smoke. The Iron Horse brought from the east men and women and children who took the land from the Indians and drove out the game."

This phrase fittingly described the Indian viewpoint of the strange new monster which had disrupted their lives. For many years this expression was little used, but since the tremendous success of the William Fox production, The Iron Horse that phrase has become part of the English language and it is now generally used not only by the masses, but also by poets, editors and writers of every kind and degree, in place of the less imaginative words, engine and locomotive.

Subics Temperatures

In all bodies of water that annually or even occasionally, are ice-covered over any considerable portion of their extent, the temperature, from the greatest depth to within a few hundred meters of the surface is practically constant and is that of maximum density.

In the case of fresh-water lakes, such as the Great Lakes, this temperature is 4 degrees centigrade. The temperature at the bottom of the oceans, so far as has been measured, is about 1 degree centigrade, varying one or two degrees above or below this value from place to place.

Quick Pile Relief

Can only come by removing the cause—bad circulation in the lower bowel. Nothing but an internal remedy can bring quick and sure relief. That's why ointments and operations fail. Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause. Money refunded if not satisfied by Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere.

RALLY IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Stock prices rallied sharply today following yesterday's dramatic collapse. The recovery, which embraced practically the entire list, was aided by the appearance of strong banking support, easier call money rates, the resumption of dividends on the common stock of the American Sugar Refining Co., and publication of favorable weekly steel trade reviews.

Trading was not maintained at the terrific pace established in yesterday's record-breaking session. Total sales were calculated by Associated Press tabulators at 3,604,000 shares, as against 3,340,000 yesterday. Industrial stocks recovered approximately one-half of the losses sustained yesterday, while the railroad stocks, as indicated by the average of twenty leading issues, made up all of their loss and moved to a new record high level.

Strong buying support was in evidence from the outset, more than offsetting the forced liquidation necessitated by inability or unwillingness to meet margin calls, and the resumption of bear selling of supposedly vulnerable stocks. The market wavered for a time after the first batch of buying orders had been absorbed, but it soon headed upward again and many issues were selling one to five points above last night's final quotations before the end of the first half hour. Outside buying was of a cautious character in the early trading but speculative confidence was gradually restored as prices continued to head upward, despite occasional experimental short selling to test the character of the buying.

Several highly prized industrials showed remarkable recuperative powers. Du Pont, which sold as low as 227 yesterday, rallied to 250 and then eased to 247 for a net gain of 19 points on the day. General Motors, which broke 12 1-2 points yesterday, showed a net gain of nearly 7 points at 139 1-4 with buying influenced by speculative expectations of large extra cash dividend, at tomorrow's meeting of the board of directors.

American Can, Chrysler, Fisher Body, Fleischmann, General Electric, General Railway Signal, Gulf States Steel, Hudson Motors, Pathe Exchange "A," U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Westinghouse Air Brake "A" all closed at net gains of 4 to 6 points. Scores of others showed net advances of 2 points or more.

American Brake Shoe and Foundry, which closed unchanged yesterday, rallied 12 points today to a new high record at 143. General Baking jumped nearly 15 points on a few sales to a new top at 250. Foundation Company, one of the few other high priced stocks which held relatively steady in yesterday's heavy selling movement, closed at 166 for a net gain of 6 points.

Baltimore and Ohio common, on which an early increase in dividend is expected, touched 89 1-4, the highest price in eight years, closing within a fraction of the top. Lehigh Valley was bid up 3 3-4 points to 84 1-4, the highest price in 12 years, and such popular issues as Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Chicago and Northwestern, Delaware and Hudson, New York Central, Reading, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway showed net gains of 1 1-8 to 5 points.

Unusually good buying took place also in the oil shares, Mid-Continent soaring nearly 4 points to a new 1925 high at 36 1-4 while Independent Oil and Gas, Pacific Oil, Pan-American B, Skelly and Standard Oil of California, showed net gains of a point or more.

Call money renewed at 4 1-4 per cent, and then dropped to 4 1-2 with funds reported available in the "outside market" as low as four per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Renewal of selling pressure against French francs, which were carried down to 3.98 cents, or within a few points of the years low, was the feature of the foregin exchange market. Norwegian and Danish kroner also broke sharply, but other European rates moved within rather narrow and irregular limits, demand sterling holding firm around $4.84 3-8.

TAFTVILLE

The musical entertainment at the William W. Backus hospital Sunday was furnished by the Sacred Heart church. Vocal selections were pleasingly given by Miss Elizabeth Corcoran, Miss Rose Murphy, James Garvey and James Murphy. They were accompanied on the piano by Miss Blanche Fontaine. Instrumental pieces were ably rendered by three members of the Sacred Heart orchestra, Miss Blanche Fontaine, pianist; Miss Ethel Marsan, violinist, and Mr. Lafreniere, cornetist. The committee in charge were Mrs. D. C. Murphy and Mrs. Thomas Crowe.

MADE DANCING TEST FOR ORTOPHONIC VICTROLA

While listening to a demonstration of the new Ortophonic Victrola early this week at the Hanover Curland Co. Mrs. Edward Andrews was greatly pleased with dance music as reproduced by the Ortophonic Victrola. Mrs. Andrews said that the dance rhythm was perfect for dancing and ventured the prediction that the Ortophonic Victrola will greatly assist dancing teachers in their work of teaching dancing to the children in the schools. also that it will greatly facilitate the teaching of dancing in the home.

Mrs. Andrews suggested her desire for testing out this theory upon her children at her regular weekly class at the Wauregan hotel, and arrangement was made with the Hanover Curland Co., to carry out this idea. The dance was held on Wednesday evening at the Wauregan hotel and the Ortophonic Victrola was given a trial besides the orchestra engaged for the dance. The children enjoyed the innovation by going through the dance movements to the music of the Ortophonic Victrola with great delight. Mrs. Andrews was greatly enthused with the success of her test expressing her conviction that a new progressive step has been made in facilitating the teaching of the dancing art and of implanting the love for music in American children.

FIVE YEAR OLD SUIT IS TRIED AND SETTLED IN SUPERIOR COURT

Trial of a five year old suit against the Connecticut Company in which the alleged excessive speed of a trolley car on Broad street in New London on the night of May 20, 1920 is claimed to be the cause for hitting the automobile of Frederick P. Hall, then of New London, was begun in the superior court here Wednesday afternoon before Judge C. L. Avery and a jury. The suit is for $2,500 damages.

It is alleged that the car that Mr. Hall was operating was struck at about 11 o'clock at night by the trolley car as Mr. Hall was turning it from the right to the left side of Broad street and was endeavoring to get off the track and back onto the right side of the street when he discovered the trolley car coming down a hill towards him.

A contention of the defense is that Mr. Hall was operating the automobile without a proper license, having come from Virginia and having been in this state long enough to have secured a Connecticut license.

C. Hadlai Hull is attorney for Mr. Hall and J. W. Carpenter of New Haven represents the Connecticut Co. The following jury is hearing the case. Wellington A. Miner, Frank W. Brewster S. Clinton Rogers, Norwich; Everett F. Barnes, Frank R. Ayer, Preston; James T. Shea, Frank C. Whitney, Griswold; Orro D. Fuller, Lebanon; Jabez L. Bailey, Bozrah; Christopher Hansen, Franklin; George W. Cole, Sprague; George W. Cole, Sprague; George W. Hatch, Voluntown.

The plaintiff, now a resident of Jersey City, formerly cost engineer for the Groton Iron Works, was the first witness. He testified that his automobile was registered in Virginia at the time of the accident and he produced his Virginia registration certificate, dated Alexandria, Va., Jan. 27, 1920. At that time he was living in Alexandria and was employed by the Virginia Ship Building Co. He came to Connecticut about April 1, 1920 because of litigation in the Groton Iron Works, remaining in Connecticut for over six months in all. His automobile was brought to Connecticut about the first of May, and on May 18 he applied for a Connecticut license by letter and check to the department at Hartford. The Virginia license plates were on the machine at the time of the accident and with Mr. Hall, who was driving, was George Paton of New London. They were driving from the Masonic club to take Mr. Paton to his home, going up Broad street on the right hand side. After passing Connecticut avenue Mr. Hall said he attempted to turn from the right to the left hand side of the street, first looking and seeing nothing in the street in either direction. While partly turned, he saw a trolley car coming down the hill at fast speed and he tried to get off the track, but the trolley struck the left fender of the automobile, turned the machine around and threw it against the right hand curb, carrying his machine 25 feet. The trolley car stopped about 200 feet away, the witness said, and the headlights of the automobile were lighted when the trolley car was approaching. Mr. Hall said the headlight of the trolley car was dim and he didn't see that till the car got close to him, but saw the other lights in the trolley car. The trolley crew and Officer Opperman appeared immediately after the accident.

The jury was excused at this point while the attorneys argued upon the admissibility of certain evidence regarding what the motorman had said when he came up after the accident. The argument took so long that Judge Avery recalled the jury and excused them till the next day, deferring his decision on admitting the evidence until today (Thursday.)

After court had adjourned for the day on Wednesday the attorneys were in conference and a settlement in the case was reached.

The evidence about which the attorneys argued for its admissibility was in the testimony of Mr. Hall as to what the conductor and motorman of the trolley car said immediately after the accident. He quoted the motorman as saying, "My brakes wouldn't work."

All the jurors not on the panel for this case have been excused till next Tuesday morning.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL STARTING IN NORWICH

The annual Red Cross roll call, in which memberships of one dollar are received, will be carried on until Thanksgiving day and booths will be located at different places in the city where the memberships will be received. Those at the booths today (Thursday) will be the following:

Post Office—Mrs. Walter A. Bussey, Miss Grace Taft.

Thames Bank—Mrs. Edward Y. Messenger, Mrs. Harold Richardson, Miss Ruth Hamilton, Miss Alice Stevens, Miss Ruby Vaughan.

Boston Store—Mrs. Louis H. Geer, Miss Bessie Boardman, Miss Mary Boardman, Miss Mary Crowe.

Porteous & Mitchell Co.—Mrs. J. G. Rosenberg, Miss Esther Shereshevsky, Miss B. Jacobson, Mrs. H. J. Hofer, Mrs. A. B. Stockdale.

A circular letter sent out by the Norwich branch president, Herbert W. Gallup invites every adult in the city to take out a membership. Half of the local membership fee of one dollar goes t othe National Red Cross for instant relief in large disasters throughout the country, the other half for local needs, assisting in the medical work in our schools, relief in various ways of war veterans here in Norwich and other small demands for prompt aid.

Chairman Payne of the American Red Cross has announced the society's national budget for the year ending June 30, 1926, has been fixed at $7,155,211, a majority of which will go toward special services, including disaster relief.

Special services of the relief organization will absorb $4,957,883 of the budget. This phase of the society's work includes relief for service and former service men, and $1,400,000 is set aside directly for camp, hospital and liaison services in their behalf.

Grants and loans to former service men and women are expected to total $20,000; transient service, including former service men's welfare, $140,000; emergency work for these men, $25,000 and erection of convalescent houses, $150,000.

A sum of $300,000 is tentatively fixed for disaster relief, which is the amount set aside each year because of the impossibility of calculating the relief demands in this respect.

The budget appropriates $6,750,733 for domestic operations and $404,477 for foreign work. For headquarters and branch office operations $1,469,600 is allotted.

RALPH DEVITO WRITES FROM HIS NATIVE ITALY

During Wednesday, James D'Atri, of 216 1-2 Franklin street, received word from former Patrolman Ralph DeVito, who left Norwich several weeks ago for Italy, for a lengthy visit. Mr. Devito writes that his health seems somewhat improved and that he is just now with relatives near Naples.

While the change has helped his health, nevertheless he expresses a wish to return to Norwich, where he left so many good friends. Special messages were sent Chief of Police George Linton and the members of the Norwich police force, with whom Mr. Devito was always so pleasantly associated.

TELEPHONE PREPAYMENT IN SOME CONN. CITIES

In some of the larger towns of Connecticut the new system of telephone prepayment is already in effect.

Proprietors of business places where there are pay station telephones are being notified by the Southern New England Telephone company that a change is to be made, whereby the prepayment system will be installed. To speak to the operator, it will be necessary to deposit the coin, and if it is impossible to complete the connection, the coin will be returned. The present system is to call the operator and deposit the coin when the connection is completed.

GEORGE M. BUCK, HEBRON WILL BE 99 NEXT SUNDAY

INAUGURATING NO DELAY TOLL LINE SERVICE

"Toll Line? Gimme Bryant 2100, New York."

"Hold the line, please."

"Here's your party."

"Hello, Hotel Astor, Room Clerk? Well, I wish to reserve— — —"

By the inauguration here today (Thursday) of "No Delay" telephone toll service, it is going to take toll line users in this city only about as long to get a call through to New York, or to various other long distance points with which Norwich has direct telephone connection, as it took to read the above dialogue.

This "No Delay" service is swift and sizzles with modern business efficiency. It eliminates the former practice of having the toll operator call back the calling person after the connection is established. The subscriber simply gives toll line the number of the distant telephone, or the telephone number and name of the person, if a particular person is desired, holds the receiver and—presto—the line is opened for conversation.

Exchange Manager Weymouth, in announcing the beginning here of this swifter toll service, said it has been in operation for a short time between a few other large cities of this state and long distance points and has been found eminently satisfactory by toll line users, particularly by business people who, of course, welcome what proves to be an even speedier service than the telephone has given heretofore.

The improved service will be given from this city to New York, Boston, Providence, Worcester, Springfield and to a number of toll line points in this state, including New Haven and Hartford.

Under the new practice a subscriber wishing to place a toll call asks the local operator for "Toll Line" in the usual way. If the call is to a point with which this city has direct telephone lines, and one is immediately available, the toll operator asks the calling party to hold the line and the call goes through with a swiftness even greater than heretofore. Formerly the calling person was asked to hang up the receiver to be called by the toll operator when the connection was established.

However, in putting through toll calls in the new way, the toll operator must have sufficient information to be able to act directly and without delay. If it is necessary for the toll operator to secure from an outside directory the desired number, or if there is any directory work whatever connected with the establishment of the connection, or if the call is to a city with which Norwich is not directly connected by wire, the toll operator then will ask the subscriber to hang up the receiver and wait to be called.

A marked increase in the use of toll service has followed the introduction of "No Delay" service in other cities and it has been given a most enthusiastic and favorable reception by manufacturers and merchants who use toll line to a large extent.

BAPTIST PHILATHEA CLASS HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Philathea class of the First Baptist church was held Monday evening at the church parlors. Mrs. Chas. Marsh, Mrs. Howard Smith and Miss Mary Dolbeare were hostesses assisted by the entertainment committee. Supper was served at 6:30 after which the business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Maude Wheeler.

The annual reports were read showing that the past year has been a prosperous one.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Maude Wheeler; first vice president, Mrs. Clarence Smith; second vice president, Mrs. Howard Smith; treasurer, Miss Mary Dolbeare; secretary, Mrs. James Tourtellotte; teacher, Mrs. J. E. C. Leach; first assistant teacher, Mrs. Winifred Pulsifer second assistant teacher, Mrs. Maude Wheeler; reporter, Mrs. J. Henry Frink. Twenty six members were present.

Car Barns Bus Terminal

The trolley cars have ceased running to Saybrook. A bus will meet cars at the terminal at Clinton, every two or three hours and will finish the trip to New London.

The Saybrook and Middletown bus line headquarters have been moved to the car barns of the Shore Line electric line in Old Saybrook, which will be the starting point instead of the Shore Line hotel, where John Behen, the former owner, made his headquarters. The six cars were moved into their new quarters Monday noon.

Connecticut College

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Greater party solidarity and more centralized machinery of government were suggested for the betterment of the American democracy given out by Dr. William Starr Myers of Prince University in his lecture on current history and politics at the Connecticut college convocation Tuesday afternoon.

The American people as a whole show a certain solidarity, the speaker said. They have that "mutual trust and confidence," that quality of the good loser essential to a democratic government, where the executive in power is steward for all, of whatever political faith. President Coolidge's popularity, Dr. Myers thinks, can be traced in part to the fact that he represents the unity of America, for he is of the Yankee type, which, by the the emigrations which settled this country, has permeated the population.

But though Coolidge is at present in great favor with the people, though he maintains the excellent policy of promising nothing, but trying always to fulfill the desire of public opinion, he is hampered by the lack of supporting solidarity. To carry his popular plans for governmental economy to a finish, he needs the cooperation of his cabinet, some of whom have lost party support at present, and he needs the backing of congress. Yet that body has now pending two enormously expensive propositions, a rivers and harbors bill, and the farmer's wheat fund, both of which have republican support. Congress is unfortunate, Dr. Myers thinks, in that leadership, committee chairmanship there, is dependent not on ability, but on duration of office. A leadership naturally evolved, with party solidarity behind it, would give us a more British, but a more effective form of government.

In his plea for more centralized machinery, the speaker scored our representative form of government with its long ballot lists, full of names unknown to the voter. "How are the people going to function as a governing body, hampered as they are? Centralize power and responsibility in the same hands and matters are simplified. Political bosses have centralized powgr, but not centralized responsibility—there lies corruption.

Dr. Myers ended his speech, which was brilliant in varied suggestion, and lightning in its speed of thought, with a challenge to idealists in the political world. "Politics is the art of compromise," he said, not the compromising of ideals, which should "strengthen, invigorate, inspire, direct," but the compromising of policies so that something toward the desired effect may be accomplished. Let something be done; it is our individual responsibility as to what shall be done.

SETTLEMENTS IN THREE AUTO ACCIDENT SUITS

When the superior court came in here Wednesday morning with Judge C. L. Avery and a jury to continue the trial of the suit of Mary Gunning of Groton against Albert H. Hoffman of New Britain, which was begun in the court on Tuesday, witnesses were on hand to give their testimony, but the attorney spent the morning and the early afternoon in conferences which were at length successful in reaching a settlement of the suit.

The settlement also comprised a settlement of two other suits against Mr. Hoffman arising from the same automobile accident as the suit on trial, a collision on Aug. 31, 1924 on the New London-Hartford cement highway between the Gunning machine, which was operated by Miss Florence Terry under instruction by Patrick Gunning, and the Hoffman machine which was driven by Raymond Hoffman.

Patrick F. Gunning and Mary Gunning each brought suit for $10,000 and Miss Terry for $20,000. It was understood that a lump settlement was made in the three suits for approximately half of what the plaintiffs wanted. Attorneys F. L. McGuire and C. Hadlai Hull were counsel for the plaintiffs, A. M. Brown and C. V. James for the defendants.

29 NAMES ON LIST OF SUSPENDED DRIVERS

The weekly list of Connecticut operators whose licenses have been suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out Wednesday at the state motor vehicle department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. There are twenty-nine names on the list. The cases of three have been appealed. The department statement advised people to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of the suspended drivers operating motor vehicles. The following is the list:

John Bagdon, Hartford; William Baird, Norwalk; Joseph Banks, New Haven; John Bartley, South Manchester; Edward Boloin, Thompsonville; Louis G. Bourassa, Willimantic; Eugene Brady, Hartford; Gustave Breisler, Norwalk; Richard Deane, South Norwalk; John H. Dodd, Middletown; Walter A. Dorman, West Haven; Almon J. Fournier, Bristol; Sims H. Guy, New Britain; John L. Howe, New Haven; Louis H. Loomis, West Haven; George H. Lyman, Colchester; Edward Malley, Hartford; Henry R. Martin, Hartford; Patsey O'Connell, Meriden; John Palmieri, Norwalk; Laverne Penfield, Stamford; Gregory Redmond, New Haven; George Roberts, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Barnaby Sapier, Rocky Hill; Samuel Spooner, Old Saybrook; George H. Thomas, Ridgefield; Edmond Trant, Hartford; John J. Wallace, Hartford; Thomas J. White, Hartford.

Given Surprise Shower

Tuesday evening about 60 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Edward Gilchrsit of 715 Boswell avenue for a surprise shower for Mrs. Gilchrist's sister, Miss Eva Pepin, who is soon to marry Frank Fitzmaurice of Taftville. Miss Pepin was delightfully surprised with many gifts that included linen, silver, cut glass and money. Music and dancing were enjoyed. The out of town guests were from Jewett City, Taftville, Montville and Plainfield.

Haberdashers Busy

Among merchants making a big and an early bid for holiday trade are Norwich haberdashers, whose display windows are already taking on a pre-Christmas appearance. It is said that there will be an especially good trade in strictly men's gifts, judging by the inquiries being made this month regarding boxed and similar novelties provided to meet gift demands.

Attended Young Hebrews Conference

A delegation of five girls of the local Y. W. H. A. was present last Sunday at the first bi-monthly session of the Western New England League of YMHA and YWHA for the season of 1925-26. These sessions serve the purpose of bringing the various members int od closer relationship. Many ideas were gained for making the local association serve a larger and more useful place in the community.

Sale of Mill Irregulars at One-third Off

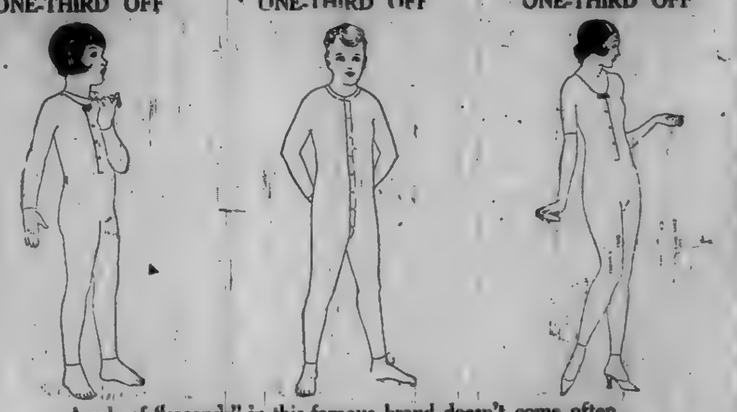
MUNSING Wear

MUNSINGWEAR "SECONDS" BARRING SLIGHT IMPERFECTIONS POSSESS THE SAME SATISFYING QUALITIES FOUND IN MUNSINGWEAR "FIRSTS"

GIRLS' MUNSINGWEAR ONE-THIRD OFF

BOYS' MUNSINGWEAR ONE-THIRD OFF

WOMEN'S MUNSINGWEAR ONE-THIRD OFF



A sale of "seconds" in this famous brand doesn't come often. When it does the price is usually ONE-THIRD less than regulars.

A sale of "seconds" in this nationally popular brand of union suits is a rare event in our store. Demand for them by dealers is large, and the supply is limited.

We are favored by the manufacturers with an allotment of these mill irregulars. Munsingwear "seconds" barring slight imperfections possess the same splendid qualities as the same "firsts"—the same quality of yarn, washability, the same durability and serviceability.

With the exception of some trifling irregularity—a drop stitch, oil spot, or misweave (nearly mended), these garments so far as we can see should in no way prove less satisfying than Munsingwear "firsts."

Munsingwear standards are high.

So insistent are the makers upon producing only perfect garments, that the most rigid inspection is demanded.

Each garment must pass the searching eyes of inspectors at least three times before it is ranked a "first."

The most trifling irregularity is sufficient to brand a garment "second," and once labeled as such it is never sold as a "first," nor at the same price—usually one-third off.

We are glad our customers can share in our good fortune and supply their underwear needs at a considerable saving in price.

On Sale Beginning Today — At One-third Off

COLONIAL HOUSE BALLROOM TO BE FORMALLY OPENED

The ballroom of Colonial House at Connecticut College is to be used for the first time when the sophomore hop is held. About 100 couples are expected to attend. A tea dance will be held in the afternoon from 4 until 6. This will be held in the gymnasium. Juniors and freshmen will be given an unusual privilege this year, being allowed to attend the tea dance in the afternoon. Freshmen will be waitresses and will be chosen primarily for their charm and personality. They will be in Colonial costume.

Two Baptist Rallies

The Connecticut Baptist Convention has arranged for two important fall rallies to be held Friday, November 13, at the Central Baptist church in Hartford, and Wednesday, November 18, at Calvary Baptist church in New Haven. Each rally will be held at 7.45 p. m. and the speaker at both will be Dr. James Whitcomb Brougher pastor of the Temple Baptist church of Los Angeles, California.

Dr. Brougher is one of the most eloquent and popular speakers connected with any American religious organization. He will take as his subject at both rallies, "Play Ball."

Baptist churches in all parts of the state will plan to send delegates to these rallies.

Father and Son Week

The Thursday evening service at the Central Baptist church this week will have the thought of "Father-and-Son Week" especially in mind and the topic will be "Happy Memories of My Home." Fathers and sons are asked to sit together. There were a hundred and sixty present last week and an even larger group is anticipated this Thursday. The roll-call will include those whose names begin with "P" (from Phillips on), "Q," "R" and "S."

Shot at Quail, Fined

Stanley Oleskievicz of New Britain was tried before Justice Charles S. Hurlbut at Tolland, for shooting at, with intent to kill a flock of wild quail in the Cedar Swamp district on land belonging to Fred Gherrink. Harry Bodman of Tolland county went to New Britain three times before he brought the accused back. He was found guilty of shooting at quail, which is against the law, and was fined $5 and cost of $39.87.

1926 Automobile Plates Ready

Police Chief George Linton has been requested by the motor vehicle department of the state to notify automobile owners that the new license plates for 1926 are now ready and to urge them not to delay in getting them.

Child Book Week

This being Child Book Week, the Otis library is bringing to the fore books of special interest and information to juvenile readers. The stores also are making special prices on children's books, particularly for holiday selection.

Service Flags Out

An interesting feature of the Armistice Day display of decorations in Norwich was the number of service flags shown, both at private homes and at business places.

TRAINING SHOULD INCLUDE PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING

That training should be given the student nurse is a question that continues to demand our thoughtful attention, says the weekly health bulletin issued this week by the state department of health. Continuing the bulletin says: In order that the student may have an all around knowledge of the field of nursing, many hospital training schools feel that at least two months of the student's time should be spent outside the hospital with a public health nursing association.

When hospital students were first sent out in this way it was sometimes thought both by the hospital and the association that the hospital was doing a good deed in helping out the association. This thought no longer prevails, for both realize that the student is with the public health nursing association to receive training that can be secured in no other way.

SPARK FROM PICKER MACHINE STARTS FIRE

Wednesday afternoon at 2:26 o'clock box 115, West Main street and Forest street, was pulled in for a fire at the plant of the American Waste and Metal Co., on West Main street. The fire started from a spark from one of the picker machines and started to spread rapidly. Two lines of hose were laid and the blaze quickly squelched. The damage by fire was small but the water damage amounted to quite a bit. The recall was sounded about five minutes after the box had been pulled.

Eastern Connecticut Health

The weekly morbidity report issued by the state department of health for the week ending November 7th., shows that no communicable diseases were reported from Norwich during the week. Communicable diseases reported from towns in eastern Connecticut for the week are as follows:

Diphtheria, none; scarlet fever, none; measles, none; whooping cough, Woodstock, 1; typhoid fever, none.

For Winter In Florida

Mrs. Vine S. Stetson and daughter, Miss Grace Stetson, who have sold their residence at No. 129 West Thames street, left Wednesday morning by automobile for Florida where they will spend the winter months. Enroute they will stop at Trenton, N. J., and Philadelphia, Pa.

Well Child Conferences

The state department of health has announced coming well child conferences as follows:

South Woodstock, Grange hall, Thursday, November 19th.; Moosup, Franco-American hall, Friday, November 20th.

An occasional Pomfret visitor, Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, who passed the summer with her son and daughter-in-law at Harbour View, Newport, has taken an apartment at the Mayflower, in Washington, for the winter.

NORWICH TOWN

The Sheltering Arms service Sunday afternoon is to be in charge of Rev. Henry T. Arnold, of Williams street. The musical part of the hour will be under the direction of the Third Baptist church choir of Greeneville.

"Cupid and Calories," the three act comedy, presented recently under the auspices of the Girls Friendly society of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, in conjunction with the Congregational Young People's Christian Endeavor society, netted about $45; each society to share one-half.

Rev. Dwight C. Stone, pastor of Hanover Congregational church, is to preach at the Norwich Town Congregational church at the Sunday morning worship, in exchange with the pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey.

Conspicuous on the platform during the meeting Tuesday of the New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers, at the First Congregational church, was a missionary service flag on which was 36 stars, representing missionaries sent out from this church in past years, some still engaged in active service. The 25 gold stars in the blue field signified those who have given their lives. The eleven stars in the red field denoted those who at the present time are serving in this capacity in the homeland and in foreign countries.

AN AGREEMENT REACHED TO FUND ITALIAN WAR DEBT

Italy is Given 62 Years in Which to Pay an Obligation of Approximately $2,042,000,000—Annual Payments Are to Start at $5,000,000and Advance to $80,000,000—No Interest is to Be Exacted For the First Five Years—Thereafter Interest Will Be Increased During Ten Year Periods.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—Funding of Italy's war debt to the United States has been accomplished.

An accord was reached today on terms which the American debt commission held to the maximum burden that should be imposed on the Italian people. It was accepted by the Italian debt commission as "very generous" treatment of the funding problem.

Italy was given 62 years, the same as the other nations which have completed similar negotiations, in which to pay off an obligation calculated at $2,042,000,000. Interest charges, beginning at the end of five years, were fixed to graduate from one eighth of one per cent. to a maximum of two per cent. in the last seven years.

The annual payments were also arranged to increase gradually in accordance with what the American commission regarded as Italy's maximum capacity to pay. They start at $5,000,000 a year and advance to $80,000,000

With the announcement of these terms, it was disclosed that in making another foreign debt funding agreement ready for submission to congress, the American commission had tempered its policy of collection on the basis of capacity to pay with consideration for the future of the nation involved.

"This commission has made an exhaustive examination of Italy's resources and economic and fiscal position," the formal announcement asserted. "Italy is poor in natural resources, the visible balance of trade is adverse, food to support her rapidly increasing population; coal, oil, iron and copper have to be imported. Her future depends upon the development of her industry and the labor of her people.

"It is felt that the settlement lays as heavy a burden on the Italian people as we are justified in imposing and represents Italy's capacity to pay."

The Italian debt has been listed in treasury records as $1,647,863,797 in principa land $490,674,654 in accrued interest calculated at five per cent. The first concession, therefore, was a reduction of the back interest charge, which was computed in the agreement at four and one half per cent. From the date of the loans to December 15, 1922, the date of the British settlement and three per cent. from then to June 15 last, the date from which the present arrangement will be operative if aproved by congress and the Italian government.

It was in the interest charges of the future and in the division of annual amortization payments with provisional arrangements attached, however, that the American commissioners felt they made the greatest curtailment of a creditor's rights in consideration of Italy's financial condition.

No interest payment will be required during the first five years. Thereafter, the interest rate will be one-eighth of one per cent., for 10 years and then increase during successive ten year periods to one fourth of one per cent., one half of one per cent., three fourths of one per cent. and one per cent. and one per cent. and during the last seven years two per cent.

The settlement, the terms of which became public late today, provides for payments of approximately $5,000,000 annually for five years, $14,000,000 to $18,000,000 during the sixth to the fifteenth years inclusive; $20,000,000 to $26,000,000 durinr the sixteenth to the twenty fifth years inclusive; $31,000,000 to $38,000,000 during the 26th to the 35th years, inclusive; $43,000,000 to $52,000,000 during the 36th to 45th years inclusive; $56,000,000 to $67,000,000 during the 46th to the 55th years, inclusive, and $73,000,000 to $80,000,000 in the last seven years.

BLAZER JURY DISAGREED ACCUSED GIVEN LIBERTY

LITTLETON, Col., Nov. 13—(By the A. P.)—With the legal status of "murder for love" undetermined, Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer tonight stood free of the charge of murdering his 24-year-old daughter, Hazel, the "human husk."

Less than an hour after a jury failed to agree on a verdict, the legal stigma of "murderer" was removed when Judge Samuel Johnson granted a motion of dismissal by Prosecuting Attorney Joel E. Stone. The jury was out less than fourteen hours.

The defendant received the decision with comparative calm. "The jury should have acquitted me, but this last move in the equivalent of acquittal," he said.

"I do not wish to persecute any one," Stone said in making his motion for dismissal. "I don't believe this jury or any other one we might obtain could arrive at a verdict and, in fairness both to the defendant and the state, I move that all charges be dropped and the defendant be set free."

Mrs. Frances Bishop, daughter of the physician, was not in the court room when the jury was dismissed. "Oh, they should have acquitted him—they should have acquitted him," she told an Associated Press representative who carried the news to her in the corridor outside.

Addressing counsel in the presence of the accused man who was to be free in a few minutes, Judge Johnson said:

"It is an equivalent of acquittal in the eyes of the people, if not in the eyes of the law. In my mind, there has been raised a reasonable doubt as to the sanity of the defendant and I believe this man should be cleared at this time."

CHANCE FOR MEDIUMS TO WIN OFFER OF $500

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Although professional and amateur mediums have failed in two tests to prove they had established communication with his dead wife, Dr. J. Allen Gilbert of Portland, Ore., will continue his offer of $500 for a proven message.

In all 290 psychics were represented in the bundle of messages opened today at the offices of the Scientific American, which is co-operating in the test. None of them, however, contained the secret countersign agreed upon between Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert before her death and kept under sea since, in an envelope, triple sealed and then locked in a safety deposit vault.

It was opened today for the first time to compare the offerings of the mediums.

The countersign which Dr. Gilbert and his wife had devised was "the naming of three events and three dates; these to be the birth of Dr. Gilbert, the birth of Mrs. Gilbert, the birth of their daughter, Dorothea and the corresponding dates." The $500 offer is still open to any medium obtaining the correct dates through Mrs. Gilbert's "spirit."

The answers submitted varied from wrong dates, names, flowers, poetry, biblical quotations and other information. One answer received by telegram from Ithaca, N. Y., just before the envelope was opened, read: "We have the wildest dreams, the most perfect flower and, the largest number of birds in the month of May."

YALE DRAMATIC ASS'N TO PRODUCE "OUT OF LUCK"

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—Out of Luck," a play by Charles C. A. Cushing, Yale 1903, will be the production of the Yale Dramatic association on its Christmas trip and at the junior promenade in February, it was announced tonight. The play is a comedy dealing with the World war.

The itinerary of the Dramat's Christmas trip will include eight cities, Bridgeport, New York, Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Washington and Wilkesbarre will be visited.

Edgar M. Woolley will direct the play and will accompany the Dramat on the Christmas trip.

FARM IS RAISING A HABIT FORMING DRUG

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Discovery today of a twenty acre "farm" of hasheesh-cannibis indica, one of the deadliest of habit forming drugs, almost in the shadow of the Queens county court house, caused the police to believe that they had at last found the source of the drug which they previously thought was being smuggled from other countries on a large scale.

Frederick A. Wallis, correction commissioner of Brooklyn, and other officials are investigating to determine whether the hasheesh plants were being cultivated by drug peddlers or whether they sprang up by chance seeding. The field discovered today would produce tons of the drug annually, Commissioner Wallis estimated.

Medical experts, describing the evil effects of the drug, said after eight years addicts became permanently insane. They said it created a "chaos of nerve centers," making the users irresponsible and often dangerous.

Foreigners frequented the field, shopkeepers in the neighborhood told the investigators. These people bought paper bags from nearby stores and carried bagsful of the supposed medical weeds from the field, the shopkeepers said.

The "farm" was only two miles from the city penitentiary where many drug addicts are confined. The warden of the prison expressed the opinion that prisoners had been supplied with drugs obtained from the field and smuggled into the prison.

The hemp mills are located near the hasheesh field and the authorities will determine whether the seeds might have been among refuse dumped on the vacant lots. Steps were taken to have all the plants destroyed.

Andres Huerta, a Mexican sailor arrested Nov. 6 and subsequently sentenced to Blackwell's Island for possessing hasheesh, led Commissioner Wallis and other officials to the field. Stories that Hasheesh fields existed in various parts of the city, and were cultivated at night, followed the sailor's arrest, but the police doubted their veracity.

IVORYTON BOY HAS EIGHT LIVING GRAND PARENTS

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—Dennison Caswell Chapman, the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Chapman, of Ivoryton, claims a unique record in having eight living grandparents. They are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dennison, of Essex, the maternal grandparents; Mr. and Mrs. Luther Chapman, the paternal grandparents; Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Haskell, and Mrs. David Chapman, of Ivoryton, paternal great-grandparents, and Mrs. Henry Haskell, of Maine, paternal great, great grandparent.

KING TUT'S COFFIN FOUND SOLID GOLD

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(A. P.) — An agency dispatch from Luxor, Egypt, says that the inner, human-shaped coffin of Tut-Ankh-Amen has been found to be of solid gold, embossed with intricate artistic designs. It is said to be the largest piece of gold work discovered in the annals of archaeology.

Another important discovery was an ebony statuette of the Pharoah ornamented with gold.

TWO SPANISH CAMPS DESTROYED BY RIFFIANS

AT SPANISH HEDQUARTERS, TETUAN, Spanish Morocco, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—The Riffians today raided and destroyed two Spanish camps at Beni Salt, near Tetuan. The number of casualties is unknown.

General Primo de Rivera, head of the Spanish military directorate, interviewed today said that Spain would be satisfied now with nothing less than the Riffian chiftain's total submission.

Tilson Favors Non-Partisan Tax Bill

Republican Floor Leader to Assure Early Passage of the Measure—To Submit Bill in House Dec. 14.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—United support by house leaders of the non-partisan tax bill now being framed by the ways and means committee will be sought by Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the new republican floor leader, to assure early passage of the measure by that chamber.

If the committee, as expected, makes a unanimous report, Mr. Tilson said today he would consult with Representative Garrett of Tennessee, the democratic leader, on a program for house consideration of the measure which would assure action before Christmas.

Mr. Tilson has tentatively fixed December 14, a week after congress convenes, as the date for taking up the bill in the house. No decision has been reached on the advisability of bringing it up under a rule restricting amendments.

Sub-committees of the ways and means committee worked today on details of general provisions already agreed upon by the full committee. The new inheritance tax rates were not completed, though a tentative decision was reached to make no changes in present rates on estates amounting to $450,000 or less.

The present rate on a net estate of $450,000 is six per cent., a $50,000 exemption is allowed, the rates beginning at one per cent., when that figure is passed. The committee has voted to reduce the maximum rate from 40 to 20 per cent., to apply on inheritance in excess of $10,000,000. The Brackets to take the rates between six per cent on $450,000 and the maximum remain to be worked out.

Considerable difficulty has been encountered in efforts to draft a provision exempting the spoken drama and opera from the admission levy of 10 per cent and Representative Rainey, democrat, Illinois, who has undertaken this task, expressed doubt today that a provision acceptable to all could be drawn. Chairman Green held the same view.

The sub-committee will continue work tomorrow, and another meeting of the whole committee will not be held until next Tuesday, Chairman Green announced. He expects final action by the committee next week.

DEFENSE OF AGRICULTURAL DEPT'S CROP REPORTING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(A. P.)—A general defense of the agriculture department's crop reporting system, and suggestions for some changes in present practices connected with it, have been made by Secretary Jardine in a letter to Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania.

The letter, made public tonight by the department, dealt at length with the cotton reports which have brought numerous complaints from southern members of congress. With respect to other crop forecasts, he said there was some question as to the advisibility of the government making quantitative interpretations of conditions as far in advance of harvest as is now done. Some of the early forecasts dealing with grain, potatoes and fruit crops, he added, probably will be omitted next year.

Asserting that the interests of the cotton growers demanded that the government continue to report the condition and probable yield of that crop, the letter pointed out that if the government withdrew from the field, the crop reporting would be done by private interests alone. The present accuracy of these private estimates, the secretary said, is probably improved by the government's issuance of official estimates.

He called attention that there had been an average difference of only 13 per cent. between the department's July forecasts and the final ginning reports during the last nine years and that in three of these years, the difference was less than 8 per cent. The widest difference that has ever existed, he said, was 27 per cent. in 1918.

WESLEYAN TO HAVE SERIES OF LECTURES ON ART

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 12—It was announced at Wesleyan university tonight that a series of lectures on art would be given at the college during the next three months. Olin Dows, grandson of the late Stephen H. Olin and a student at the Yale art school, will give seven lectures on Tuesday evenings beginning November 17. On Sunday, December, George W. Davison, of New York, will lecture on "the beginning of the art of etching."

Submarine Disaster In English Channel

It is Feared That Sixty Men Have Perished—M-1 Missing Since She Dived Early Yesterday Morning.

DEVONPORT, England, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Sixty lives, officers and men it is feared have been lost. By the disaster to the submarine M-1, which dived in the waters of the English channel off Start Point early this morning, and has not been seen since. A day-long search proved unsuccessful, and tonight Admiral Sir Henry Francis Oliver, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, signalled the following message:—

"The commander-in-chief very much regrets to inform the Atlantic fleet that it is feared the Submarine M-1 has been lost with all hands during exercise in the channel today."

A court of inquiry will be held tomorrow. The large flotilla, provided with necessary apparatus, failed to locate the exact spot where the vessel is lying. But it is in deep water, where divers' operations are impracticable. The search vessels were recalled tonight, and although they are under orders to proceed to sea again at any moment, no hope remains.

When the submarine flotilla left Plymouth this morning for the channel a strong wind and boisterous seas prevailed, but there was nothing to suggest an element of risk in carrying out tactical exercises.

Known as a submarine monitor because it was the first underseas craft to carry a big gun, the M type submarine gathered fame toward the end of the war, but the M-1 did not participate, and three ships of this type operate in the sea operations of that have been in reserve since August.

Much of the M-1 design is credited to the late Admiral Lord Fisher, "first sea lord," who in 1915 proposed to man the submarines with big guns. By the time the M-1 was completed in 1918 it was considered that her employment might be disadvantageous, because to demonstrate that the submarine monitor was practicable might induce Germany to adopt the idea. British naval authorities consider this policy as having been eminently sound.

JURY SELECTED FOR MACRI MURDER TRIAL

LITCHFIELD, Conn., Nov. 12.—(AP)—With the jury for the re-trial of Olympia Macri in the Litchfield county superior court completed at noon today, State's Attorney Arneu A. Alling and his assistants made final preparations this afternoon before beginning the presentation of the case against the girl tomorrow morning.

Superior Court Interpreter P. George Nicolari, Attorney Rocco Ricardi and Deputy Sheriff Albert Johnson, all of New Haven, arrived here shortly after noon. Clarence B. Barton, assistant state's attorney and Frank E. Munn, New Hartford attorney associated with the prosecution in the case, have been here with Mr. Alling since the retrial opened a week ago Tuesday.

Joseph Koletsky, counsel for the defense, spent considerable time with Miss Macri. She is glad she said, that that the slow progress made in selecting the jury had at last accomplished its purpose, but she has not become reconciled to the fact that the state would open its case on Friday the thirteenth.

The court room was only partially filled when Edwin O. Wright, 50, Goshen farmer, qualified as the twelfth juror. He was accepted at 12:04 p. m., the fourteenth venireman examined today and the 142 examined in the seven and one half days of jury selection. Six and a half days were required to get the first jury in the trial in New Haven last spring.

NO MATERIAL UNEMPLOYMENT ANYWHERE IN THE COUNTRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Industrial conditions at the end of October were such that no material unemployment existed anywhere in the country, the United States employment service reported today, and the outlook showed little danger of any appearing.

Steel manufacturing and coal mining companies were reported to be expanding their labor forces, while, the cotton crop in southern states and the building industry all over the nation were mentioned as other causes for the full employment.

The textile industry, less active early in the year, was found to be on the upgrade, while the tremendous volume of freight traffic not only kept railroad forces at high levels, but also indicated that inactivity in miscellaneous industry was demanding nearly all the labor available.

BONDING COMPANIES ARE LIABLE FOR GILPATRIC'S DEFAULT IN CUTLER ESTATE

HARTFORD, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Judicial notice of the withdrawal from the First National bank, of Putnam, by G. Harold Gilpatric, former state treasurer, of the sum of $2,078, belonging to the estate of Joseph W. Cutler, "to purchase Liberty bonds which, according to the testimony were afterwards turned over to the state of Connecticut," was taken today by Judge Ernest C. Simpson, of the superior court in handing down a decision in which it is found that both the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company and the Royal Indemnity company, are liable under their bonds for Gilpatric's conduct of the estate for certain portions of the estate, the total of which is $34,765.06.

The decision of Judge Simpson gives judgment for the plaintiff, the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company, trustee of the estate of Annie G. Cutler, to recover of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company the sum of $21,657.56 with interest from October 27, 1924 and to recover from the Royal Indemnity company the sum of $13,107.50 with interest from the same date.

The Royal Indemnity company bonded Gilpatric as executor under the will of the late Joseph W. Cutler and the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company bonded him as trustee under the will. A disputed question was whether Gilpatric ever qualified as trustee under the will and had filed his final account as executor. If he had done both, the entire liability would fall upon the U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty company, it was claimed.

The decision in finding joint liability as between the two bonding companies holds that Gilpatric did not complete his executorship in 1921 as claimed by the Royal company and did not qualify as trustee. The Royal company claimed the U. S. company should be held liable for the entire deficit, and the United States company claimed that it was liable for only $7,000.

Judge Simpson, in what Lawrence A. Howard, counsel for the United States company, said tonight was "an extremely interesting and logical way of working it out," pro rated the expenditures from the estate, which were not capable of being traced to either the real estate fund or the personal estate fund, between the two bonding companies according to their "prima facie liability."

The court finds that the "prima facie" liability of the Royal Indemnity company was $36,267.50 and the "prima facie" liability of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company, was $48,401.84, making a total prima facie liability of $69,669.34. The amount which the court finds should be prorated between the two defendant companies according to the amount for which each is found to be "prima facie" liable, is $34,904.28. Subtracting this sum from the total liability of the two companies, Judge Simpson arrived at the deficit of $34,765.06, which is to be shared by the companies as previously indicated.

STORMY SESSION OF DEM. STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE

John Cornell of Bridgeport Characterized the Meeting as a "Disgrace to the Party"—A Woman Member Declared That "If This is What We Women Have Stepped Into, the Sooner We Step Out the Better"—Mayor Fitzgerald of New Haven and Thomas J. Spellacy of Hartford Denied Accusations of Dr. E. G. Dolan of Manchester—Positions of National Committeeman and State Chairman Will Be Acted Upon at a Meeting to Be Held December 10..

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Charges and counter charges, stories of campaign checks, assertions and denials turned the meeting of the democratic state central committee here today into a stormy session that lasted more than three hours.

The meeting had been called to elect a successor to National Committeeman Homer S. Cummings, who has retired after a quarter of a century of service as a member of the national committee and to choose a new chairman of the state committee to succeed Edward A. Yeomans, who will become a superior court judge next February.

This program was not completed, but upon motion of John Cornell, of Bridgeport, a committee was named to bring in nominations for the positions of national committeeman and state chairman at a meeting of the state central committee to be held December 10.

PINCHOT'S INVESTIGATION OF ANTHRACITE SITUATION

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Discussion of the anthracite situation with Major W. W. Inglis, chairman of the operators wage negotiating committee, and a delegation of business men from the coal region today occupied Governor Pinchot in his personal investigation of the suspension of the anthracite operations in effect since September 1.

From Major Inglis the governor sought additional information as to the operators' side by the controversy to supplement what he obtained yesterday in a conference at Philadelphia with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. After the meeting both the governor and Major Inglis declined to discuss the matter taken up between them.

The business men's delegation represented the Panther Creek Valley Business Men's association and particularly the communities of Lansford, Mauch Chunk, Nesquehoning, Summit Hill, Coaldale and Tamaqua. They appealed to the governor to use his influence in bringing about a resumption of wage conferences between the hard coal operators and miners. Mr. Pinchot told them he would take their request under "careful consideration" but declined to go further in expressing his attitude.

At the conclusion of his conference with Major Inglis, the governor said the meeting had been "satisfactory" but that under an agreement between them he could not enter into a discussion as to what had taken place.

The governor plans to leave tomorrow for his home in Milford and tonight said that he had no other plans in mind for future meetings with the leaders of the operators and miners.

SHIPPING BOARD SELLS PAN-AMERICAN LINE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—The Pan-American Steamship line, running from New York to the east coast of South America and regarded as one of the most valuable services operated under the fleet corporation, was sold by the shipping board today to the Munson Steamship line of New York, its present operator, for $4,104,-

The price is equivalent to $1,026,000 for each of the four vessels concerned, the Pan-America, Southern Cross, Western World and American Legion. The sale was awarded only after Moore and McCormack of New York, who had offered $4,101,000 had withdrawn their bid and protested against the procedure at an open session of the board called to receive any further offers either company might make.

All members of the board except Rear Admiral W. S. Benson retired, who objected to sale of the line with a guarantee of service for only five years voted to accept the Munson bid. The contract of sale, carrying the customary five year maintenance guarantee, was immediately drawn up, the board agreeing to expend up to $200,000 for repairs.

GLORIA SWANSON PLACED IN CONTEMPT OF COURT

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—The order placing Gloria Swanson in contempt of court for ignoring a summons as a witness today was upheld by the supreme court and at the same time it was learned that the process server had brought suit for $25,000 damages against her because she slapped him, he alleged.

The supreme court ruling makes Miss Swanson liable to a $250 fine. The contempt charge grew out of her failure to appear as a witness in the separation suit of Janet Beecher and Lt. Richard Hoffman. Instead of coming to court Miss Swanson sailed for Europe. The court then directed she be arrested and held in Ludlow street jail until the fine of $250 was paid.

On her return to the United States recently her attorney sought to have the contempt order vacated on the ground she had not been served with a subpoena. Last night she was served with papers in the damage action brought by S. Alexander Cohen a process server, who asserted that he had not only served the subpoena but had been slapped for his pains.

ROBBERY AT THE ELM TREE INN, FARMINGTON

FARMINGTON, Conn., Nov. 12—(AP)—A robery took place in the Elm Tree Inn here during last night upon which the state police are at work and regarding which Mr. Fitzgerald, the manager, will say nothing. Some mystery is attached to the incident as while the state officers are busy on it, it was stated at the inn that he safe was not molested, the cash register in a book store connected with the inn was not touched and no information was given as to just what was stolen or what might have happened in the place.

SOCIALISTS IN FRANCE DIRECT FINANCIAL BILL

PARIS, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—The socialists won their fight in the finance committee of the chamber today for a moratorium on short term bonds, a capital levy and the state sharing in the profits of industry and commerce for the purpose of solving the financial problems of France.

Premier Painleve, under threats that the coalition which supported his government and that of M. Herriot would be broken, accepted the 'main points of the socialist programme, saying in a spirit of conciliation: "I make these concessions to the cartel."

M. Painleve asked the committee to act promptly so that parliament would be able to pass on the measures at the earliest date, and the committee agreed on the amended bills, which will come before the chamber Monday. The fight will then be renewed between the cartel and the opposition, reinforced by the dissenting members of the radical and radical left parties.

The members of the coalition expressed great confidence in the outcome, though a poll taken by the parliamentary reporters this evening showed only 350 votes for a capital levy, the sharing of commercial profits by the state and a forced conversion of bonds.

There are 13 dissenting members of the radical left, out of 40, while M. Franklin-Bouillon, the radical leader, and several of his radical friends will fight for amendments to the scheme. The partisans of the socialist plan will make considerable capital out of their interpretation that it avoids the necessity of further inflation.

M. Painleve asks for 1,500,000,000 francs in new advances from the banks of France, instead of 2,500,000,000, and explains that this will involve no increase in the circulation. The premier had previously explained that increased circulation was needed only to pay bonds due December 8, amounting to 3,500,000,000 francs.

The bills provide that the holders of these bonds will get no cash; they can take either national defense bonds at three, six or twelve months, of longer term bonds, as they prefer. All the holders of government bonds must either pay a capital levy on them at once or accept in their place other bonds at lower rates of interest.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION OF NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 12—(A. P.)—A permanent organization to be known as the New England conference, was formed here tonight at a meeting of several hundred representatives of agricultural, industrial, and commercial interests of the six New England states. John S. Lawrence, of Boston, was named temporary chairman of the conference, and Chester I. Campbell, of Boston, secretary-treasurer.

The objects of the organization were set forth as follows:

"To stimulate concrete expression as to matters vital to the welfare of New England among organizations participating in its membership; United action among the various states; the promotion of New England agriculture, commerce, industry, transportation, public utilities and other matters of common concern."

The permanent conference was organized formally when the delegates adopted the report of a committee on organization consisting of one representative from each state, of which George A. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., was chairman. In its report the committee said:

"Because of their geographical location, their physical characteristics, their traditions and history, the six New England states have in common many problems and interests. The governors of the New England states have indicated their belief that the time has come for recognizing, definitely, publicly and effectively, the existence of certain common problems and interests, and for the establishment of closer relations between the organization in New England representative of the major economic interests of the New England states.

"We fully share the view brought to our attention by the new England governors and welcome the opportunity to take constructive action in response to their suggestion."

DAMAGES OF $1,402 AWARDED HALL BROS., WALLINGFORD

WATERBURY, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—Hall Brothers, of Wallingford, were awarded damages of $1,402.76 by a jury in superior court this afternoon, this being the full amount sought from Leon L. Willner, of Woodbury. Willner bought large shipments of baby chicks from Hall Brothers and the birds died soon after arrival. Willner refused to pay for the chicks, claiming they were diseased when shipped. The plaintiff maintained their death was due to negligence by Willner. One of the questions which the jury had to decide was whether or not hens could communicate germs to chicks through the eggs.
